Satellite Complex Confirmed

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Construction of an approximately $4 million transmitting and receiving satellite communications complex likely will be under way at Lake Cowichan by late summer.

The station will have a 97-foot-high semi-steerable antenna and a 2,000-square-foot building to house the equipment and operators, a Telesat Canada official said here today.

It will be the main station in B.C., and serve as the western anchor of a national network of up to 35 ground stations, most of them small and unmanned.

One or two remote substations will be built in central or northern B.C., depending on the proposals of tenders for the national contract to be opened Jan. 5. Remote stations are expected to cost about $200,000.

DOZEN ON STAFF

Roughly one-third of Telesat Canada's $90 million program will go into the ground facilities, which are to have a 60 per cent Canadian construction and equipment content.

The Lake Cowichan complex will be manned on a round-the-clock basis by a staff of about a dozen operators. It will provide two-way transmission to other Canadian points in varying configurations, such as two telecasts and up to 80,000 telephone and broadband messages simultaneously.

Besides tranmissions, it will have a limited tracking capacity so it can serve as a partial back-up to the network's main control station near Toronto.

Located alongside the existing Canadian Overseas Telecommunications Corporation installation in Lake Cowichan, it also will provide an interconnection with the International Network of Communications Satellites.

IN TIME FOR LAUNCH

It will be completed in time for the late 1972 launch of Anik 1, the $31 million satellite to be built for Telesat by the Hughes Aircraft Corporation of California with at least 20 per cent content.

The communications department is about to sign a contract with NASA to launch in the mid-1970s an experimental satellite to be built by the federal communications research centre near here.

It will be a high-powered prototype for the second Anik generation of satellites, operating on a super high-frequency range of 12 million cycles per second, which offers the promise of sending TV signals to simpler ground stations costing only about $10,000 for unmanned remotes.

GROUNDED SHIP lays along a seawall in Manila Bay after being forced aground by Typhoon Patsy today. At least 30 persons were killed, hundreds more were injured and thousands were flooded out of their homes in the Filipino capital of 3,000,000 citizens. Screaming winds as high as 137 miles per hour were recorded in the blow which was accompanied by continuing rain. (AP Wirephoto)

AID SLOW FOR TIDAL WAVE SURVIVORS

Death Estimates Soar

By HOWARD WHITTEN

DACCA (Reuter) — Six days after a tidal wave which local reports say may have killed two million people in East Pakistan, blankets today were stripped from prisoners to warm survivors facing death from exposure, hunger, thirst and disease.

Officials in the devastated islands in the Bay of Bengal, still covered in ankle-deep mud and debris, started going through jails gathering up blankets as an urgent relief measure.

Word of the action by harassed officials came here amid unofficial estimates of a final death toll from last Friday's cyclone and tidal wave of around two million, ninety per cent of the whole population of the area.

The officials' desperate attempt to at least keep survivors warm pointed up the major problem of getting aid to the isolated low-lying disaster zone in the Ganges Estuary in East Pakistan.

SUPPLIES PILING UP

Relief supplies from abroad were steadily piling up in Dacca but there was only one helicopter in East Pakistan available to transfer them.

News reports here now predict astronomical death tolls. The English-language daily Dawn forecast 1.5 million, the Bengali daily Songgram had a figure of two million.

Two leading Bengali newspaper chiefs said they were convinced a concentrated effort was being made to inflate the figures so the government will postpone elections due in December. Campaigning has been muted but not halted by the disaster.

Relief Commissioner A. M. Anisuzzaman told a news conference Wednesday that many thousands of survivors are still in grave danger because they have not received help. He said there are still "very inaccessible places with which we have not yet had contact."

Anisuzzaman said the official death toll now stands at 39,800, with 3,136 missing, but this "may shoot up like

'ALWAYS FREE' MISSES BY $1,100

Mayor Courtney Haddock got approval from council's finance committee today for a $1,100 coat of arms plaque to be placed over the mayor's chair in the council chamber.

The committee was shown a cardboard dummy of the plaque measuring about three feet in height.

"Always free," came the reply.

"It's going to cost $1,100," said Christie. "What the hell do you mean, its free?"

Committee decided to recommend that council include the item in the 1971 budget.

Haddock did not attend the committee meeting but city manager Dennis Young said "the mayor is very anxious" to have the plaque of the city's coat of arms placed on the wall between two flags.

Jordanian Troops, Guerrillas Battle

By United Press International

Palestinian guerrillas and Jordanian army troops battled for 13 hours in Amman today with mortars, machine guns and grenades before an uneasy peace was restored at nightfall. The guerrillas said they also shelled an Israeli border settlement with mortars for 90 minutes.

Jordan's tough new prime minister, Wasfi Tel, met face to face later with the Palestinian guerrilla leaders following the heaviest fighting since the September civil war. Arab truce officials arranged the meeting to prevent another outbreak that could lead to another civil war.

It was the first time Tel and Palestinian chiefs had met in direct talks. The guerrillas have attacked him for his loyalty to King Hussein, and Palestinian Al Fatah chief Yasser Arafat was reported to have said in an African interview he would not return home as long as Tel is premier.

Loffmark Hopeful On Hospital Land

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark may persuade the Sisters of St. Ann to sell about two acres of their land alongside St. Joseph's Hospital.

But if he does, it will have to be for a proven need, likely a 150-bed unit for extended care or chronic patients.

Sister Kathleen Moroney, the order's provincial superior, reiterated today the sisters' stand taken a week ago: they will not sell all their 7.1 acres alongside the hospital, and their high school will continue.

At the same time she repeated the sisters' willingness to negotiate on part of the land if there is a proven need for it to expand the hospital, which they founded and now are in the process of turning over to a public society.

Loffmark said today he is "very optimistic" that the sale of land by the sisters can be "revived," but declined to disclose what new terms may be involved.

He said he had just sent a letter to the solicitor for the sisters and that it was written following conversations with the solicitor.

"I've never felt more optimistic than now . . ." he said.

Ottawa 'Cool' To Joint Brief On Harbor Future

Lack of Details Hit By Federal Officials

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — It probably will be several months before Victoria and Esquimalt learn whether their harbor commission ship will come in.

A joint brief by the two councils to the department of transport — virtually repeating one presented last summer by a special delegation sent here — is under lukewarm study, it was indicated today.

The Victoria-Esquimalt briefs have been criticized here as being "too thin and insufficiently detailed" with a particularly large gap left in the presentation because the tangled problem of the Ogden Point grain elevator was not dealt with.

The department currently is engaged in a total review of the National Harbors Board to produce a new policy on harbor jurisdiction and apparently is not deeply impressed with the Victoria-Esquimalt bid for separate and immediate consideration.

There also is a hint that their bid may be considered immature as well as premature.

'Wait for New Guidelines'

"Their request is being considered now but it will likely be suggested to the city that they await the formulation of new national guidelines," a senior DOT official told the Times.

"It will only be a matter of months, not years."

The new policy criteria for transferring some harbor jurisdictions to local commissions are expected early in the new year but, the official indicated, it won't necessarily mean that the Victoria-Esquimalt bid will be granted automatically.

"We are considering numerous suggestions from various cities on what the guidelines should be but once the criteria are set up, each request for a commission will have to be considered on its own merits," he said.

The briefs stressed that lumber shipments through the outer wharves have doubled in the past decade and could be doubled again to about 400 million board feet within three years if a vigorous harbor promotion was undertaken by a local commission.

It added that it would be easy to expand storage area and facilities to stockpile 1 billion board feet to help lumber shipments and further initiatives should be able to add a pulp and paper shipping capacity.

These developments could augment current revenues of about $450,000 realized by the CNR from the lumber trade if a local harbor commission took over but, apparently, the brief makes no mention of taking on the grain elevator operation which currently loses more than $300,000 a year.

"It can't be a very realistic brief if it implies that it should take the profitable operation away from the CNR and leave the losing one in the railway's hands," one critic observed.

"Yet this whole question,

Island A-Power In Works?

B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum was host at a luncheon meeting in Victoria today which included Dr. Lorne Gray, president of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., and representatives from the Duncan - Cowichan Bay area.

The combination led Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife to speculate this morning that Hydro may be contemplating some move on a suggested nuclear generator on Cowichan Bay.

Quaife said he was "in the dark" on the purpose of the luncheon but hoped Hydro would be announcing something about the proposed $150 million nuclear generator for lower Vancouver Island which was in the news earlier this year.

The meeting was not open to reporters and Shrum could not be reached for comment.

MEETS LOCALS

One source suggested the meeting was called because Gray was passing through Vancouver en route home from Australia and Shrum saw it as an opportunity for him to meet local officials.

Committee Backs Tax Review Board

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons justice committee today approved a bill to create a tax review board.

An amendment by Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) requires that the government must go to parliament to remove any board member "for cause." The bill presented to the committee would have allowed the cabinet alone to make the removal.

The review board would replace the present tax appeal board. Proceedings before the review board would be less formal than those required now before the appeal board, which conducts itself under the rules set for courts.

Taxpayers would appear before the review board without legal counsel. Most cases before the appeal board are argued by counsel.

The bill now goes back to the Commons for final consideration.

Blunt Davis Talk Scolds Americans

By STEPHEN SCOTT

NEW YORK (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis bluntly told Americans Wednesday:

"We (Canada) would have preferred to have a smaller neighbor with a smaller appetite for raw materials and a smaller output of industrial and other pollutants along and across our international boundary line."

Davis was making a call at a Canadian-American symposium for the United States to keep its pollution on its own side of the border.

He called for recycling of pollutants and asked when the U.S. is going to catch up with Canadian anti-pollution programs.

Davis's tough talk was made at the 12th annual seminar on Canadian-American relations sponsored by the University of Windsor, Ont., and Columbia University here.

In other talks:

—Allistair Gillespie, parliamentary secretary to the president of the Canadian Treasury Board, said it is a "shocking fact of life" that 95 per cent of all text books used in Canada are or shortly will be published by firms controlled by non-Canadians.

—David Lewis, deputy leader of the New Democratic Party, said every aspect of Canadian life—economic, cultural and recreational—is invaded by foreign domination.

'WE NEED FACTS ON GOVERNMENT DECISIONS'

Stanfield Seeks Quebec Terrorism Probe

TORONTO (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield called Wednesday night for an independent commission of inquiry headed by a justice of the Supreme Court of Canada to investigate Quebec terrorism and federal promulgation of the War Measures Act.

Mr. Stanfield, speaking to the Lawyers' Club at Osgoode Hall, said the commission's report should be made public to make Canadians aware of the facts before any permanent legislation is introduced to deal with political terrorism by the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

"We owe it to ourselves as Canadians to get the facts on the extent of the terrorism and the effectiveness of the measures that have been taken against it," he said.

"We need facts on the reasons for the decisions made by the government and on the treatment of those who have been detained."

Mr. Stanfield said his party will vote for passage of the proposed Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970, to replace regulations now in effect under the War Measures Act.

Although he was "by no means happy" with the proposed legislation, he would support it because it is temporary and would avoid some of the harsher provisions of the War Measures Act with "its truly awesome powers."

But he urged calm deliberation before approving permanent legislation that would impinge on the rights of individuals.

"It is vital to know what the pattern is before we make up our minds as to the future between social order and traditional liberty that defies our political democracy."

The Opposition leader said the rule of law has been "temporarily and partially suspended."

"Before we decide definitely what we should do in the present and in the future, I think we have to be satisfied in our minds to what extent that suspension was justified because if we don't we are liable to make hasty and bad decisions today and tomorrow on what may be a questionable precedent."

Mr. Stanfield said he was worried about the apparent lack of knowledge and preparation by police even though the terrorists had been active for seven years.

He said the police in Quebec had apprehended a few hundred people and most of them subsequently had been released with no charges being laid.

"Either the police work was woefully inadequate, even under the huge powers the authorities had at their disposal under the Act, or the power and influence of the FLQ at the time had been considerably exaggerated.

"And so, the basic question remains: Was the imposition of the War Measures Act necessary?

"I admit at once that I do not have the answer. What worries me is that I am not sure that the government has one either."

Shadow Mischief

Moonlighting Policy Asked From Ottawa

Victoria Labor Council will write Defence Minister Donald Macdonald asking for clarification on the government's policy toward Canadian Forces personnel holding down an extra job.

The move came at a Labor Council meeting Wednesday as a result of comments made Saturday by Rear-Admiral Richard Leir who said there is nothing wrong with servicemen moonlighting to earn extra income.

Most of the union delegates did not support Leir's remarks, but there was some criticism of moonlighting by members of local trade unions.

"I don't see where we should come out against the servicemen before we clean up our unions," said Art Berry of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

Boilermakers business agent Neil Hindle did not agree. He said organized labor is quite explicit in opposing moonlighting, even if it is condoned by certain individuals.

"A rearadmiral has made a statement which citizens in this town have interpreted as government policy." Hindle said. "So we should ask the government for clarification."

"I think Rear-Admiral Leir will have to make a retraction of his remarks."

Copies of the letter to the defence minister will be sent to Prime Minister Trudeau, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and New Democratic Party leader Tom Douglas.

The Times contacted the admiral's office today but the admiral had no statement to make at this time.

at Cowichan Bay produced an outcry last spring.

Ecologists argued the plant's cooling system would involve discharging huge volumes of hot water into the bay, raising the bay's water temperature and harming marine life. There was also concern over the possibility of pollution from radioactive material.

COOL TO IDEA

Premier Bennett in statements last June indicated a coolness to the idea of nuclear generator on Vancouver Island and a concern for the pollution threat it might pose.

He said the Hydro proposal for a generating station with nuclear power near Duncan hadn't been abandoned but it had some great drawbacks, to be avoided if possible.

Last spring the cabinet instructed the B.C. Energy Board to determine the best use of public and private energy sources in the province up to 1985 but the terms of reference for the study made no mention of nuclear power.

Since then Bennett has described his long-range view of Vancouver Island as a pollution-free haven, free of heavy industrial development.

. . . HOSPITAL

land has waxed for more than a year because of disputes involving future road patterns, land use, title and lease terms.

The arguments have involved the provincial government and the city of Victoria, but mostly the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society (the group designated to take over the hospital) and the Capital region's hospital board, charged with regional hospital planning.

Beyond offering their land for sale at its assessed value a year ago for hospital expansion, the Sisters had remained out of the arguments until withdrawing the offer last week.

They said at that time the experts who had earlier advised them the land was essential for the hospital's development now are saying it isn't.

Another factor in their decision was continuing pressure to settle the future of St. Ann's high school.

Parents Oppose Stop-Gap Centre

The Oak Bay Recreation Commission Wednesday abandoned its proposal for a $200,000 stop-gap sports centre at Henderson Park and instead urged council to build a full-scale recreation complex to serve all age groups in Oak Bay.

The decision was reached after a group of citizens, most of them parents of small children, attended the commission's regular meeting to oppose the building of a minicentre.

One person said, "It's been six years since the referendum for a recreation centre was turned down and in that time the number of young people who have moved into Oak Bay is enormous."

Another said, "At this time we need a recreation centre, period . . . and we should go to the taxpayers for the whole lot."

Council had proposed building a centre, containing an ice rink, swumming pool, meeting rooms and other facilities, using the proceeds of the sale of the Victoria Riding Academy site —minimum of $1.3 million to defray capital costs.

Failure of a competition designed to sell the property has dictated the postponement of such a complex.

The group attending Wednesday's meeting insisted that building an interim centre that would not fit into the major complex would be a waste of money.

GROUP PRAISED

Council delegate Ald. Brian Smith warned: "If you put it to the electorate as an expensive package, it may go down and you'll be put back several years." He suggested that time should be given to see if the riding academy could be sold in the near future.

Chairman Krull Symones commended the group for appearing at the meeting after hearing about proposed plans for the substitute centre at Henderson Park.

"I hope that you will remain an action group and keep in touch with us."

Smith will present the commission's findings at Monday's council meeting.

Many of those attending Wednesday's meeting plan to attend to discuss what steps might be taken regarding recreation facilities in the municipality.

anything." The government announced several days ago an official figure of 55,000 dead and other unofficial estimates range from 300,000 to 650,000.

RELIEF WORK LAGGING

The relief operation is lagging badly because of the absence of Pakistani Air Force helicopters.

The Pakistani Air Force has some helicopters, but most are in West Pakistan and would have to cross 1,000 miles of India. During the news conference Anisuzzaman refused to answer questions about the failure of the military to provide more aircraft.

Other relief officials said there had been a delay in the arrival of U.S. helicopters because the Pakistani government tried to specify that its pilots fly them. When the United States refused, the Pakistanis backed down.

Two American helicopters were due today from Nepal. Four others expected tonight will not be ready to fly again before Saturday. Britain also is sending two helicopters.

Otherwise, aircraft now available consists of a military C-130 Hercules freighter, which was to start drops today; one military helicopter which had to be grounded for maintenance after 14 hours aloft; one short-takeoff-and-landing plane, and the only seaplane in East Pakistan.

AREAS STILL FLOODED

The air is the only feasible avenue for delivery of supplies to many of the stricken areas of the Bay of Bengal coast and the islands at the mouth of the Ganges River because all normal transport facilities were swept away by the winds and waves. Helicopters are particularly needed because many sections are still flooded, and drops from fixed-wing planes probably would miss the dry spots and be lost in the water.

Thirteen shallow army boats are also being sent by Britain from Singapore. Each will be able to take 15 passengers.

Three West German planes landed 39½ tons of supplies Wednesday, while two Iranian air freighters brought tents, blankets and medical supplies. A medical team arrived from Kuwait.

Reports from the area still speak of bodies and carcasses strewn all over the place, bloated after days in the water and tropical heat and giving off a stench.

The rotting bodies and carcasses have endangered water supplies and raised the spectre of a widescale outbreak of such diseases as cholera and typhoid.

A number of cholera cases were reported earlier this week on Hatia, one of the islands worst hit by the tidal wave. Unconfirmed reports say cholera has also broken out on three other islands.

. . . HARBOR

which has to be dealt with, has not even been mentioned and there's more than one person here wondering how such an unbusinesslike brief could be submitted."

Another criticism expressed was the apparent assumption that the government would hand over free to a civic commission assets which, based on capitalization of revenue potential, would be worth at least $15 million.

The harbor commission promoters also appear to have created an additional problem for themselves by a cavalier treatment of local MPs.

In asking for help to present the first brief, delivered by former Esquimalt Reeve Ray Bryant and City Solicitor T. P. O'Grady, both David Groos (L—Victoria) and David Anderson (L—Esquimalt-Saanich) were told to make appointments but stay out of the meetings themselves.

"Well that hardly seemed hospitable but we did so", Anderson commented recently. "But even worse, neither we nor the ratepayers who paid for that presentation, have been told what happened at those meetings with federal officials."

He said he was disturbed by the unfolding indications that the drive for a harbor commission is intended more to assist commercial shipping interests than give local control of the waterfront so that beautification, citizen and tourist interests could be promoted.

Anderson said he was willing to be a go-between with the department for the civic authorities but personally could not support any commission proposal which was not firmly tied in with the area's regional planning. Groos, attending a NATO Conference in Europe, was not available for comment.

Crash Victim Named

RCMP have released the name of a North Saanich woman killed Wednesday morning in a Sidney crash.

She was Mrs. Phyllis Margaret Kask, 10185 West Saanich Road. Driver of the other car was Mrs. Lacone Landie, 3950 Carey Road.

PLANNERS TO STUDY BICYCLE PATH SYSTEM

The planning department of the Capital Regional District will study a report by the Youth Commission of Oak Bay recommending bicycle paths in the area.

This was agreed to Wednesday by the planning committee of the district.

Mayor Frances Elford told committee members she hopes consideration will be given "with ultimate approval" to the recommendations.

The youth commission report recommended a network of bicycle paths linking downtown Victoria with the university, out Lochside Drive to Swartz Bay and out Interurban Road with links to Thetis Lake Park and Elk Lake.

It said many Victoria roads are hazardous to bicyclists who are "plagued by thieves and insulted by bullying motorists. It is not uncommon for cyclists to be forced off the road or into ditches by disrespectful motorists."

According to an American agency, there should be nearly 100 miles of bicycle paths on southern Vancouver Island but all that is offered is "a host of No Bicycling signs."

KEYNES METHODS FINISHED

'Wage, Price Controls Needed'

By ALFRED FRIENDLY

LONDON (WP) — Control over the economy by the Keynesian methods of tax and money policies is over and done with, defeated by big unions and big corporations, American economist John Kenneth Galbraith told an important British audience Wednesday night.

Its replacement, or adjunct, must be a system of permanent wage and price controls, he said. Otherwise, there is no way to maintain high employment without intolerable inflation.

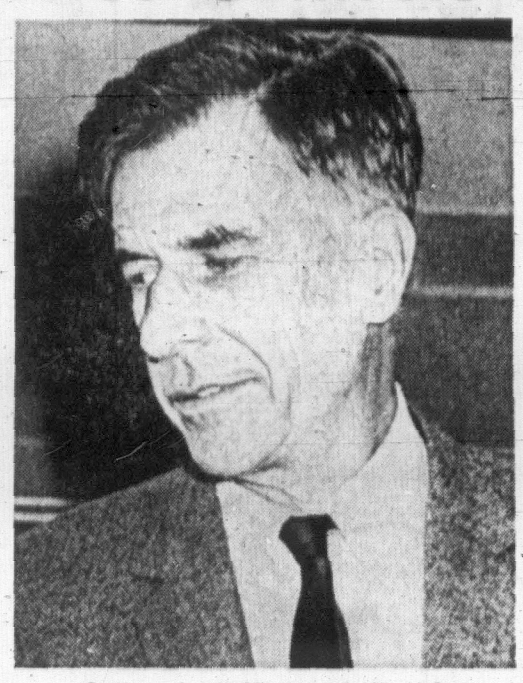
The flamboyant Harvard professor, now holding a chair for two terms at Cambridge University, gave the annual Fabian lecture to the British Fabian Society, the philosophic and political parents of the present British Labor party and socialist movement. His subject was a "comparative diagnosis" of the political left in the United States and Britain.

In both countries, he said, "the truth we evade is that the age of Keynesian economics is over; the macro-economic revolution in fiscal and monetary management we owe to Keynes has run afoul of the macro-economic revolution in trade union and corporate power. In consequence, there is no way within the Keynesian modalities to reconcile adequately high employment with reasonably stable prices . . .

SOMETHING MORE

"The reason for the Keynesian failure is that at any near approach to full employment, unions can seek and win wage increases much in excess of productivity gains, because . . . corporations can retrieve wage increases and something more."

But the difference between the liberal-left in America and Britain, Galbraith argued, is that in the United States, while the liberal economic establishment opposes them, "The unions, after some ritual protest to the contrary, will probably accept wage and price control in preference to the alternatives," provided they are assured that the control is "real," i.e. that it will stabilize living costs.



Galbraith: U.K. ahead of U.S.

In Britain, however, both the socialist establishment and the unions are hostile to any form of governmental wage and price control, he said.

"Any idiot can argue the case against controls in the abstract," Galbraith continued. "It is only that there are no alternatives.

"The control need not be comprehensive. Macro-economic change has only defeated Keynesian policy where strong unions and strong corporations are involved. In the United States, only a few hundred unions and a couple of thousand corporations need be touched.

"And perfect stability is not the goal. One seeks to eliminate only the gross movements inherent in private price and wage-fixing.

"Additionally the past efforts have all incorporated the hope that they might be temporary. We shall only have a workable system of permanent controls when we recognize that they are forever."

One reason for wage and price control, Galbraith said, is that it is not otherwise possible "to preserve a civilized balance" between the public and private sectors of the economy.

In depression times, he argued, and when economic expansion was sought, the public sector benefitted through increased public spending — and accordingly Keynesian policy favored the public sector.

But in today's world of chronic inflation, the tendency is to cut down on public expenditure, and Keynesian policy then "strongly favors the private sector."

BOW TO BRITAIN

Bowing to his host country, Galbraith said:

"An American coming even briefly to England cannot but sense how much better British socialism, as compared with American liberalism, has supported the public sector since the Second World War.

"Perhaps one could argue that, in consequence of the better balance between public and private services, the British standard of living is, in its general yield of satisfaction, now higher than that of the United States.

"Few things to me are so discouraging as the reluctance of the American left to face up to the costs of modern government. The modern metropolis in particular is an incredibly expensive thing. Until its price is paid, modern urban life is not even tolerable, much less agreeable.

"There are, I've long thought, few problems in New York City which would not be solved by doubling the city budget. There are none which will be solved by using the present liberal device which is to use sociology as a substitute for higher taxes.

"On these matters the British left (and, to be fair, also the British right) is a geological age in advance of the United States."

Disaster Record 900,000 Deaths

By Reuter

If the latest estimates by Dacca newspapers prove correct, the cyclone and tidal wave that hit East Pakistan last Friday will be the biggest killer of any individual natural disaster in history.

Pakistani newspapers Thursday said the total killed may range as high as two million people, although the latest official confirmed death toll is nearly 40,000.

The previous high in any single disaster was 900,000, when the Yellow River overflowed in China in 1887.

In 1881, a typhoon and tidal wave killed an estimated 300,000 in China and Indochina. The following year, a cyclone and tidal wave in the Bombay, India, area killed about 100,000.

When the Yellow River overflowed its banks in 1911, about 100,000 Chinese were reported killed.

Wars, plague and disease have been the biggest killers during the last few centuries.

No reliable statistics are available for the number of persons who have died from famine, malnutrition and neglect.

MILLIONS DIED

But records report millions upon millions of people have died within the last 300 years from pandemics sweeping through countries.

In 1889-90, an influenza pandemic was estimated to have affected about 40 per cent of the world's population.

A cholera pandemic which swept through continental Europe from 1826 to 1837 killed millions. In one year alone, 1831, about 900,000 Europeans died.

From 1840 to 1862, the cholera pandemic became worldwide, claiming many millions more lives.

In Russia, in the first four years of the Soviet government, 1917-21, a typhus pandemic took a death toll estimated at between 2.5 and three million.

In the 1920s, bubonic plague is estimated to have claimed two million lives in India. Also in India, cholera took 300,000 lives in 1924 and smallpox 423,000 between 1926 and 1930.

The Tokyo and Yokohama earthquake and fire of 1923 still stands as the world's worst earthquake tragedy, with 200,000 killed.

New Line Would Double Bus Service

Expanded bus service for the Saanich Peninsula was proposed Wednesday by an employee of Vancouver Island Coach Lines.

Sales supervisor Wayne McArthur told reporters he has an option to purchase two Vancouver Island Coach Lines buses. He will leave the company when and if approval is given by the Public Utilities Commission and peninsula municipalities.

No name has been chosen for the new firm, but McArthur Transportation is a possibility.

The proposed schedule will roughly double the present VICL service, cut drastically at mid-month after the company had said it was losing more than $100,000 a year on peninsula service.

VICL will pull out of Victoria-Vancouver and Nanaimo-Vancouver service at the end of this month with Pacific Stage Lines, a B.C. Hydro subsidiary, taking over.

This leaves VICL, a subsidiary of International Utilities, an American company, running bus service up Vancouver Island, from Victoria to the airport and summer trips on the Gray Line.

DESERVES SUPPORT

VICL manager Jack Thomas told reporters there is no immediate thought of disposing of the rest of the company's services. He said McArthur deserves support in his new venture.

McArthur outlined this schedule, which he emphasized needs Public Utilities Commission approval before it can start:

1. Leave Sidney at 7:10 a.m. via Bazan Bay, Mount Newton, Veyaness, Tanner Road, Royal Oak and Victoria;
2. Leave Victoria 8:15 a.m. for Sidney by same route;
3. Leave Sidney 8:50 a.m. via Swartz Bay, Sidney Resthaven, Bazan Bay Road, Mount Newton Cross Road, Wallace Drive, Brentwood, Keating Cross Road, Prospect Lake Road, Royal Oak and Victoria;
4. Leave Victoria 10:50 a.m. for Cordvoa Bay and return;
5. Leave Victoria 12:15 p.m. for Sidney by same route as 1, returning by same route from Sidney at 1:15 p.m.
6. Leave Victoria 2:15 p.m. for Cordova Bay and return;
7. Leave Victoria 3:30 p.m. via Royal Oak, Prospect Lake Road, Keating Cross Road, Brentwood Bay, Wallace Drive, Mount Newton Cross Road, Bazan Bay Road, Mount Newton Cross Road, Veyaness Road and Royal Oak arriving back in Victoria at 5:10 p.m.;
8. Leave Victoria 5:40 p.m. for Sidney via Royal Oak, Tanner Road, Veyaness, Mount Newton and Bazan Bay.

The service would run daily except Sundays and holidays at the same rates now charged.

Because of the small staff needed to run the peninsula service, it was indicated that costs will be less than those by VICL.

Recognition and Action

FISHERIES MINISTER DAVIS is less than satisfied with the performance of the United States in regard to halting and reversing the process of pollution in the Great Lakes. The ruination of vast stretches of these inland fresh-water seas, both for fish life and man's use, is proceeding despite wide recognition of the dangers and the ultimate cost.

There is hope for better results in combating oil pollution of the high seas. The Brussels meeting of a NATO committee on challenges of modern society earlier this month dealt with the problems of oil spills and oil dumping at sea, and some helpful generalizations were presented by Mr. John Volpe, the U.S. secretary of transportation.

The remarks of Mr. Volpe and other delegates will, of course, have to be translated into action if any good is to result. But at least a growing number of nations are alive to the danger to the sea which is posed by increasing oil contamination. In Canada this realization was brought home by recent destructive accidents to oil tankers in coastal waters.

Canadian concern for the coastal areas, and particularly for the vast, vulnerable Arctic coastline and waters, quickly led to legislation which should do much to curb the coastal entry of sub-standard shipping and to minimize the possibility of accidental or deliberate discharge of lethal petroleum products. Severe penalties have been set for law breakers, although the international aspects of the legislation have not yet been directly tested. The attitude of the NATO committee, however, gives hope of progress in this vital field.

Mr. Volpe noted the lack of definite knowledge of the total effects of oil pollution, but declared that beyond the direct effects on marine life, many of which are known, "the hazardous substances, particularly oil, currently being dumped and spilled into the seas, are an immediate danger and a future threat to the health, recreation and welfare of mankind..." He speculated on "the long-term effects of hydrocarbons in the marine food chain . . . including those that pose the threat of cancer."

Mr. Volpe outlined the U.S. government's action to control oil pollution. There was April's legislation to protect inland and coastal waters, other actions by Congress and the executive, and presidential appeals for co-operation by industry and individuals. Further action by Congress has been recommended to ban unregulated ocean dumping of all materials and to limit strictly the ocean disposal of any potentially harmful materials.

The United States called on NATO nations to "achieve by mid-decade a complete halt to all intentional discharge of oil and oily wastes into the oceans by tankers and other vessels." Since the NATO countries control about 75 per cent of the tanker tonnage of the world as well as of total world shipping, and more than 70 per cent of the world's annual oil production enters their ports and their coastal areas, unified agreement by the group would have an important, even decisive effect.

Canada has a particular interest in this proposed internationalization of measures which Ottawa has already implemented on a national scale. At least the nations are on the move, and that is a great advance over the laissez faire which dominated past decades and helped to produce the increasingly obvious dangers of today.

The Last Rejection?

A SIMPLE UNITED STATES strategy will probably result in the rejection once again of efforts to seat Red China in the United Nations. If support for an American move to make the issue an "'important question" is forthcoming — and it is expected — tomorrow's vote would require a two-thirds majority to pass. As the nations line up at present, that majority is not anticipated.

Last year 48 nations voted for the so-called Albanian motion to admit Peking and expel Taiwan; 56 voted against it, 21 abstained and one was absent. Since then, support has reportedly grown for seating Red China, though not to the extent of a two-thirds majority. It is argued that mainland China cannot be excluded if the United Nations is, in fact, to be the United Nations. A quarter of the world's population cannot be overlooked and kept out of the global body if it is to be global.

The simple solution would be to admit both. However neither Taiwan nor mainland China accepts that case. Each wants to be the one and only Chinese representative seated.

The earlier point, that Peking does not want membership, appears now to have been eliminated. Peking does want in and has made it known, unofficially, that its earlier pre-conditions have been changed. There is, according to report, no insistence now from mainland China that the UN charter be revised to throw out the "imperialist puppets," that the 1950 resolution branding China the aggressor be rescinded and that UN pass a new resolution branding the United States as the aggressor in Korea. But Peking has not retreated from its original demand that Taiwan be excluded.

On the basis of "universality," this sticking point seems totally illogical. Taiwan has a population of 14 million people, a larger population than the majority of UN member nations, and is one of its important financial contributors (only the United States, the Soviet Union, the United Kingdom and France supply a larger percentage).

Some observers believe this may be the last year when opposition to Peking membership will prevail. But the two-China problem remains. Illogical as it may seem to have excluded mainland China so long, is it any more illogical in principle to reverse positions: to admit a new member and exile an old one?

Waiting for Franco's Nod

BEFORE THE END OF NEXT month, according to frequent speculation, Generalissimo Francisco Franco is expected to divest himself of some of his responsibilities by naming a prime minister for Spain. This is presumed to be included in the time-table for a gradual transition of powers which would divide, for the first time since his assumption of the country's top offices, the posts of head of state and head of government.

Franco has already made provision for the succession to his post as head of state, having named Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon y Borbon as his heir apparent. The constitution of 1967 gives that office particular importance since its holder "exercises supreme political and administrative power."

When and if the 78-year-old dictator steps down — or appoints a prime minister — substantial change is in prospect for the government. Younger men are expected to move up in the cabinet and the influence of the Roman Catholic lay organization, Opus Dei, is expected to grow. This would shift authority more noticeably away from the military, and conceivably bring to the government a more pronounced progressive tone.

But the only man who can effect the transition is the man who drew the blueprints for it, Francisco Franco, and when it was suggested to him some time ago that at his age he might consider retiring, his response was revealing. He had, he said, no interest in playing the role of queen mother.

Without Fuss

Montreal Gazette

Prince Edward Island becomes the 10th province to opt for medicare, plans to put its medical insurance plan into operation on Dec. 1, and doesn't expect any fuss or bother. The plan should be adopted smoothly in striking contrast to the travail of Quebec.

The Charlottetown government has wisely refrained from trying to make a far-reaching social change by the very implementation of medicare. The P.E.I. plan will be closely modelled on Nova Scotia's MSI or medical services insurance. After 18 months the Nova Scotia plan is operating efficiently with full opting out privileges plus extra billing for all doctors. In the first year, only nine of Nova Scotia's 700 doctors practised outside the plan.

It is all rather frustrating to watch. Now there is the prospect of eight provinces having adopted medicare without trouble, the other exception being pioneering Saskatchewan.

Perhaps if Quebec had been willing to settle for medicare, rather than a fundamental reform of the doctor's relationship to society, and had been willing to profit from the experience of others, there would be no crisis here.

FROM OTTAWA

By MAURICE WESTERN

An Embarrassing Count of Empty Commons Seats

THE Trudeau government, after two relatively serene parliamentary years, was given a sharp reminder on Friday that a carefree majority is no guarantee against sudden ambush. Fortunately for the ministers, many of whom were on their travels, it was not High Noon in the Commons; merely a somewhat embarrassing episode, that turned into a comedy of errors. But this happy outcome, bringing embarrassment to the Conservatives in turn, was not attributable to good management; it was due simply to the fact that the opposition could not have anticipated the plight of the government and were not in a position to exploit their sudden opportunity.

Western

Mr. Trudeau operates on a rota system which was introduced without the consent of other parties and has never ceased to be an opposition grievance. It usually surfaces nowadays when ministers who are supposed to be on House duty are otherwise engaged. Sometimes they are represented by acting ministers, sometimes by their parliamentary secretaries but in either case a member seeking information obtains little satisfaction beyond the standard assurance that his question has been noted and will be drawn to the attention of the minister on his return.

On Friday Robert Stanfield, gazing across the chamber, found himself confronted with a vast expanse of empty ministerial benches. There was no Prime Minister and no House Leader (Mr. MacEachen being absent through illness). There was no sign of the ministers who normally answer questions about the situation in Quebec. Most of the ministers in charge of the major economic departments were also otherwise engaged. Of the 30 who serve, two-thirds were elsewhere.

Formal Protest

Mr. Stanfield entered a formal protest. He then attempted one or two questions which produced various disarming remarks from a parliamentary secretary but nothing much in the way of definitive answers. Further questions, now directed to the whereabouts of the ministers, disclosed that Arthur Laing, minister of public works was acting for Mr. Trudeau. Mr. Laing, an experienced and widely popular minister, attempted to pour oil on troubled waters. On this occasion, however, the opposition was not to be calmed.

Sensing an opportunity, Stanley Knowles moved that the House go on to government business. This being refused, the opposition demanded a formal division. The question was purely procedural in no way comparable to the 1968 vote which brought the defeat of a tax bill. But a reverse even on such an issue, would have been an obvious rebuke to the government and damaging to its prestige.

In fact the ministry was never in danger. Only 79 Liberals answered the bells but the vote was anti-climatic because the combined opposition could arouse only 42.

The members to Mr. Speaker's left then fell silent while question period was taken over exclusively by Liberals. Not all the questions carried the stamp of urgency; some were found defective by the chair; but a few were pertinent enough or pointed enough to test the skill of the ministers and to permit them at the same time to make invidious comparisons at the expense of the opposition.

As matters turned out, therefore, the backbenchers did a creditable job of rescuing the ministers. Even so Friday's performance was not one to justify any preening of the government's feathers. Mr. Trudeau set out to improve the efficiency of Parliament. It is not likely to become more efficient if the ministers marked for duty on the official roster, are not available to answer questions or if adequate Cabinet representation can be secured only by some opposition manoeuvre which sets the bells ringing in the Parliament corridors.

There is rather more to this, however, than apportionment of blame. The figures tell their own story about House of Commons attendance. Certainly members have duties which frequently keep them out of the chamber. But in this case less than half the membership was available on the call of the whips.

Important Business but—

By long tradition Friday is a slim day in the House. This was not, however, an ordinary Friday because the business of the day was the Public Order, (temporary measures) Act, which is to replace the War Measures Act as the source of the emergency powers now required. According to all parties, this is business of quite unusual importance; furthermore there was at least some expectation, encouraged by the attitude of Mr. Stanfield, that it would come to a vote before the evening adjournment. In any event amendments of importance awaited disposal.

Speeches are important but votes are crucial unless they seem likely to occur on Fridays in the House of Commons.

Correspondence From Our Readers

Look for the Good

In a recent letter a correspondent suggested that English Canada should send Quebec packing, because of the French temperament. May I give another point of view by quoting from "A History of England" by Andre Maurois?

"With the death of Simon de Montfort there vanished the last of the great Frenchmen who helped to fashion England. When William the Conqueror landed, he found a country of settlers. His vigor, the vigor of Henry I, the vigor of Henry II, had established a new country. Many of the institutions imposed or preserved by these kings are extant today—the jury, the assizes, the Exchequer (at any rate in name), and the universities. The period between 1066 and 1272 (which included the signing of the Great Charter) is one of the most fruitful in English history."

In later centuries great numbers of Frenchmen, driven from France, settled in England, much to that country's benefit. "The English silk manufacture, for instance, was founded by French Protestants."

It is extremely difficult for a comparatively weak nation, living within the reach of a great power, to keep its independence. History leaves no doubt of that: Canadian history, though short, has provided some sharp reminders. If we use as much zeal in discovering one another's good qualities as we do with our faults, we may survive outside pressures, and preserve our freedom.—S. G. Woodeson, 6456 Pat Bay.

Art Gallery Views

The letter by Audrey Johnson in the Nov. 7 Times was in my opinion the best she's ever written! I've been reading Mrs. Johnson's column for many years and can appreciate the true feeling and dedication she has for the Arts. She has expressed the thoughts of every one of the members of the Gallery in this outstanding article. Her facts are correct—and I hope the city fathers have all taken it to heart. — Laura M. Miller, President, Women's Committee, Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Check the Price

Your cartoon of last week showing the woman questioning the storekeeper re the price of salmon at $1.00 was to the point with one big exception — namely the price.

A well-known large store was selling Coho salmon at $1.58 per pound on Nov. 12, 1970.

I wonder how many people are interested in saving the salmon at this price? This is more expensive than good beef and to me seems exorbitant.

I am certainly in favor of saving the salmon but I wonder if the water used at Goldstream would not be more valuable to the people as a whole than saving fish they cannot afford to buy.—T. D. McMurray, 307-548 Dallas.

Civil Rights! Whose?

The War Measures Act is clear for anyone to read and it is presumed that those who teach in our schools are familiar with it.

It is about time something was done to suppress the activities of revolutionaries in our midst and those from foreign countries who, in some cases have been invited to speak and to brainwash our students, all at the expense of the taxpayer.

No law-abiding Canadian can object to interrogation by a police officer, so now is the chance for them to weed out all those draft dodgers, deserters and undesirables in British Columbia; we have all been too complacent in allowing minority groups to flourish (out of line) and to cross our border at will.

Civilized persons do not condone kidnapping and murder as a means of changing conditions. In our society this can be done by peaceful means and the ballot box.

The stand taken by our Provincial Government is to be commended. A little discipline for a short time is preferable to jungle law and we are only one jump ahead of that situation. Then it will be too late to cry "Civil Rights". — P. W. de P. Taylor, Box 109 Sooke.

Mild Rebuke

The Society for Pollution and Environmental Control is disappointed to note that the fee to pollute the Upper Harbor and Selkirk Waters is so modest.

The $200 fine imposed for spillage of wood chips by a local mill on June 4, 1970, is a very gentle tap on the knuckles for an offence which is not an isolated incident.

It is good to know the company concerned is "aware of its responsibilities."

Public vigilance will help to sharpen the awareness of other companies with similar operations.—J. White, President, Victoria Branch, SPEC.

I am comparatively new to this area, having arrived since the last United Appeal was launched (by this I mean last year's appeal), and I therefore cannot judge by those that were included last year. Where I lived before however, (which was in B.C.), I was always told in the form of advertisement and news items in the paper and on radio and TV just what organizations are included in the local drive. I suggest that if the same thing is done here, instead of taking people for granted, there might be a much better response to the appeal — Pearce Morton, Metchosin.

Goode Funne

Could Mr. Arthur Mayse be a kill-joy?

I hope that Victorians as a whole will support (and have fun in so doing) the Victorian Days being initiated by the Chamber of Commerce this coming May.

What could be more appropriate, especially during our Centennial celebartions, than to make-believe for a few days that we are living in that period of 100 years ago, with B.C's capital city named after Queen Victoria of Britain.

The Calgary Stampede is great! Edmonton's Klondike Days are great! Viking Days at Gimli, Manitoba, are great! Vancouver's first three-day Octoberfest, just recently held, was fun and a big success! Why not Victorian Days Festival?

I have no connection whatsoever with the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, or this upcoming project, but as an onlooker I wish them lots of luck. I'm sure that all age groups can become involved and have fun if they get into the spirit of this thing called LOVE.—Fran Ratcliffe, 8501 Emard Terrace, North Saanich.

Far Afield

Please accept a small cheer of goodwill from a former resident of Victoria.

This morning's Honolulu paper reported that you have ordered the release of 100,000,000 gallons of water to help exhausted salmon to spawn in streams shrivelled by the driest summer in 36 years.

Formerly museums adviser for the B.C. Provincial Museum, I'm well aware of Freeman King's anguish.

Intelligent, concerned and far-sighted public figures in Canada can still counter, through sensible and informed actions like yours, the rising incidence of ecological tragedy overpowering so many areas of the Excited States of America.—George Moore, Honolulu.

Looking Back

From the Times of November 19, 1910:

The singular tradition among Scottish undergraduates to render almost inaudible the address of their lord rector and to engage in destructive mischief was again illustrated during Mr. Asquith's visit to Aberdeen University recently. So badly did the young men behave that he threatened to stop his address. At the close, the carriage in which he was to have been drawn was smashed and sunk in the harbor.

The lord rector's is practically an honorary post to which the students elect distinguished men.

CARIBBEAN PROJECT

A Scientific El Dorado

By IRWIN GOODWIN

ST. CROIX, V.I. — The idea of drawing icy water from the warm Caribbean seems far fetched. So, too, does a scheme to wring moisture from trade winds to cool a whole community, extract fresh water, and, at the same time, breed seafood by the ton.

But all these revolutionary objectives are just what scientists from Columbia University's Lamont-Doherty Geological Observatory are attempting to reach here on a remote stretch of rocky beach.

When a new marine biology station, housed in the stone-and-mortar buildings of a historic Dutch sugar plantation, was dedicated on this island's north shore in early August by Lamont's director, Maurice Ewing, and Virgin Islands Gov. Melvin Evans, the first phase began for a promising scientific El Dorado.

Breed Fish, Oysters

An ambitious concept, first advanced in the weekly journal Science in 1967 by Robert D. Gerard and J. Lamar Worzel, both of Lamont, it is an integrated, multi-purpose system that is designed to:

- Breed fish, lobsters, shrimp, oysters or any other seafood in seafarms or aquaculture "gardens."
- Produce millions of gallons of unpolluted fresh water from the humidity in sea breezes.
- Develop electric power and cool, dry "air-conditioning" for a tropical island community.

Though the operation here is only a limited pilot experiment, the success of its main feature could herald bigger projects.

The essential component is a simple, mile-long, 3½-inch-wide polyethylene pipe that carries 30 gallons of seawater each minute from 400 fathoms (about a half-mile) down on the bottom of the Caribbean. On the surface, the water temperature is around 80 degrees fahrenheit, but that deep it is near freezing at 40 degrees.

In this experiment, which began recently after years of calculations, the Columbia scientists, supported by the National Science Foundation, are trying to duplicate a crucially important phenomenon of nature that yields an abundance of fish to the oceans off Peru, Guinea and South Africa.

Vast Swarms of Life

Vast swarms of sea life are found in these regions because of what oceanographers term "upwellings" — the steep ascent of cold water bearing rich nutrients from the decay of dead sea life. These nutrients are swept from the seabed to the surface by winds, currents and the topography of the continental shelf.

Off the northern coast of St. Croix, the scientists have created an artificial upwelling — the water pumped up in the pipeline containing the same nutrients, a primordial life-giving soup.

This cold soup is thick with vital salts — most notably nitrates and phosphates — which, when mixed with gases in the sea, like carbon dioxide, and when struck by sunlight near the surface, generate microscopic single-celled plants called phytoplankton. This is the first link in the great chain of life.

For years, researchers at Lamont's lab in Palisades, N.Y., have been studying how to forge this chain by subjecting the basic soup as well as phytoplankton and algae to subtle change in temperature and sunlight. By doing this, they have come to understand how to cultivate a sea garden.

On St. Croix, researchers have constructed two concrete pools that hold 16,000 gallons each of the basic salt soup. In these they propose to raise oysters, shrimp, lobsters and, eventually fish that will feed on the phytoplankton bloom.

Though many aquaculture farms are operating around the world, the St. Croix station will be the first, if successful, using natural sea nutrients as a kind of fertilizer.

No longer is aquaculture a Jules Verne fantasy. Oysters, shrimp, turtles and fish are herded on watery ranches from Japan to Florida. The output is still a fraction of the world's total catch, now about 55 million metric tons a year.

Some specialized seafood, such as oysters and lobsters, are in increasing demand. It is difficult enough for the industry to keep up with the demand, the supplies are now imperiled by overfishing and pollution.

The first seafood to be grown in Lamont's St. Croix gardens will be simple mollusks like whelks, snails and oysters. As a test of the operation's commercial value, the station's manager, Pedro Centeno, proposes to raise Chesapeake Bay and Long Island oysters.

"We intend getting specimens of the finest oysters found anywhere, whether these are in France or Tasmania or England," says Centeno. "I'm sure we can grow the best — unblemished and untainted."

Perhaps even more important for St. Croix, however, is the promise of electric power and fresh water to come in later phases of the experiment. St. Croix, like most small tropical islands, is short of both.

Drip Down into Tank

"Every day," observes Lamont's associate director Worzel, "more than 300 gallons of water, in the form of vapor in the lower atmosphere, sweeps across every mile of shoreline exposed to trade winds."

The complete system that Worzel and Gerard outlined in Science includes a conventional 60-square-foot condenser through which the cold seawater is pumped before it reaches the sea farm.

As the winds whistle through the condenser, ideally located on a hilltop near shore, moisture collects on its plates or louvres. The moisture, like that in the warm air that enters a refrigerator, will drip down into a storage tank.

The scientists reckon that 245 gallons of icy seawater must flush through the condenser to produce one gallon of fresh water from the wind's humidity.

Another part of the system uses the big temperature difference between deep sea water and tropical surface water to generate power. The principle for this was originally established in 1832 by a French scientist, d'Arsonval. A century passed before another Frenchman, Georges Claude, constructed such a plant at Matanzas, Cuba, in 1930. It produced 22 kilowatts of electric power.

A French company built a similar power unit in the 1950s at Abidjan in the Ivory Coast. It had a planned output of 7,000 kilowatts but never ran at that level.

Better engineering, improved heat-exchangers and new intermediate fluids such as freon, the Lamont scientists believe, will increase the efficiency of the plant.

An extra dividend of the condenser's operation, the researchers claim, will be the reduced humidity once the trade winds pass through the condenser. As they see it, the winds will provide a kind of dehumidified air-conditioning for buildings inland.

Lamont's pioneering project may change conditions for the Caribbean islands. "Its development," says Gerard, "could have important economic and social benefits. Areas that are today unproductive and uninhabited could be supplied with abundant power, fresh water and high-protein food."

How sea can be tapped for cold water, food, air-conditioning

Earlier Debate Saved Canada, But Today . . .?

By GEORGE OAKE

Back in 1881, Alexander Mackenzie had an idea that might have solved the continental issue once and for all for Canadians.

As an alternative to the Canadian Pacific Railway, not to mention Sir John A. Macdonald's Conservatives, Mackenzie launched a rival syndicate, promising to build a national railway in stages for less money and land than the maligned CPR.

There was some small print, however.

And as Pierre Berton's The National Dream quotes Macdonald, "the scheme was nothing more than an impudent offer to build the prairie section and to do it by means of political friends. Connecting with the Yankee railways at Sault would be to the utter ruin of the great policy under which the Dominion of Canada has been created, the utter ruin of our hopes of being a great nation . . ."

Fiery Orators

In short, fruition of Mackenzie's scheme would have meant a north-south trade axis, establishing a ready-made southern avenue for Canadian raw materials.

Unlike today's politicians, indulging in half-hearted debates and clouding the issue of continentalism with uncertainty, the fiery Grit and Tory orators of 90 years ago raged at each other through all-night House of Commons sittings.

Nothing less than Canada was at stake.

Just before midnight, on a snowy February evening in 1881, the Pacific Railway Bill passed third reading. The anti-continental forces had won; Canadians inherited half a continent.

Today the old Canadian products — timber, wheat, fur and fish — which created an east-west trade axis are not so much in demand. Instead new raw materials — natural gas, oil, ores and possibly water — have created a north-south trade axis.

But only the direction has changed.

As Harold Innes pointed out in The Fur Trade in Canada, "The raw material supplied to the mother country stimulated manufactures of the finished products which were in demand in the colony. Agriculture, industry, transportation, trade, finance and governmental activities tend to become subordinate to the production of the staple for a more highly specialized manufacturing community."

By 1968 only 35 per cent of Canadian exports were end products, compared to 61 per cent of our imports. Over the last 20 years there has been a trend away from raw materials in Canadian exports. A continental energy policy could reverse this trend easily, leaving Canadians hewers of woods and carriers of water in the literal sense of the phase.

Not Reassuring

As early as 1965 the United States was bargaining for a continental resource plan. The Merchant-Heeney Report — produced jointly by the United States ambassador to Canada and the Canadian ambassador to Washington — contained a little noticed allusion to shared resources: "Under appropriate conditions, joint planning and development of resources . . . in various regions would appear to offer promising opportunities. For this reason we recommend early and serious study of such possibilities."

Nor have three Canadian prime ministers been very reassuring on the subject. As historian James Laxer points out in his Energy Poker Game, John Diefenbaker called the Columbia River agreement "a great advance for mankind."

Lester Pearson, during the 1965 election campaign said, "We have to be careful not to alienate this resource without taking care of our own needs and we will be discussing this with the United States who are very anxious to work out arrangements by which some of our water resources are moved down south. This can be as important as exporting wheat or oil."

Talking about resources in general, Prime Minister Trudeau said in Febrary, 1970, "I don't want to be a dog in the manger about this. But if people are not going to use it, can't we sell it for good hard cash?"

Slips of the tongue? Provocative politics? Perhaps. But deeds seem to bear out words.

Only last month Ottawa approved export permits for 6.3 trillion cubic feet of natural gas to the United States — 12 per cent of Canada's established reserves. Mines and Energy Minister J. J. Greene assured Canadians that the sale was not part of a continental energy policy.

But Laxer notes a 1969 National Energy Board publication estimates by 1990 the United States will be able to supply itself with only two-thirds of its need from domestic supply.

Laxer adds, "By then two-thirds of Canadian natural gas would be flowing to the U.S. and this assumes that production in Canada will increase six-fold over the next 20 years."

'Turning Point'

Pure speculation? Not likely. Once the $200-million pipelines are built the United States is not going to allow them to lie unused after current contracts have expired.

Ninety years ago — almost to the month — Goldwin Smith in his Bystander discussed the merits of the all-Canadian CPR as opposed to a continental railway through the United States:

"What is truly momentuous, and makes this a turning point in our destiny, is the choice which our people are now called upon to make between the continental and the anti-continental system, between the policy of antagonism to our neighbors on the south and that of partnership."

As Pierre Berton writes in The National Dream, "Goldwin Smith was talking in extremes when he used words like 'antagonism' but he managed to catch the sense of the issue. To MacDonald, 'partnership' meant something perilously close to engulfment; to the Liberals, it was not a danger but an economic asset."

Smith's argument is just as fresh as it was 90 years ago. His words echo down the years like the lonely sound of a steam engine on a dark night, carrying wheat and furs to the mother country.

The Brain Drain in Reverse

By JOHN NOBLE WILFORD

NEW YORK — Leslie Cole, his wife and three children will sail home to England next month. After five years as an aerospace engineer here, he has lost his job, sold his house, said his good-byes to his American friends and is reluctantly going back to London to look for work.

Cole and his family are casualties of the recent economic recession and widespread cutbacks in aerospace and research spending. But his story has a difference.

Like thousands of foreign-born engineers and scientists who were lured to the United States in the last decade with promises of big salaries, better research facilities and bright futures, Cole now feels trapped by the cutbacks and disillusioned about his career prospects here. He is, therefore, becoming part of an apparently growing emigration of foreign-born workers back to their homelands.

In the last year or so, for example, a Nobel laureate returned to work in his native Germany, an astrophysicist returned to Denmark, an RCA engineer returned to Austria, a University of Illinois physicist returned to Japan and several Dutch astronomers went back to The Netherlands.

Just how many are going back has not been definitely established, but nearly every scientist can cite several cases of foreign-born colleagues who are heading home.

If the trend continues, American science administrators say, such emigration could lead to a significant reversal of the so-called "brain drain."

This is happening at a time when the brain drain from the rest of the world to the U.S. shows signs of being partly plugged. Last year, nearly 3,000 fewer scientists and engineers—10,255—came to the U.S. to work than in 1968.

While there are no similar statistics on the reverse flow, science attaches at the Washington embassies of several European nations report a growing number of calls from scientists investigating the opportunities to work abroad. Dr. Alessandro Silj, a Ford Foundation official who is a former deputy director of the European Economic Community's Washington office, said that he kept "meeting people who are going back to Europe."

In a series of interviews at laboratories and universities across the country, a variety of reasons for the emigration were given. They ranged from the sharp cutbacks in the aerospace industry and the general tightening of American research spending to the improved and sometimes superior scientific facilities now available in Europe and Japan.

A few scientists said they were leaving, or wanted to leave, because they were disturbed by the American social and political climate. Others cited family reasons—a homesick wife or aging parents, a preference for European schools for their children or concern that their children were losing touch with their own culture. Aside from the personal and professional reasons, there also seems to be a vague feeling that the exciting momentum is gone from American science and technology. The foreigners fail to see a clearcut science policy for the future, or any public support for one.

Third quarter sales rose 108 per cent to help put nine-month results of Consumers Distributing Co. Ltd. up 6.7 cents a share before year-end adjustment in 1969.

Sales peaked at $13.86 million in the three quarters compared with $7.6 million last year, and net income was $404,800 or 20 cents a share against $317,100 or 15.6 cents after year-end adjustment of 2.3 cents.

The company operates retail showrooms in 25 Ontario centres, with Toronto having 10 of the 38 outlets.

Banks Remain Silent on Further Rate Cut

By IRVING C. WHYNOT
Canadian Press Business Editor

The chartered banks have been prominent by their silence in reaction to the latest cut in the central bank rate.

The prospect is that the silence will continue and that no reduction in the chartered bank prime lending rate—the one that eventually means something to the average bank customer—can be expected in the immediate future.

The Bank of Canada cut the bank rate—the rate at which it lends money to the chartered banks—to six per cent from 6½ per cent effective Nov. 12.

It was the fourth reduction in the rate since mid-May, the most recent on Sept. 1, and continued the trend started in May when the rate was reduced to 7½ per cent from eight, which had been in effect since mid-1969.

The bank rate is usually considered an indicator of government policy and a signal to the banks to lean toward easier credit. High bank rates are used to cool the economy during inflationary periods, and lower rates tend to put life back into a slow economy.

BANKS REACT SLOWLY

The chartered banks also were slow to react after the Sept. 1 reduction until Finance Minister Benson criticized them publicly for not lowering their rates.

The banks said no reduction in their prime rate—the rate at which they lend money to their best no-risk customers—was warranted. But they eventually reduced the prime rate to 7½ per cent from eight, apparently under considerable political pressure.

Mr. Benson says he has no intention of calling for another prime rate cut at this time, and the banks will say only that they are looking at the situation.

A Bank of Montreal spokesman noted: "The change in the Bank of Canada rate does not necessarily imply a change in the prime rate of the chartered banks. Therefore, no action is contemplated at this time."

His comment brings out a point which often is misunderstood. It is popularly regarded that a bank rate change automatically triggers changes in other rates. This is a myth.

Leif Olsen, senior vice-president of the First National City Bank in New York, told a recent conference board meeting that the prime rate is only one element in the broad spectrum of interest rates.

ACTION EXPLAINED

"It changes in response to changes in demand and supply of credit generally," he said. "Indeed, historically, the prime rate has generally been a laggard responding after other rates have changed."

Mr. Olsen said the prime rate has never been a leader although it sometimes moves coincidentally with changes in other rates.

It is interesting to note, however, that more than 50 U.S. banks have just reduced their prime rate to 7¼ per cent, following a bank rate cut to 5¾ per cent.

That means rates are fractionally higher in Canada than in the U.S. and, in a roundabout way, makes more money available for Canadian business and individuals.

When rates are lower in the U.S., large American subsidiaries operating in Canada will borrow their money in the U.S. at the lower rate—leaving more money in Canada for Canadian borrowers.

When rates are lower in Canada, the U.S. firms borrow here, putting a heavy drain on the available money supply.

Nickel Deposit Largest?

MONTREAL (CP) — J. H. Kentish, president of Dumont Nickel Corp., said Wednesday a nickel deposit north of Val d'Or is possibly the largest single deposit discovered in the history of Canadian mining.

He told a news conference the deposit has a potential estimated at 4,000 million tons. It is located about 40 miles north of Val d'Or.

Kentish said an investment of more than $100 million will be necessary to bring the deposit into production by 1973. He said he expects the money will come from small investors in Quebec.

Dumont Nickel Corp., which is exploring and plans to develop the deposit, was incorporated in 1954.

Kentish said the strip of nickel ore is 4½ miles long and 3,000 feet wide.

Dumont stock gained 11 cents to 75 cents on a volume of 649,850 shares Wednesday on the Canadian Stock Exchange.

It has traded as low as 16 cents in April, 1970, and on Oct. 16 was still only 36½ cents.

Increased Rates Bid By AT & T

WASHINGTON (WP) — The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. will ask the Federal Communications Commission for a 6 per cent increase in its long distance revenue — or $385 million the company says.

The request would be the first for higher long distance rates in 17 years. During that time, the telephone company and the FCC have periodically agreed upon rate redutions, reflecting the lower costs of less costly long distance transmission facilities.

Now, AT & T says, inflation is raising costs faster than new technology can reduce them.

The biggest increases would be concentrated in person-to-person, operator-assisted, and coil calls, where AT & T says it is incurring sharply-higher-labor costs; customer-dialed calls, by contrast, would rise less sharply. In addition, daytime rates would also rise steeply in an effort to encourage more calling during the off-peak evening and night hours.

GARBAGE BURNER NEEDS FIXING

'Stench Has Kept Me Indoors'

NORTH COWICHAN — A fly-ash problem caused by a faulty screen on North Cowichan's $80,000 garbage incinerator will soon be rectified, Mayor Gerry Smith told council Wednesday.

"The manufacturer will be over next week and try to rectify the problem," he said.

The incinerator discussion was introduced after John Comer, of Herd Rd., complained about the fly-ash being a continual menace to nearby residents. He also complained about the "thunderous roar of the steel shovel as it grates along the concrete.

Pieces two to three inches long frequently rain down on my property," he said. "Some of these are still glowing hot. I have in my possession a large piece found on the vinyl roof of my automobile, which left behind a heat impression. The damage to the paint work is so severe that it requires repainting."

Comer said "the smoke and stench has kept me indoors most of today, and as I type this letter, I can see through the window a continuous shower of ash descending on the lawn.

"The thunderous roar of the steel shovel as it grates along on the concrete is to say the least unpleasant. This noise has increased beyond all reasoning in the last 10 days or so."

Ald. Jim Roome agreed that Comer has a certain amount of justification for his complaints but "he is living close to the incinerator and he will just have to face up to it."

Ald. Tom Burge, chairman of the pollution control board, was surprised at the complaint of the gabage disposal system, which has been in operation since June.

"Until this letter I always received comments on how cleanly the incinerator does burn."

The faulty screen and the inexperience of the incinerator operator under various weather conditions may be the cause of the fly-ash, Burge said.

Sawmill Expansion Protested; Residents Rap 'Trash', Noise

NORTH COWICHAN — North Shore Cowichan Bay residents fear their property values will decrease due to the expansion of Slegg Brothers Ltd. sawmill.

In letters to North Cowichan council J. A. B. Green and David Chase complained about noise from the mill, and "trashy" being dumped daily into the bay.

Council was asked to "take all possible steps to have this eyesore corrected and pollution threats minimized."

Mayor Gerry Smith told council members the company will clean up the mill site and that further development is planned.

Smith said he met mill officials and "they agreed the place is a mess and agreed to clean it up."

Green said "The huge piles of wood chips and the large area covered with ends of scrap lumber and debris" around the sawmill on Tzouhalem Road are a "disgrace to any industry and potential threat to a large area of this estuary. Even an average winter's flood water will wash the debris into the river channels where the salmon are already having a very difficult time.

"The marshes at the head of the bay are literally covered with abandoned logs which are effectively and prematurely filling the tidelands," Chase said.

"After each high tide the shores are littered with logs and logging debris (particularly bark) that is a product of the booming operation. Log booms are everywhere with no regard whatsoever for registered booming grounds limits. I am told that in some areas waterlogged bark lies 20 feet deep and is turning to slime which not only fills the bay but damages marine life in the process."

Ald. Tom Burge said all pollution should be curbed, and Ald. Jim Roome, referring to a proposed land fill at the sawmill, warned that if hogfuel is used, problems could arise. Experts should examine the situation, he said.

Revised Handbook On Welfare Due

Victoria's Community Action Group will publish its second welfare rights handbook in early December.

The group will print 1,000 copies. If demand is great, more copies will be produced.

The CAG's action committee chairman Susan Talbot said the handbook will have 10 pages. It will include explanations of recent policies on allowable earnings for welfare recipients and the provincial incentive plan for welfare mothers.

"The purpose of the booklet is to make people on welfare aware of what they're eligible for," she said.

FACTS CHECKED

Facts in the publication have been checked by officials at Victoria's welfare office.

She said the handbook would also include information on social allowance rates, overages and other benefits available to welfare recipients.

Last year, the group tried unsuccessfully to distribute copies of the first handbook in area welfare offices.

Mrs. Talbot said the CAG will try again this year to make copies available through welfare offices. Failing this, she said, group members will distribute them outside the offices.

The handbook is free to welfare recipients, but agencies desiring copies will be charged.

Mrs. Talbot said copies also can be ordered by phoning her at 479-7545, or phoning CAG president Dee Rafferty at 384-7965.

Requests for the group's first handbook came from communities as remote as Alert Bay and Prince George.

Man Charged With Prowling

DUNCAN — Trial of Peter Harold Clugston, charged with prowling by night near the dwelling house of another person, was adjourned to Dec. 18 in provincial court today.

Clugston, 31, Duncan and district director for the department of rehabilitation and social improvement, is charged with being in the area of the residence of Dennis Bundy, 350 Dogwood Ave.

Hard-Luck Zoo Keeper To Leave

DUNCAN — Jim Oyen plans to sell his zoo here and move to Australia within two years.

After a fire in October which destroyed the zoo's reptile house—and a rainstorm that hit when he was rebuilding—Oyen said he became convinced he should move to a warmer climate.

He will take some animals with him and board others at the Oriole Bird Sanctuary at Sooke until he is established on the east coast of Australia.

He will donate his seal to the Sooke operation.

Oyen came to Vancouver Island from Holland in 1952 and founded the Duncan Zoo in 1958 at Glenora. He moved to the present location on the Trans-Canada Highway just south of here in 1963.

Crofton Gets Pool Grant

NORTH COWICHAN — Although Crofton asked for only $4,000 from the North Cowichan centennial grant towards a $15,000 swimming pool, it will get $6,400.

Henry Beeple, spokesman for the Crofton Ratepayers' Association, community centre and volunteer fire department, said they will try to raise the remaining amount from private organizations, public functions and volunteer labor and equipment.

He said they hoped to have the 25-by-60-foot pool completed in May in time for swimming lessons.

Mayor Gerry Smith advised council Wednesday that if it agreed to the grant Crofton residents would have more leverage to acquire four lots south of the community hall from the municipality for the project.

Council also agreed to three other projects for their $29,900 centennial grant:

A $12,000 concert stage at the Cowichan Exhibition Grounds, the mounting of a locomotive at Chemainus, estimated cost $4,000, and $7,500 to the Cowichan Valley Forest Museum for expansion plans.

The projects now need the B.C. Centennial committee approval.

We've done our thing. Now you can do yours.

The funny thing is, we didn't even know that we had a "thing".

For the past 25 years, in our one track fashion, we've simply been doing our best to absolutely perfect the Beetle. To make it work even better, not necessarily look better.

And we haven't done badly at all, as evidenced by the '71 Super Beetle. It's faster, quieter, it carries twice as much luggage and is generally a lot different than the previous Beetle. All without looking much different.

But lately, we've noticed a lot of people have been taking our thing, and doing their own. (Like adding a cute flower here, or a kinky new paint job there.)

Frankly, we're flattered and delighted. And we put it all down to affection, pure and simple.

What's more, we'd even like to offer a few suggestions.

The bedazzled Bug in the picture, for example, is sporting some way out items that any VW dealer can supply you with: like nifty mag wheels and bumper overriders. Sexy driving lights. Crazy chrome stoneguards. And, wildest of all, the Glitterbug stripe kit.

The beauty of it all is, that now you can take an old Beetle and put it back in the groove, or do some far out things to a new one.

We've always built the Beetle to be tough enough to survive anything anybody or any place could dish out.

Now it looks like it'll even survive a whole new generation.

First Full-Time President Brings Smiles to Oil Company

By JOE WILL

CALGARY (CP) — If the directors of Panarctic Oils Ltd. seem to smile a lot these days, the reason is probably Charles R. Hetherington.

He is the company's first full-time president and brings an impressive set of credentials to the job.

Twenty-five years of oil industry experience have taken Mr. Hetherington throughout North America and Australia and into almost every phase of petroleum operations.

He has worked at exploring for, developing and financing oil and gas fields, been a consultant to governments and industry, dealt with regulatory bodies and built pipelines.

Mr. Hetherington will probably find use for all his expertise as he guides Panarctic's three-year-old northern exploration program and eventually, the company hopes, directs the sticky matter of bringing Arctic resources to southern markets.

CONVINCED HIMSELF

The 51-year-old president spent his boyhood in oil country—Norman, Okla.—but he became a Canadian citizen 12 years ago and has spent much of the last 20 years working on Canadian projects.

Many times his efforts were directed at goals set by Frank McMahon of Vancouver and for the last three years he was vice-president of Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd., a McMahon-controlled pipeline.

Mr. Hetherington said that when he first applied to Panarctic he did not give himself much chance of beating out the 100 petroleum executives bidding for the top job.

"But when I began looking at and writing up my qualifications, I began to convince myself."

His accomplishments obviously impressed the directors of the consortium which the federal government and 20 Canadian private petroleum companies formed in 1967 to share the cost of searching for Arctic oil.

There were many reasons behind the application, Mr. Hetherington said, but one of the chief ones was to get away from repetitive office routine and back to his love for exploration, discovery and development.

PROSPECTS THRILL

"I am much more thrilled by exploration prospects than I am by the day-to-day operations. . . .

"Panarctic is in a fantastic situation to say the least.

"Its land holdings are in an area which has all the prospects of the three major sedimentary basins in the world . . . the Middle East, Gulf Coast and Indonesia.

"The geological characteristics are very similar and the surface indications are that gas and oil are there."

He said he is confident that large reservoirs will be found, and sees no immediate end to the Panarctic drilling program which has kept two rigs operating for more than a year.

The lack of a gusher was due partly to the approach in selecting well sites.

"The company is drilling wells that it is obligated to under its farm-out agreements . . . and in addition has the right to drill wells to earn additional acreage.

"We are working on a long-range basis; hopefully the next (well) will be successful, but the prospects are so great efforts must be continued."

But the efforts will not be continued at the detriment of the northern people and their environment, Mr. Hetherington said.

USE NATIVE LABOR

All the company's drilling agreements require contractors to use "the maximum amount of native labor," and most drillers have placed between six and 12 northerners on their crews.

Panarctic, with 21 permanent employees in the North, has six natives on the job as mechanics, radio operators and general workers.

Mr. Hetherington said it is not possible to employ all-native labor because of a lack of training, but the number hired by the company is increasing as more graduate from the John Franklin vocational school at Yellowknife, N.W.T.

The school is sponsored by the federal government for the training of Indians and Eskimos from the territories.

Mr. Hetherington said the company's responsibility in the area of pollution control is probably the largest of any company in the Arctic because Panarctic is the largest developer.

"With my interjection into the company one of my objectives is going to be to see that we live up to all reasonable and desirable and sensible pollution objectives."

PLAYS PERCENTAGES

Mr. Hetherington, who moved into his new job during the summer, also plans to play the pollution percentages when the need arises to move crude oil out of the Arctic.

Pipelines will probably be the preferred method, although Panarctic has a major interest in the ice-breaking Alexbow vessel being tested in European and Canadian waters this winter.

"Historically the spills from pipelines are much less than those from ships," Mr. Hetherington said.

Mr. Hetherington cut his oil-inlustry teeth on pipelines in 1946 as an employee of Ford, Bacon and Davis, Inc., a New York consultant firm connected with construction of early long-distance oil and natural-gas pipelines.

In the late 1940s he began working for Mr. McMahon and between 1952 and 1959 was first vice-president and chief engineer of Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd.

During that time his doctorate degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in chemical engineering was useful as he presented technical data on gas export schemes to regulatory bodies in Canada and the United States.

STRUCK OUT ON OWN

In 1957 he became managing director of Pacific Petroleums Ltd., another McMahon-controlled company and was responsible for the development of the Fort St. John, B.C. gas field.

Mr. Hetherington struck out independently in 1960 as a consultant and also formed a private firm, Canerude Oil and Gas Co. Ltd., which discovered several small fields in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Three of his eight years as a consultant were spent advising Australian governments on the extent of energy resources and developing outlines for their orderly development.

He returned to McMahon in 1967 as director and vice-president of Westcoast Transmission and Westcoast Production Co., an inactive subsidiary of the pipeline.

One of his last tasks for Westcoast before joining Panarctic was to direct a $24 million common-share offering of Westcoast Production which brought the firm into an active exploration role.

Redevelopment To Cost $1 B

TORONTO (CP) — A $1 billion Metro Centre redevelopment plan for 187 acres of railway yard along the Toronto waterfront was endorsed Wednesday by the Metropolitan Toronto planning board.

The board asked Metro Council to support the residential-commercial project, a joint venture involving Canadian National Railways and Canadian Pacific Rail.

"If government makes unreasonable demands on these developers," board member David Mansur said, "we will be left with a big eyesore and CN and CP will take their development plans to Vancouver."

NEW LOWER PHOSPHATE
SURF
GETS THE BIG OK!

SURF HEAVY DUTY

OK

says Mrs. L. Logan of Pictou, Nova Scotia.

We gave Mrs. Logan an advanced pack of new lower phosphate SURF, reformulated with substitute materials. Here's what she had to say about it:

"SURF has always been a good buy. I have tried the new lower phosphate formula. It still gets my clothes really clean and I'm saving money too. So I will stay with SURF."

This is just the beginning. Lever research will continue to try to find ways to use substitute materials to lower phosphate levels while maintaining SURF's high quality performance.

Police Artist Gets His Man

TORONTO (CP) — Intricate pieces of driftwood, the faces of holdup men, missing persons, decomposed bodies — these aren't the ideal choice of subject for every painter. But they are just some of the things that Detective-Sgt. Jim Majury has had to cope with in his role as police department artist.

Sgt. Majury, who left a career in commercial art, did his first drawing for the force 10 years ago.

A series of robberies at Yonge Street theatres left police with no leads until Sgt. Majury decided to try his hand at piecing together the descriptions given by various witnesses into a portrait.

Within hours his sketches had been posted in local police stations and three days later a suspect was arrested and later convicted.

Since those early days Sgt. Majury, now in the department's homicide division, has completed an average of 40 drawings a year, mostly in connection with major crimes such as robbery, rape, murder and kidnapping.

He has also done a few sketches of stolen jewelry and in one case was called upon to draw a piece of driftwood as described by a proud owner who claimed his stolen object was worth $3,000.

Sgt. Majury's techniques have proved so useful that he has been loaned out to other police departments. About 10 out of every 100 drawings he does lead directly to an arrest or play a major part in arrests.

Witnesses are given a little help towards their descriptions of suspects. The detective shows them a series of photographs and gets them to pick out the features that seem the most appropriate to the suspect concerned.

Then he creates a basic drawing and works away at each feature until it is as perfect as possible to the witness's memory.

It takes about three hours normally to arrive at any acceptable end product. But it has taken as long as nine hours and as little as 15 minutes.

People are not as unobservant as is often supposed, Sgt. Majury believes. "The information is up there. It just has to be drawn out because people's minds are so complex and cluttered."

And according to him there is one thing a witness never forgets and that is the criminal's eyes — and sometimes the muzzle of his gun.

There are very few things left for the men in this world.

This smooth dark rum is one of them.

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1970 —PAGE 13

IT'S TOO MUCH FOR 'B.C.'S ECONOMIC CRISIS'

Poor Humbly Ask Queen to Stay Home

The Victoria Low Income Group Wednesday asked Queen Elizabeth to postpone the Royal Family's centennial visit to British Columbia in 1971.

In a registered letter to the Queen, group president Walter Olszewski asked for the postponement until "such time as the province finds itself in a more favorable financial position."

The letter states in part:

"Along with our premier, W. A. C. Bennett, we are gravely concerned about the unemployment situation in British Columbia (and Canada) and the cost to the economy. Unemployment in Canada is the highest it has ever been since the Depression.

"Because of this, our provincial welfare minister, Philip A. Gaglardi, is concerned over the shocking increase in welfare costs and is doing all in his power to cut costs and get recipients off welfare.

"As a poor people's organization we naturally share his concern and realize that the Royal Family's entertainment may cost this government close to a quarter of a million dollars.

"It is our contention that the money saved from the entertainment costs of Her Majesty's visit could go towards easing the suffering of the poor. As the Queen of the Commonwealth and a mother who has raised children, we are sure that you will be deeply sympathetic to our appeal on behalf of the poor of this province during the present economic crisis."

The letter also states that civil service hiring restrictions and freezes on school and hospital construction demonstrate the economic crisis and the government's attempt to cut costs.

Olszewski said he does not think the Queen will ever see his letter or postpone the Royal Family's visit. He said he sent the letter to dramatize the plight of the province's poor.

Deputy provincial secretary L. J. Wallace said costs of the royal visit will be shared by the provincial and federal governments.

Because the itinerary has yet to be drawn up, he said, it is impossible to estimate the cost. But he said Olszewski's $250,000 figure should be considerably higher than the actual cost.

Big Area Bought For Park At Sooke

By ROGER STONEBANKS

The Capital Regional District today purchased 1,704 acres for a regional park at East Sooke for $520,000.

The acquisition is more than all the regional park purchases put together in the last four years.

The East Sooke park lies south of Sooke Basin, east of Sooke Harbor and west of Becher Bay. It has two miles of coastline.

Regional district planner Tony Roberts said the provincial government is holding in park reserve an adjoining area on either side of the new park and the acquisition will link them.

"Altogether, we will have 3,000 acres of reserved land and the acquisition, almost four miles of waterfront," he said.

The land was purchased from Grouse Nest Resort, but does not include the resort itself which is further away. The regional district put down $175,000 and will pay $175,000 Dec. 1, 1971, and $170,000 Dec. 1, 1972. One-third of the cost will come from the provincial government via the regional parks legislation aid.

'Most Sensational Thing'

Regional district chairman, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, in formally announcing the acquisition, said it is "by far the most dramatic and sensational thing the Capital Regional District has done to date.

"In one purchase we have more than doubled our park holding and, far more important than that, have obtained for the people what could be the last few miles of wilderness waterfront on the southern end of Vancouver Island.

"I would be remiss if I did not congratulate the two regional district officials involved in working out the details of the purchase, A. H. (Tony) Roberts, planning director, and R. W. Long, executive director.

"The negotiations were complicated and at times difficult and I am more than happy that Mr. Long was able to bring them to a successful conclusion before he leaves the region for other fields. (Long is leaving the district for a new job with the Municipal Finance Authority of B.C.)

"Our regional parks acquisition program has been a tremendous success since its inception four years ago, but this is the greatest triumph of all."

The regional district, before the East Sooke purchase, had acquired 1,433 acres in various locations for $731,000. Biggest of these was Elk-Beaver Lake, 960 acres, formerly owned by Victoria city.

Bays, Beaches, Even Mountain

The district's parks program is financed by one-half mill annual contributions from participating municipalities and electoral areas plus the one-third provincial grant.

The East Sooke park features rocky, sloping land, bays, small beaches and open dry landscape. Although the coast is in places steep and rough, it is not so rugged that a good trail could not be cut which would provide water and viewpoint access, said Roberts.

The park has wild life and flora of special interest and is less than an hour's drive from Victoria. It includes Mount Maguire, 900 feet high.

The district's five-year park acquisition program ends next year and the regional board will have to decide:

1. Whether the district continues to just acquire land for the future;
2. Whether to continue a modified acquisition program while shifting part of its half-mill budget to development;
3. Whether to halt the acquisition program for a couple of years and use the half-mill money for a crash development program.

Resignation Submitted By Math Head at Uvic

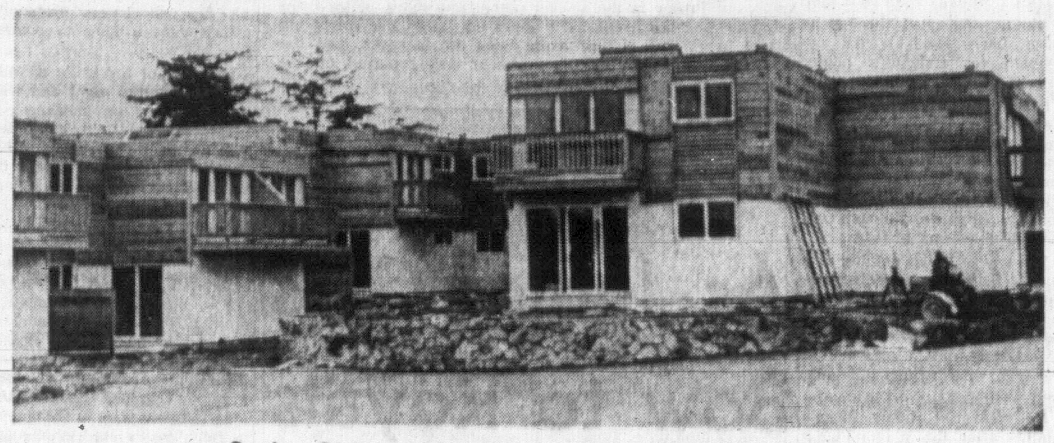
The head of the University of Victoria mathematics department submitted his resignation last week, it was learned today.

Dr. Sudhish G. Ghurye became head of the department July 1.

"I can say this, my resignation has not yet been accepted," he said today, but declined to comment on the reasons for his decision.

Ghurye had not heard of a petition signed by a majority of mathematics faculty members which reportedly called on Uvic president Dr. Bruce Partridge not to accept the resignation.

Family Housing Project, off Scotia Street



Senior Citizens Housing, opposite Hampton Park

MAYOR 'EXTREMELY ENTHUSIASTIC'

Low-Rent Homes Soon Open

Two low-rental housing schemes in Saanich are nearing completion.

An 81-suite senior citizens apartment, at Hampton and Seaton opposite Hampton Park in the Tillicum district, is expected to be finished next month.

A 20-unit family housing scheme, comprising five quadruplexes on Scotia Street in the Cloverdale area, should be ready in January.

It has taken just over four years since Ald. Edith Gunning, then chairman of the health and welfare committee and now chairman of the municipal housing committee, provided the initial impetus for the municipally-initiated housing plans.

Both projects are financed by the federal and provincial governments.

The senior citizens apartment has drawn praise for its non-institutional appearance, in stark contrast to the usual box-like apartments in Greater Victoria.

"I am extremely enthusiastic," said Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis.

The two-storey lumber and stucco building, being built by Dawson Developments Ltd. of Vancouver for $633,785, has the appearance of townhouses with its shape and conscious attempt to not to provide a solid-wall view.

The site area is 1½ acres and is within a block or two of a lawn bowling club and the Saanich Senior Citizens Activity Centre.

The original architecture was created by Bernard Lam of the provincial public works department, working with F. B. Simpson, after Saanich council rejected three proposals by builders in 1969 because they were box-like buildings.

The building will provide 14 one-bedroom suites and 67 bachelor suites with a lounge, games room, social room, four laundry rooms, a nurse's room and four storage rooms.

Construction started last July. The land was made available by Saanich for $26,600.

Over at Scotia Street, contractor Frank Krieger is building 20 three-bedroom family units in five quadruplexes. The design is a variation of the townhouse scheme, with two floors and stucco and wood shingle on the outside.

Krieger said the unit price is $15,600, putting the total cost at $313,000.

Completion of the quadruplexes will bring to a close the Saanich family housing scheme, which started off as a unique dispersed project in which single-family houses were bought in different areas and rented to low-income families.

This ran into cost problems with a price peg of $14,000. It was possible to purchase only 15 houses.

Mrs. Gunning said much credit for the quadruplex development goes to the Victoria Home Builders' Association which ran a design competition.

She said rents have not been fixed for the senior citizens accommodation but she thought it would be in the $55 to $60 a month range.

The family housing would have rent scaled to income, from one-quarter to one-third, in much the same way as the Rose-Blanshard housing in Victoria.

Occupants will be chosen on the basis of need and date of application, she said.

Responsibility for the management and operation of both housing projects is that of the B.C. Housing-Management Commission.

'Can't Possibly Be That Many Grievances'

Victoria council's finance committee today showed little sympathy to requests for establishment of a rental grievance board and referred the matter to Intermunicipal Committee.

The committee had asked for a report from city manager Dennis Young but Young declined any definite recommendations.

Ald. Ove Witt said creation of a grievance board under the enabling laws of the province seems like "a lot of money for a few grievances."

He asked if there were any complaints from people "outside of this mouthy guy here," referring to Brian Jewitt, president of the Capital Region Tenants' Association.

Ald. Percy Frampton said "there can't possibly be that many" grievances that such a board is required.

AMPLE AREA

Ald. Tom Christie suggested turning the matter over to the Intermunicipal Committee because the tenants' association obviously took in a larger area than Victoria.

Young told the committee the city solicitor has pointed out there is ample recourse for grievances through the courts under B.C. landlord and tenant legislation.

But Young offered the example that the cost of recovering half a month's rent through the courts would amount to more than the recovery.

"It is frequently a costly procedure to haggle over half a month's rent," he said.

HIGH RENTS

City assessor Alf Joyce told the committee that most complaints his office receives from tenants are over allegedly too high rents. There are also complaints that people are forced out of apartments when they are suddenly given 30 days' notice, "but there's nothing we can do about it."

Young's report said Vancouver's year-old grievance board office receives about 50 complaints a day.

Decision to refer the question of a grievance board to the Intermunicipal Committee did not cancel plans for a tenant demonstration at city hall.

The demonstration was to have occurred at 3 p.m. today by members of the Capital Region Tenants' Association.

Six Injured In Car Crash

A spectacular crash at the intersection of Cook and Yates at 12:47 a.m. today sent six people to St. Joseph's Hospital and caused a total of $2,000 damage to two cars.

Michael Lee, 20, of 534½ Pandora, was driving north on Cook and Robert McAvoy, 31, of 587 Forward in Colwood, was driving west on Yates when the collision occurred.

In satisfactory condition at St. Joseph's is Clifton Mak, 22, of 2596 Wesley Place, with severe cuts to his face and head.

Treated and released after the crash were Chester Chew, 18, face and knee cuts; Jim Lee Duo Shen, 19, hand and face cuts; Robbie Ping Song Chen, 20, arm and leg injuries. All were from 2596 Wesley Place.

The two drivers were also injured, McAvoy with face and eye cuts, Lee with a broken collar bone and head injuries.

Ice Arena Vote Decided

The unorganized areas of Colwood, Langford and Metchosin will vote separately but simultaneously Dec. 12 on an ice arena referendum.

The move follows a decision by J. D. Baird, inspector of municipalities at the municipal affairs department, who said he is not prepared to approve establishment of Langford, Colwood and Metchosin as a specified area for this purpose.

Under a specified area, the vote would be totalled and 60 per cent over-all would be necessary for passage. Under the new move, 60 per cent approval is needed in each of the three areas.

This means the vote will be on the same basis as the referendum in which the old Colwood racetrack was bought for a local park.

In that vote, Metchosin failed to register 60 per cent and Langford and Colwood went ahead on their own. Indications this time are that if any one area votes no, the whole measure will fail.

Directors of the Capital Regional District gave approval to the necessary bylaw Wednesday. Charges for the arena are a responsibility of the affected areas only.

The bylaw states that the arena must not cost more than $750,000 and borrowing must not be at an interest rate greater than 9 per cent.

Arthur Mayse...

LAST APRIL, I REported to you on a group of mothers whose common denominator is one of the strangest, saddest problems known to medicine. Each has an autistic child whom she and her husband hope to save from the fate that society routinely imposes on children so afflicted.

This is to be lumped with the retarded or the emotionally disturbed, and so deprived of the highly-specialized treatment their condition demands.

By way of a recap, autism is a turning-off by the child who enters life inadequately equipped to channel the stimuli of his senses. He escapes this intolerable bombardment by retreating inward, and resists every attempt to bring him out of his never-never world.

But what nature denied him, specialized training and teaching can in large measure supply.

The mothers, guided by Victoria psychiatrist Dr. Phillip Ney, were doing their best to bring their autistic children out of their never-never land. Something else was needed however: a special class for the school-age autistic in which the slow, patient, task of restoration could continue.

The next chapter was one of progress and of hope.

The parents concerned believed their chances of obtaining help for their children would be better if they set up an organization. With the help of a lawyer who was quick to volunteer his services, they formed Victoria Society for Autistic Children . . . Canada's first.

The mothers who had been meeting weekly with Dr. Ney at Eric Martin Institute were joined by others. Today, membership stands at 18.

A few weeks ago, Canada's first training centre for autistic children opened at Queen Alexandra Solarium.

It was, and is, little more than a beginning: a pilot project freighted with hope and functioning on much less than a shoestring.

Four autistic children — all the project can handle at the moment — are delivered and called for each school day.

A teacher has been serving without pay. She's being trained by Ney in the special techniques and methods required of those who would get through to the autistic. Other volunteers in training assist her.

But the key-word here is temporary. Unless this class can be brought into the public education system where it belongs, it is going to become a lost cause.

A permanent classroom is needed.

In spite of her will to help, the teacher cannot and shouldn't be expected to serve without salary.

Nor can the class function indefinitely without equipment designed to meet the needs of the autistic child.

The Society for Autistic Children is all too aware of these facts. It has no regular funds outside membership fees which represent no more than a drop in the bucket.

It has sought help from Greater Victoria School Board. The board had none to offer.

The Society appealed to the Community Chest, and received a sympathetic hearing. But the Red Feather budget had been made up for this year.

Clubs and organizations approached wished the project well, but are committed to other undertakings.

That is how matters stand today.

Our British Columbia education system provides for the retarded child. There are schools and classrooms. For the emotionally disturbed, the same. But for the autistic child, who is neither one nor the other, no provision whatever.

Apart from the four children in the pilot project, this city's school-age autistics are variously distributed in classrooms and institutions set up to cope with all problems save theirs. Their number is not large: an educated guess sets it at about 14.

Their tragedy is that they aren't receiving the handling which would recover most of them at least to the point where they'd eventually fit into standard school classes.

I think these children should have their chance. I think you should be aware that unless one public school classroom, one teacher's salary and a little equipment is provided from your school taxes, it's probable that they will remain condemned for life to the autist's shadow-world.

And if you feel that no child who can be saved should be so cut off, you may share my anger over a situation that cries out for remedy.

Notes from an uncashed win ticket, or as an Irishman would appreciate having it put on the record: Barcaldine, the greatest horse ever to represent Ireland, was never beaten. Foaled in 1878, his super race was when he gave Hackness, winner of the famed Cambridgeshire, a 50-yard start, and beat him easily. In that race he carried 136 pounds, Hackness, 156. An ailing leg forced him into stud, for $40,000, a record for that era.

So be it, and aspiring jockeys can take heart in the fact that Eddie Arcaro, considered one of the most proficent of all hardboots, rode 250 losers before he won his first . . . On the same subject, jockey Sandy Hawley who is hot on the heels of Willie Shoemaker's 1953 record of 485, not only has an excellent chance to make it, being at 421, and going strong, but also has a couple of other firsts to his credit. When Shoemaker was the nation's leading apprentice in 1949, he rode 219 winners. Hawley last year had 230 winners in achieving the same honor. In his second year, Shoemaker had 388 winners, the same number as Joe Culmone. Hawley in his second season, already has surpassed that total . . . Incidentally, he will finish out the season in Florida, where the competition is tougher . . . But apparently he has the talent, because last year he was the leading rider at Hialeah, and also was leading at Gulfstream when he decided to return to ride in Canada . . . And so Canada will have the two leading reinsmen in the country . . . Gerve Filion of Quebec, has passed his former world record of 407 wins for harness race drivers, and is building up the total daily.

And here's an observation on Joe Kapp, the sometimes star quarterback of the Boston Patriots: Joe Kapp as a holdout was a somebody with nothing; now as a quarterback with Boston, he a nobody, with plenty . . . Which is all he wanted anyway wasn't it? . . . or then there was quote attributed to GM Bud Poile of the Vancouver Canucks after the Canucks had lost to Chicago Black Hawks the first time in Chicago: "I knew we were in trouble when before the game one of our rookies, Jim Hargreaves lined up to get Bobby Hull's autograph" . . . And if the Canucks aren't yet in the super-star class, as some would have us believe, at least they have one thing going for them. They are clearly the hockey champions of English-speaking Canada . . . The game score is three zip over the Leafs . . . Now, a word for the old timers . . . That fellow who is helping the Oakland Raiders so much in the NFL is George Blanda . . . the news services say he is 43 . . . The secret report is that he is 46 . . . and who won the recent world golf title? Another oldie, Roberto De Vicenzo . . . He's only 47 . . . and that fellow who is scoring all those points for the Red Wings . . . It's Gordie Howe, who else, and he's going on 43 . . . And wouldn't it be something if he could run away with the scoring spoon, again!

And if the's a case of sheer desperation in Detroit, it's probably because of the name . . . The Detroit Lions, until two weeks ago, were considered good enough to win their division in the NFL . . . Then came Tom Dempsey's 63-yard field goal, which beat them at New Orleans; and last Sunday, they lost in the last minute, a game they should have won, against the Minnesota Vikings, the team they must overcome . . . Wasn't it the B.C. Lions who did almost the same thing earlier, losing in the final seconds against Saskatchewan by a field goal, a game they seemingly had won, and then at Montreal, in a game they had no business losing, either? . . . It's the name LIONS that is in ferment . . . and parents thinking of getting their hockey playing sons a yule gift may be interested in this proposal . . . Ray Slayton of 778 Fort Street who has no interest in the publication business, is a personal friend of Jean Beliveau's, and if anyone would like to have the book "Strength Down the Middle" autographed by the Montreal centre, Ray says he will be only too pleased to have it done . . . Contact him early . . .

The death of George Chenier Canadian snooker champion, this week has stirred the memory of one city old-timer, Percy Fitzsimmons, 79, recalled the day when Chenier was operating the old billiard rooms above the meat market on the corner of Douglas and Johnson, and he, Fitzsimmons, who was considered fairly proficent with a cue, was invited to play. "I broke, and Chenier ran off 99 straight points," Fitzsimmons recalled. Chenier also operated the parlors in the basement of what now is the Olympic Hotel.

Nominations Being Asked For Year's Top Athletes

The awards which cover six categories — secondary school athlete-of-the-year, junior athlete-of-the-year, university athlete-of-the-year, team-of-the-year, and over-all athlete-of-the-year — will be presented at a banquet in Vancouver, Jan. 25.

Nominations are based on performances in 1970. A nominee and two seconders are required for the awards co-sponsored by the Sports Federation and the Vancouver Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Tickets for the banquet and further information are available through the B.C. Sports Federation, 1200 West Broadway, Vancouver 9, B.C.

Gage-Cole Victoria's Starter; Cuba Selection Sparks Furore

CARTENGA, Colombia (CP) — Venezuela downed The Netherlands by a lopsided 5-1 score in the opening game of the world amateur baseball championships here Wednesday, but the hottest action took place in a meeting of tournament officials.

Cuba, which meets Canada's entry, Victoria Centennials, Friday, was awarded the 1971 series in a vote by the 12 competing countries. The United States immediately announced it would not be able to compete for political reasons.

The U.S. action caused quite a furore according to informants, but further details were not available.

Meanwhile, the Centennials, Canada's national champions, continued to work out in preparation for their opening game against the Cubans.

Right fielder Gordie Strongman of Victoria, said following Wednesday's workout he expects the weather to be the biggest single factor in the Canadian performance.

"The big thing is humidity," he said. "The ball won't carry far in this weather. It's also tough getting the strength up to hit the ball out of the park."

Coach Bob Lumley said he expects to start Victoria right-hander Murray Gage-Cole against the Cubans.

Gage-Cole attends the University of Washington on a baseball scholarship.

Riders Avoid Elimination With 11-3 Win

CALGARY (CP) — Tackle Ed McQuarters, who has performed such heroics before, intercepted a pass and ran 87 yards for a game-clinching touchdown Wednesday night as Saskatchewan Roughriders beat Calgary Stampeders 11-3 in the Western Football Conference final.

The victory before 23,616 fans evened the best-of-three final at one game each and sent the teams back to Regina for a deciding contest Sunday afternoon. Calgary won the opener 28-11 last Saturday in Regina.

McQuarters, three-time Canadian Football League all-star, stunned the Stampeders with less than 50 seconds remaining. He intercepted the ball from Calgary quarterback Jerry Keeling, who let it pop free as he was hit by a swarm of tacklers on the Saskatchewan 23.

"It took a couple of seconds to realize what happened, then I just took off," McQuarters said.

The 27-year-old tackle from the University of Oklahoma lumbered down the field protected by a horde of Saskatchewan blockers. Before the big break, the Roughriders led 4-3.

ABENDSCHAN ADDS POINT

Jack Abendschan, who also kicked a 22-yard field goal and a single, converted the touchdown. Larry Robinson accounted for Calgary's points with 28-yard field goal.

Saskatchewan coach Eagle Keys said the break that gave the Roughriders the touchdown was one of the few that come their way. Saskatchewan took all eight penalties, which resulted in 29 yards, although Calgary declined four of them.

The key play was nothing new for McQuarters, Canada's Lineman of the Year in 1967, who led the Roughriders to the 1966 Grey Cup with a 50-yard touchdown on a fumble recovery in the WFC final against Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

He recovered Kenny Ploen's fumble after the Winnipeg quarterback was hit by a wave of Saskatchewan tacklers. The six points helped Saskatchewan to win 21-19 and sweep the final in two games.

Wednesday's win was the fifth in succession for the Roughriders in Calgary's McMahon Stadium. The streak includes three victories this season and two last year, one a 36-13 decision in the second game of the 1969 WFC final which Saskatchewan won.

LOSE LANCASTER

Saskatchewan lost quarterback Ron Lancaster early in the third quarter of the hard-hitting contest with an injured back muscle after the eight-year veteran took a jarring tackle from Calgary end Dick Suderman. Extent of the injury was not known.

Nolan Bailey, Saskatchewan offensive end, suffered a knee injury in the first half and is expected to miss the final game. His place likely will be taken by handyman Al Ford.

Linebacker Chuck Kyle of Saskatchewan and defensive backs Gig Perez and Frank Andruski, both of Calgary, had to be helped off the field, but they all returned after a short rest.

Fullback George Reed, recovering from a leg injury which sidelined him for 30 days, was the offensive star for Saskatchewan with 109 yards rushing on 17 carries. McKinnis paced Calgary with 64 yards on 15 carries.

In passing, Keeling completed 13 of 28 attempts for 145 yards, including five receptions and 59 yards by Dave Cranmer.

THE PICTURE WENT OUT SAME TIME AS FOSTER

BOSTON (AP) — A disturbance broke out at Boston Arena Wednesday night, with many fans throwing bottles and chairs at the screen, when the closed circuit television picture went dead during the second and final round of the Joe Frazier-Bob Foster heavyweight title fight.

The crowd of 4,000 fans had watched a live boxing program, the televised George Foreman-Boone Kirkman fight, and the first round of the Frazier-Foster bout when the picture went out.

The fans became unruly as they missed seeing Frazier knock out Foster in the second round, and extra police were summoned at the Arena as it appeared the trouble might get out of hand. The picture came back on, however, and the crowd quieted down as the knockout was replayed on the screen.

It was the second loss in a row for Cats and left the Victoria squad still one point ahead of Vancouver Centennials in the battle for the Coastal Division lead.

Royals moved within two points of Centennials and nine points ahead of cellar-dwelling Chilliwack Bruins with the win.

Lawrence Quechuk opened scoring for Royals on a power-play at 5:26 of the first period, four seconds after Tom Keep of Victoria received a minor penalty.

Royals' Jim Dalzell counted on a power-play in the second period to give his team a 3-2 edge after Scott Munro had evened the count earlier in the same frame.

Mayer proved to be the goat again in the third period when Ian McCracken finished off New Westminster scoring on another power-play.

Terry Richardson in the Royals' net stopped 33 shots, including 17 in the second period when Cougars appeared to hold a slight edge in play.

FORSLUND BUSY

Ed Forslund was kept busy in front of the Cougars' goal, making 35 saves.

Cougars failed to come up with their usual close-checking and allowed the Royals plenty of skating room.

In the final analysis, although Cougars only took four of the 10 minor penalties in the game, three proved too many.

In the only other game of the evening, Kamloops Rockets moved into first place in the Okanagan Division with an 8-4 victory over visiting Kelowna Buckaroos.

Luzzi Entering Political Arena

CALGARY (CP) — Don Luzzi, for 12 years an outstanding lineman with Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football Conference, received the Social Credit nomination Tuesday to contest the Calgary-Buffalo constituency in the next provincial election.

But Luzzi has a problem — he is not a Canadian citizen.

He does have landed immigrant status and hopes to become a Canadian citizen soon.

Under the Election Act, candidates must be citizens by nomination day, which is set only after an election is called. The Social Credit government is not expected to call a general election before spring.

Frazier Good Puncher, Pretender But No King

By ED SCHUYLER JR.

DETROIT (AP) — Joe Frazier is a deadly puncher like great heavyweights of the past, but until he beats Muhammad Ali he will be a pretender rather than a king to boxing fans.

Frazier put his skills on display Wednesday night and was impressive as he knocked out light heavyweight champion Bob Foster in two rounds in his first title defence since he knocked out Jimmy Ellis last February.

A crowd of only 6,300—second to the Ali-Sonny Liston fight in Lewiston, Me. in 1965 as the smallest heavyweight title turnout in modern history—showed up at 12,500-seat Cobo Arena for the feature half of the closed-circuit television double-header. Unbeaten heavyweight George Foreman stopped Boone Kirkman in two rounds in the opener in New York's Madison Square Garden.

But the Frazier victory cleared another block to a fight with Ali.

LISTS POSSIBLE SITES

"I'm not talking about any fights for about three weeks," said Frazier's manager, Yank Durham, who then mentioned New York, Houston and Philadelphia as possible sites for a Frazier-Ali fight which could be in February.

"We will get together and talk," said Durham who added, "He might want more money than I want and then there wouldn't be any fight."

"I want Joe Frazier," Ali shouted after watching the bout on closed circuit television in Atlanta where he defeated Quarry last month in his first fight since he was stripped of his heavyweight title for refusing induction into the Army.

Promoters feel that a fight between the two would be the most lucrative in history—grossing up to $10 million.

BONAVENA FIGHT NEXT

Frazier's demolition job on Foster kept Foster from being the first light heavyweight champion to win the heavyweight crown. Seven previous light heavy champs tried unsuccessfully nine times for boxing's big prize.

"One thing I can say about him is he has a good left hook," said Foster.

"It was three deadly hooks that smashed Foster senseless at 49 seconds of the second round.

"I slipped a jab and hit him with a left hook for the first knock down," said Frazier.

"The second time I doubled up with the left hook to the body and to the head."

Foster got up at the count of nine after the first knockdown and it was obvious he was in deep trouble.

"I don't think the referee should have let Bob come out after the first knockdown," said Frazier.

When Foster went down for the second time, referee Tom Brisco could have counted far past 10. In fact, Foster was still unsteady when his handlers helped him from the ring.

The 26-year-old Frazier packed 209 pounds on his 5-foot-11¼-inch frame as he scored his 23rd knockout in his unbeaten pro career of 26 fights.

For the 6-3½ Foster, who weighed 188, the heaviest of his career, it was his fifth loss in 46 fights and the fourth to a heavyweight.

The sparse turnout at Cobo Arena paid a gross of $147,000. Frazier was guaranteed $150,000 against 40 per cent of all receipts. The fight was seen on closed circuit television at 110 locations, with 500,000 sets, in 91 cities in the United States and Canada and also was beamed to 27 other countries.

Foster's end was 22½ per cent.

Foreman Scores Victory No. 24

NEW YORK (AP) — Unbeaten George Foreman belted Boone Kirkham unmercifully and beat the Seattle heavyweight Wednesday night when referee Arthur Mercante stopped the fight after 41 seconds of the second round.

Foreman, who won his 24th consecutive professional fight, rushed across the ring at the opening bell and pushed the surprised Kirkman flat on the seat of his pants. It was ruled as no knockdown.

Kirkman was up at three and took the mandatory eight count. Then Foreman resumed his barrage. When he tugged Kirkman down again, Mercante warned him about the tactics.

At the bell, Mercante took the round away from Foreman, who outweighed Kirkman 216 to 203, although he had a clear edge.

ELEVEN PUNCHES

In the second round, Foreman wasted no time, belting Kirkman almost at will. A barrage of 11 punches, most of them rights, sent Kirkman down again, this time on his face.

Kirkman got up again but was glassy-eyed and defenceless and Mercante stopped the fight.

It was the 21st knockout for Foreman, who won the Olympic heavyweight title in 1968. For Kirkman, it was only his second loss in 24 fights.

Ex-Browns' Backs Tackle Grand Jury

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Bernie Parrish, former defensive back with Cleveland Browns, was to testify again today before a special federal grand jury investigating possible anti-trust violations in operations of the National Football League.

Parrish was called before the jury Wednesday afternoon following testimony by Ross Fichtner, another former Browns defensive back.

Fichtner said some of the questions the jury asked him dealt with player-management relations and relations among players in the NFL.

He said the question of blackballing players came up, "but I wasn't able to give them much information."

Parrish was with the Browns from 1959 until after the first game of the 1966 season, when he asked for his release. He finished the season with Houston Oilers and then retired from football.

Fichtner, 32, said the Browns did not renew his contract after the 1967 season following a squabble over a celebrity golf tournament in which he had charge of inviting players. He was accused of not inviting Negro players.

MOUNT VIEW VS. COWICHAN

Island Title at Stake

Mount View Hornets and Cowichan battle Friday for the Times Trophy and the Vancouver Island high school boys' soccer championship at Royal Athletic Park.

Cowichan, first-place finishers in the mid-Island league, downed Powell River 7-3 to gain the other berth.

Both Mount View and Cowichan will advance to the B.C. high school soccer tournament scheduled for Nov. 26-28, also in Victoria.

In previous years the B.C. championship was decided between the Island titleholder and the Vancouver-area winners. This year, however, eight teams from throughout the province will struggle for the crown.

Four games are slated for Nov. 26, five for Nov. 27 and four for Nov. 28, including the 8 p.m. final at Royal Athletic Park. Preliminary matches will take place at Centennial Stadium and adjoining pitches.

Other teams entered in the provincial tourney are North Delta, Burnaby North, Kamloops, Winston Churchill of Vancouver, Castlegar and Abbotsford.

Game time on Friday is 8 p.m.

OUTDOOR SCENE

By Barry M. Thornton

Steelheaders anxious for an early start this season will find good November winter steelhead fishing in the Quinsam River. The Quinsam, a major tributary of the Campbell, has one of the most impressive Island runs of big winter steelhead. These early trophies move into the Quinsam during mid-November peaking with a second run in late November-early December.

Completing the deer season last November my partner and I took an exploratory trip to the Quinsam to break in our fishing tackle for the coming season. Our exploratory trip quickly took the form of a bonanza trip during the weekend as we struck into steelhead after steelhead.

On Saturday, in the Island pool alone, we hooked eight prime bright fish, loosing four to downstream rapids and snags and beaching four—all over eleven pounds. Sunday found us back at the river limiting on a pair of fifteens, an eight and an eleven.

Access to the lower Quinsam is readily available for the first mile of the river. Upstream, access becomes a long walk down the Quinsam benches at the power line, at the sand pit and at other secluded points. Occasional side bush roads lead to the top of these benches during the first five miles of the river but are nearly impossible to describe and must be discovered by each angler.

1. Quinsam pool on the Campbell River — Follow the Island Highway through Campbell River and Campbellton taking the Highway to Gold River. Approximately one mile past the Gold River — Kelsey Bay intersection the highway crosses the Quinsam River at its confluence with the Campbell. Park across the bridge. Follow the short fishermen's trails to the Quinsam Pool on the Campbell River above the confluence.

2. Quinsam Campsite pools — Immediately after crossing the Quinsam bridge turn left into the Government campsites. The individual campsites are situated right on the river bank and provide easy access to a number of pools and runs.

4. Power line pools and mid stream access — Follow the access road to the forestry bridge turning left at the top of the first hill. Stay on that road not the intersecting logging roads. Follow that road past the forestry experimental fields until you cross the power line. A long hike down the Quinsam benches leads to a point on the river about two miles above the forestry bridge. Excellent runs and pools are available upstream and downstream from this point.

Back at the car continue on that road exploring any side roads on your right for further access points. A few miles beyond the power line the road intersects the logging company road again. Turn right on the logging road to cross the river.

While one of the earliest rivers on the Island for winter steelhead, success is dependent almost entirely on water conditions. The heavy November rains keep the stream in a constant state of flood or near flood providing ideal conditions for these early maturing fish. However, heavy chocolate floods create near impossible conditions for the angler.

The run is a run of big fish with many reaching twenty pounds. Island steelhead average 5 to 10 pounds with large fish weighing over ten pounds. Any steelhead over fifteen is a trophy of trophies and well worth the gamble of water conditions.

A second major run of steelhead moves into the Quinsam during the Christmas season. Angling pressure is high at this time for the river is well populated with fish and up-Island anglers are aware of this. Runs continue in the Quinsam depending, naturally upon water conditions, well into April. At one time a very productive summer run entered the Quinsam but past logging operations and water diversion have all but decimated it.

The Quinsam is unlike most other Island streams. Heavy algae growth on the river rocks darkens the water a deep sea green, permitting low water passage by steelhead moving upstream. For the angler this means that almost every rock or log harbors a resting spot for the fish. Specific pools exist but are in an annual state of flux. Each year high water changes the river creating new lies and runs. Major pools move, disappear and reform up or down stream.

An anglers trail follows the river upstream from the forestry bridge past the power line. However, the river bottom is an alder swamp and difficult to move through.

The angler fishing the Quinsam is well advised to carry a wading staff and a pair of pruning shears. Steelhead hooked in the river are prone to run out of their lie, streaking downstream around the alder bends leaving the angler hooked on protruding snags. The staff is vital, not only for chasing these fighting fish downstream but for wading the greasy algae bottom of the stream. The pruning shears are necessary to clean the alder branches from your casting areas to permit a proper presentation of your tackle.

One angling restriction exists on the Quinsam. This closure, from the upper falls below Quinsam Lake 300 yards downstream to fishing boundary signs from December 15 to April 30th, is in effect to protect steelhead below these falls during low water when the falls are impassible.

Sabres Help Punch To Rousing Return

By The Canadian Press

Punch Imlach was a little apprehensive Wednesday night about his first visit to Maple Leaf Gardens since his dismissal by Toronto Maple Leafs after the 1968-69 season.

For 10 years, as general manager and coach, he had listened to exultant cheers when the team was riding a crest, and just as often bore the brunt of jeers when they were in a slump.

But Toronto fans were rewarded with four Stanley Cups in the Imlach era. Wednesday night they didn't forget.

And when it was all over, with the expansionist Sabres 7-2 victors over Toronto, those who remained until the bitter end cheered a triumphant return.

In other games, Boston Bruins and New York Rangers reclaimed a share of first place in the NHL's East Division, the Bruins by hammering Minnesota North Stars 8-4 and New York with a 5-3 win over Los Angeles Kings.

Tonight, Toronto is at Montreal, California Seals visit Philadelphia Flyers and St. Louis Blues play the Penguins at Pittsburgh.

Two former Leafs contributed most to the Buffalo offence. The first of Gerry Meehan's two goals gave the Sabres a 2-1 lead early in the second period then Larry Keenan's two scores broke a 2-2 tie as Buffalo built a 5-2 lead before the period ended.

Goyette, Marshall Provide Poise

But it was Roger Crozier, the little Bracebridge, Ont., goaltender Imlach took in the June draft from Detroit Red Wings, who provided the Sabres with their first road victory since they opened the season with a 2-1 win over Pittsburgh Penguins.

Crozier faced a barrage of 46 shots and was clearly the instrument of a Toronto defeat that sent the Leafs into the NHL's East Division basement, two points behind Buffalo.

The addition of veterans Don Marshall and Phil Goyette to the Buffalo lineup provided much of the poise missing from their early games. The two players, training camp holdouts, came to terms with the Sabres last Friday and Marshall responded in his first shift with a power-play goal in the first period to tie the score 1-1.

At Minnesota, the Bruins sharpshooters showed 15,190 North Stars fans why they are favored to retain the Stanley Cup they won for the first time in 29 years last spring.

Esposito, with two assists, ran his individual scoring lead to 29 points.

The Bruins emerged from a rousing first period with a 3-2 lead as they capitalized on a double minor to former teammate Bill Goldsworthy.

Goldsworthy, responding to mistreatment of Minnesota centre Tom Williams by Boston defenceman Don Awrey, was sitting out the second of his two-minute penalties when Fred Stanfield notched the goal that put the Bruins ahead to stay.

The Rangers were down 3-1 half way through their game at Los Angeles before goals by Jean Ratelle, his first of two scores, and Dave Balon pulled them even before the second period ended.

Balon's, his second of the game, was of a somewhat dubious nature as Kings' goalie Dennis DeJordy accidentally flicked the puck into his own goal. Balon, the nearest Ranger at the time, was credited with the score.

Volleyball Title Meet

Victoria, Claremont and Reynolds will join 13 other teams from thoughout the province as play begins Friday in the B.C. high school girls' volleyball championship tournament in Vancouver.

The 16 squads will be divided into two sections for preliminary round-robin competition Friday with the top four teams from each division advancing to the double-loss elimination competition for the title on Saturday.

Sue Holland, captain of the Victoria team, has been invited to try out for the National team along with clubmates Leta Bishop and Renate Krueger and 32 other girls from across Canada.

In addition, several members of the Vancouver Island representative teams are being considered for the B.C. team in the 1971 Canada Games.

Players End Hockey Strike

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Striking members of Nashville Dixie Flyers of the Eastern Hockey League voted early Wednesday to end a walkout and return to the ice in Greensboro, N.C. tonight.

The game had been postponed by the Greensboro club after a contest scheduled in Charlotte, N.C. Tuesday night was cancelled because the players failed to show up.

The players' action brought an uneasy truce in a dispute which began Monday when players received pay cheques minus $70 fines imposed on all members of the team for poor performances in recent games.

Courcy Leads WHL Parade

(Times News Service)

Bob Courcy of the San Diego Gulls scored three goals and added three assists in four games—last week and maintained his lead in the Western Hockey League's individual scoring race.

Courcy has 29 points, including a league-leading 16 goals, and has a four-point bulge over team-mate Gerry Goyer.

Defending scoring champion, Art Jones of Portland Buckaroos, fell to third place with 23 points. He picked up one assist before sidelined with an injury.

Jim Patterson of Phoenix Roadrunners was "player of the week" with five assists in two successive games.

Hoover has a way through washday.

A way to wash.

Hoover washes with an exclusive side-mounted pulsator that gently but thoroughly surges suds through all clothes. And now we've improved the washing action by adding a lint filter. It's very gentle because nothing touches your clothes but soap and water. You get a very clean wash very quickly—just four minutes for a full wash load.

A way to rinse.

While the pulsator is thoroughly washing one load of laundry, the spin dryer is thoroughly rinsing and spin-drying another load. Because it washes and spin dries at the same time, the Hoover rinse-o-matic can breeze through a family-size wash in about half an hour. And with the new automatic rinse cycle, the job is easier than ever.

A way to save.

Besides saving you time, the Hoover saves money. It needs no special plumbing or wiring. Needs less hot water and soap than the big automatics. You save space, too. The Hoover tucks away neatly in the corner when not in use, and has a serv-a-top lid that gives you extra counter space.

See the rinse-o-matic at your Hoover dealer's now. In white, coppertone, avocado, and harvest gold.

One touch locks in exclusive Electrolok Automatic Fine Tuning for the finest possible picture. Every time. There may be other automatic fine tuning controls, but there are none as foolproof or as accurate as Electrolok. That's why it's patented.

Another touch locks in all-new Electrotint* for exactly the color balance you prefer. You tell the set, and the set remembers. Every time. Scene to scene, channel to channel, color balance stays exactly as you prefer. (Best of all, set Electrolok and Electrotint* once, and you'll probably never have to set them again. Ever.)

You vary color intensity to your personal taste with another gentle touch. Adjust brightness the same way.

Now for the practical story.

SEWERS, POLLUTION, URBAN RENEWAL STILL PROBLEMS

Scenery Is One Thing Corner Brook Doesn't Lack

By ED WALTERS

CORNER BROOK, Nfld. (CP) — If scenery held the answer to some of its problems, this western Newfoundland city of 30,000 would have an untroubled future.

Invisible are the 29 outfalls pouring a stream of raw sewage into the arm, an inlet of the Bay of Islands that forms the harbor.

Exhaust from the smokestacks of the Bowaters Newfoundland Ltd. paper mill—the area's biggest single employer—often hangs like a yellow blot. But a new chemical process has removed much of a previously objectionable odor.

The hills and ridges on which the city is built make road upkeep and town planning expensive and difficult.

Mayor Noel Murphy says his aim is to try to improve services without increasing taxes and to "work for the people, not against them."

PUSHES FOR RENEWAL

To this end he has pushed an urban renewal scheme for the city's west side, due to begin in the spring, fought to ease the housing shortage and now is preparing for a battle to give the province's second city control over its fringe areas, probably by badgering the Newfoundland government into sharpening municipal powers.

A fouling of the city's environment seems at first glance to be the biggest problem, but it turns out to be less serious in the short term than lack of employment, housing and money for municipal services.

Dumping untreated sewage into the sea is against provincial law. But there's little Corner Brook can do at present to find a cure.

Dr. Murphy said in a recent interview that he wouldn't even take a wild guess at what it would cost to alter the sewer system.

Studies during the last two years have shown that nature was unexpectedly helpful. Strong tidal action in the Bay of Islands cleans Humber Arm.

"The water tastes good—good and salt," Dr. Murphy said in describing how he often tested the arm waters while swimming near his summer home a few miles from Corner Brook.

DOESN'T HURT FISH

The implication was that if it was drinkable by Dr. Murphy it wasn't hurting fish or other marine life.

A solution to sewage disposal problems might be found in pre-fabricated treatment facilities. Some ideas along this line are being studied by the city.

Pollution from the paper mill is being largely contained.

B. R. Pryde, Bowaters general manager in Newfoundland, said in an interview that the mill's operation now is cleaner.

A change to a sodium-based from a calcium process was aiding pollution control. Previously the mill used only 50 per cent of each log. The remainder was discharged as some form of waste, either into the bay or as gases through the smokestacks.

The new method turns 65 per cent of each log into paper.

Bowaters pumps $22 million annually in mill workers' and loggers' wages into western Newfoundland's economy. It buys about $8 million worth of goods and services every year.

The mill, in the centre of Corner Brook's downtown waterfront area, employs more than 1,100; another 1,200 work as loggers on its widespread timber limits.

USE SOME MACHINES

Mill production runs 1,073 tons daily, most of it newsprint for United States markets.

Mr. Pryde said the biggest change is occurring in the woods. He sees an eventual permanent logging force of 500, highly trained to operate modern equipment.

The company now is using some machines to harvest wood in many areas and is experimenting with others, some specially designed for Newfoundland.

Mr. Pryde said it was not just a matter of saving money through efficiency. Loggers were increasingly hard to find—even though fast workers could make $35 to $40 daily.

Bowaters had to abandon woods operations near the Labrador coastal community of Port Hope Simpson three years ago because it could not find enough men.

Mayor Murphy said there aren't enough new jobs being created to absorb each year's crop of young persons entering the work force.

Most of those graduating from high school had no choice but to enter university or vocational schools to qualify for what employment was available, with the exception of a few menial jobs.

FORCE IS REDUCED

Mr. Pryde said Bowaters has its own apprenticeship training plan. Workers displaced by technological advances were often given the chance to re-train. However, the mill's work force gradually was being reduced through attrition.

Although the mill, opened in 1925, remains Corner Brook's main economic bulwark, cement and gypsum plants and Lundrigan's Ltd., the province's largest road and concrete building contractor, contribute heavily to employment.

Three fish plants at Curling, the city's west end, pay out $400,000 annually in wages. They process mainly herring, which appear off southwestern Newfoundland in the fall and early winter. Skippers of herring seiners sometimes clear up to $40,000 a season.

Deckhands earn up to $8,000 for three months' work, usually depending on whether a skipper has consistent good luck in finding the herring.

The city's west side, immediately east of Curling, is to receive a massive alteration during the next three years.

SCHEME TUCKED AWAY

The federal government recently approved a grant of $1,702,800 and a loan of $1,135,200 for $3.5 million project, 10 years in the planning. The remainder was provided by the province.

The project will create 145 new serviced building lots in an area covered now by decaying wooden buildings and sub-standard housing.

"It's the culmination of 10 years' hard work, of dreaming, planning, high hopes and dashing hopes," Dr. Murphy said in greeting the Ottawa announcement.

With the west side scheme tucked safely away, Mayor Murphy is concentrating on ways to clean up some of the city's fringe areas.

Council voted recently to ask the provincial government to set up a Corner Brook metropolitan board to govern areas adjacent to city boundaries.

In theory, the city controls the rural zones under provincial legislation.

In spite of this buildings—"and in too many cases, shacktowns"—have sprung up, Dr. Murphy said.

The city had been unable to prevent such developments because of weak laws.

Mayor Murphy said the government has the choice of "putting some teeth in the present laws" or setting up a metropolitan board.

It was a problem that could not go unsolved for long.

Part of the program shows the importance of the father, as well as the mother, in the first months of a child's life.

Don't miss this fascinating London Life TV Special:

"The Human Journey"

Part I—The early years

If you've a concern about children and the future, be sure to watch this thought-provoking TV program, commissioned by London Life, on the CTV Network this Sunday, November 22nd. Here are some interesting highlights and a free offer from London Life.

"The Human Journey" is a series of programs about major issues of the day. The first program, this Sunday, is called "The early years."

London Life asked the CTV Network to produce this series of specials because they believe it's a good idea for all of us to look ahead and examine the changes taking place in our country.

Naturally, London Life has a great concern about the future. It's only by looking ahead that the company can provide insurance with the flexibility to meet our changing needs.

Ideas discussed

The first special, "The early years," deals with the years from birth to starting school. Some points raised:

- Early environment can dictate whether a child fails or succeeds long before he goes to school.
- How five different types of mothers affect development of their children.
- Importance of the father in the first months of a child's life.
- How the development of a child can be improved in the first six months of life.

Some of us may not agree with all the ideas discussed in the program. However, London Life hopes you will agree that it's important to explore new ideas and concepts for raising our children.

New research

Part of the budget given to the CTV Network by London Life has been spent on investigating original research about child behaviour.

In this way, London Life hopes the program will add to current knowledge about the development of infants and children—and what they need from our society.

Authorities on human behaviour and child psychology in Canada and the U.S.A. have helped with the research and advised on the setting up and filming of special experiments for the program.

Russ Jackson

London Life has retained Russ Jackson as spokesman for the company during the three programs that make up "The Human Journey."

Russ has long been a London Life policyowner and has appeared in previous advertising talking about his views on life insurance and how he will "double his money" with his London Life policy.

In one of the only three breaks in "The early years" he will show how London Life puts money to work in the country for the benefit of Canada and London Life policyowners.

Russ Jackson will also be seen talking to the staff of one of the 4,000 Canadian companies that have group insurance with London Life. You'll also meet the Jackson family as Russ talks about the flexibility of his London Life insurance program.

Free offer

London Life has published a special booklet based on material gathered for "The early years."

Included with this offer is another London Life booklet called "Plain talk about life insurance." Many people have found this illustrated booklet helpful in understanding the flexibility available with London Life insurance programs. Both booklets are offered free to viewers of the program.

Write to: London Life Insurance Company, Box 3175, London 12, Ontario.

Be sure to watch "The Human Journey" this Sunday, November 22nd, on the CTV Network at 9 p.m. (Nova Scotia and New Brunswick at 10 p.m.)

'Practice Murder' Admitted

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (Reuter) — A Chicago couple have been arrested for a "practice murder" meant to test the husband's nerves for the planned killing of a wealthy relative, police said Wednesday night.

Police said Stuart Goldstein, 23, and his wife, Renee, 21, had been charged with homicide for allegedly killing a waitress Oct. 20.

They said Goldstein's wife had made a confession of the killing when she was picked up in Chicago Tuesday. They said she told police her husband had planned to use the money from the second murder to set up a sex ranch in Wyoming.

Police alleged the pair picked up waitress Alice Deeter, 31, after talking with her in the cocktail lounge and took her for a drive in their rented car. Miss Deeter's bullet-ridden body was found Tuesday in a gulch south of Las Vegas.

Canadians in Hockey 'Stupid and Childish'

LONDON (CP) — John F. (Bunny) Ahearne, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation, said Wednesday: "Canada is not only stupid but childish."

Bunny, who has a transatlantic love-hate relationship with Canadian hockey, was talking in an interview about the chance of Canada getting back into international competition after pulling out of this year's IIHF series.

Bunny was particularly steamed up about a letter he said he received a few weeks ago from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association suggesting that the winners of next year's world title should play one series with Canada in Canada and one in Europe.

CAN'T SUPPORT

"Of course, I can't support this," said Bunny. "By implication, the Canadian team would be wholly or partly pro."

That's where this stupid and childish quote came in.

Canada quit the IIHF tournament last winter because of a squabble over its proposal to play several pros or reinstated pros in the national team, which has been getting kicked around in recent years in world competition.

Ahearne, not too well liked by Canadian amateur hockey officials, has said that he voted to let Canada use the pros. But Avery Brundage, head of the International Olympics Committee, let it be known that any country playing against Canada in the IIHF tourney would have trouble getting into the next Olympic Winter Games.

Ahearne said Wednesday that as of now Canada seems shut out of the 1971 IIHF hockey tournament in Switzerland, even though it might feel like dropping from its customary spot in A Group to the B or C category. He said the top slots are filled.

But Bunny said he likes the Canadians and will be prepared to support them—even with pros—at the 1972 IIHF tournament.

OLD QUESTION

"I stand by the Canadians using reinstated pros," he said.

However, he pointed out, this could bring up again the old question of the Canadians and teams playing against them being outlawed from the Olympics. Ahearne doesn't care to make a judgment on this so far ahead.

But so far as he's concerned for the 1972 IIHF games, "I'm prepared to leave the door open to the Canadians."

Much will depend on how long Avery Brundage, the iron-fisted American who heads the International Olympics Committee, hangs on. Millionaire Brundage is expected to retire in 1972.

That would clear the air for Canadian hockey.

Russians Tackle Eastern League

NEW YORK (AP)—Russia's national hockey team will play six games against Eastern Hockey League teams in a tour of the United States next month.

The Russians have agreed to play professional rules familiar to EHL teams rather than the amateur rules they usually use.

Off-Track Bettors Favored by Ruling

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice Patrick Galligan of the Ontario Supreme Court Wednesday barred the Jockey Club Ltd. from interfering with off-track betting service messengers until trial or final disposition of the dispute between them.

The judge ordered continuation of an injunction guaranteeing the presence of Adrian Messenger Services and Enterprises Ltd. employees at five Jockey Club tracks in Ontario. Adrian operates seven off-track betting shops in Toronto and four outside the city under the name Metro Off-Track.

MONOPOLY CITED

Mr. Justice Galligan ruled the Jockey Club operates a virtual monopoly in southern Ontario and it has privileges in exemptions from Criminal Code gambling offences.

He said the Jockey Club owes a duty to the general members of the public. "That duty is to admit on to their premises, and to make available the use of their facilities, to those who lawfully seek the use of them, and who are willing to pay fair and reasonable charges."

Sir George His Old Self Once More

LONDON (AP) — Former foreign secretary George Brown, a newly named peer, created an uproar in the House of Lords with a fiery defence of Britain's post-war economic progress.

Lord Hailsham, a Conservative peer, made a speech Wednesday unfavorably comparing Britain's record with "that of our defeated enemies and recent allies."

Ignoring a chamber rule against interrupting speakers, Lord George-Brown, as he is now known, jumped to his feet amid cries of "Order!"

"I could never be shouted down in the other place," said his lordship, referring to the House of Commons where he previously served, "and I am not going to be shouted down here."

He then said Britain had handicapped itself after the Second World War to "help our allies and former enemies to get back on their feet."

Pulp Workers Get Back Pay

VANCOUVER (CP) — Agreements have been signed clearing the way for retroactive pay to more than 7,000 workers in the British Columbia pulp and paper industry.

A press release Wednesday from the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau said the retroactive increases average $200 or more.

Involved in the agreement in 10 B.C. mills are the United Papermakers and Paperworkers at Prince George Pulp and Paper Ltd. and the International Brotherhood of Pulp Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers at Northwood Pulp Ltd.

The bureau's statement addsed: "The industry reached agreement with the two unions Sept. 2 but, traditionally, contract provisions, including retroactive pay, are not put into effect until individual contracts have been signed with each union local."

Heat Goes On

EDMONTON (CP) — Cabinet ministers will sit on "hot benches" during the 36th annual convention of the Alberta Social Credit League, which starts today.

Orvis Kennedy, the league's executive director, said the modification of television's successful hot-seat idea is designed to make the Social Credit ministers "as uncomfortable as possible" when confronted on controversial topics by reporters.

Speculation Cited

CALGARY (CP) — Aircraft capable of carrying up to 1,000 passengers were described as "speculation and nothing more" by Transport Minister Donald Jamieson Wednesday.

He told delegates to the International Aviation Conference plans for such aircraft are on the drawing board but said this is not necessarily what the public wants.

'Backlash' Threat'

EDMONTON (CP) — A public backlash stemming from generalizations about university students and their teachers poses a serious threat to educational institutions, the chairman of the Alberta Universities Commission said Wednesday.

Dr. L. A. Thorrsen told the Chamber of Commerce it is unfortunate that many people listen to the oratory of a university staff member or observe the behavior of a university student and conclude that they are representative of all students and their teachers.

"If the public at large adopts this view then, of course, our governments must respond to it," he said.

Man Kills Wife

EDMONTON (CP) — A 63-year-old man was sentenced Wednesday to 10 years in jail for killing the woman to whom he was married for 38 years.

A police constable who found the body of Mrs. Semaka identified a note, signed by Roger Semaka, that had been left on the kitchen table. It read:

"I Rog Semaka, have lived with this woman for approximately 38 years and have got tired of her cheating. I have not much longer to live and I don't see why she should."

Manitoba Liberals Press for Byelection

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Liberal Leader I. H. Asper has again called on Premier Ed Schreyer to call a byelection in the Ste. Rose constituency before the next session of the legislature.

In a speech to the Charleswood Liberal Association Wednesday Asper said both the Liberals and Conservatives have written to Schreyer urging the by-election be called.

NO RUSH

Schreyer has said previously he feels no rush to call the byelection, noting that he is not legally required to do so until next year. The Ste. Rose seat has been vacant since Liberal Gil Molgat was appointed to the Senate, Oct. 8.

Asper said if the New Democratic Party government does not call the by-election, it would "deny justice and fair play for an entire area of Manitoba through legalistic gimmickry, for the unworthy purpose of hanging on to power.

'CYNICAL PURPOSE'

The Liberal leader said in a letter to the premier 10 days ago he urged him to "reject the counsel of certain members of his government who reportedly were pressuring him to keep Ste. Rose seat vacant for the cynical purpose of preserving his government's threadbare majority in the house."

The St. Rose seat is the only vacancy in the 57-member legislature. The minority NDP has 28 seats, the Conservatives 22, the Liberals three, and there is one Social Crediter and two independents.

NEW LOWER PHOSPHATE
SURF
GETS THE BIG OK!

SURF HEAVY DUTY

OK

says Mrs. L. Logan of Pictou, Nova Scotia.

We gave Mrs. Logan an advanced pack of new lower phosphate SURF, reformulated with substitute materials. Here's what she had to say about it:

"SURF has always been a good buy. I have tried the new lower phosphate formula. It still gets my clothes really clean and I'm saving money too. So I will stay with SURF."

This is just the beginning. Lever research will continue to try to find ways to use substitute materials to lower phosphate levels while maintaining SURF's high quality performance.

Stanfield Puts Squeeze on Trudeau For Not Winning Inflation Battle

By KEVIN DOYLE

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield suggested Wednesday that the government wanted to take the country by the neck and shake the inflation out of it, but did not succeed.

Now, Prime Minister Trudeau and his cabinet are helpless in the face of threatening economic difficulties, Mr. Stanfield told the Commons in the first day of a two-day debate on a Conservative motion of non-confidence in the government.

"I have the feeling the prime minister wanted to take the country by the neck and shake the inflation out of it," Mr. Stanfield added.

The Conservative motion asks the Commons to condemn the government for what it says is official refusal to act against poverty and social injustice resulting from a badly-waged fight against inflation.

The government has increased regional inequalities through its opposition to full employment, the motion says.

An NDP amendment to the motion blasts the government for what it describes as unwillingness to assume responsibility for promoting health, welfare and education in Canada.

VOTE TAKEN TONIGHT

Both the main motion and the amendment will be voted on at the close of the debate tonight.

New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas, who moved his party's amendment, said every move by the government seems aimed at improving the lot of the wealthier provinces and damaging the poorer ones.

The government's policies for reducing regional disparities had been a colossal failure. The undesirable effects of the government's program of restraint had fallen heavily on the poorer regions.

The Commons turned to the debate on the economy following several days of clause-by-clause study of the government's bill to replace regulations under the War Measures Act. That debate was to resume Monday.

The Commons will not sit Friday so that MPs will have a chance to attend the funeral of Bernard Pilon, the chief government whip who died Tuesday.

Manpower Minister Otto Lang said Mr. Stanfield doesn't really understand Canada's economic situation or the financial structure of the country.

"He doesn't seem to realize the natural economic impacts of trying to get the economy under control."

POOR NEGLECTED

The economy was moving ahead. It was "basically sound and we are now beginning to succeed."

Rene Matte (Creditiste—Champlain) complained that the government is spending more to entice immigrants into Canada than it is for poor families in Canada.

Large families were an unfailing sign of poverty or near-poverty but the government continued to hold family allowances at "ridiculously low figures."

Prime Minister Trudeau should stop putting flowers in his hair and do something concrete to aid the poor.

George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) said there should be a 25-year tax holiday for manufacturing firms in depressed areas.

This would be in addition to incentives now paid under the regional economic expansion program, Mr. Hees said.

All federal, provincial and municipal taxes would be forgiven for new plants in underdeveloped areas for 10 years under the Hees proposal. Taxes would be on a graduated scale for the following 15 years.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) said the federal economic expansion program should concentrate on subsidizing industries which would not have otherwise moved to a poor area.

In the Senate Wednesday, Senator Ernest Manning (SC—Alberta) said the germs of violent dissent in Canada, not just the plague that they spread, must be attacked if the present Quebec terrorist crisis is to be controlled.

The former Alberta premier, named to the upper chamber Oct. 7, said that to meet the Quebec crisis effectively "we must go far beyond the steps we have taken to date."

He praised Prime Minister Trudeau for what he said was his firm and decisive action in invoking the War Measures Act Oct. 16. It was a "necessary, if distasteful decision."

A CHESS MATCH—LIVE was the description comedian Bob Hope gave royal benefit dinner for the World Wildlife Fund. FOR ANIMAL FUND BENEFIT

Royalty on Display

LONDON (AP) — More than 600 persons paid the equivalent of $60 to $1,200 Wednesday night to dine, drink and dance in the same night club with 18 leading members of Europe's diminishing stock of royalty.

The organizers hoped the gala benefit would raise at least £100,000 ($250,000) for four-footed members of other vanishing breeds. The beneficiary was the World Wildlife Fund, and the party was the concluding event of its annual congress.

The royal attractions were headed by two reigning queens whose husbands are leaders of the fund, Elizabeth of Britain and Juliana of The Netherlands.

Among others in the royal section of the Talk of the Town were King Constantine of Greece and Queen Anne-Marie, Grand Duke Jean of Luxembourg and his duchess, and four future monarchs: Crown Prince Harald of Norway, Crown Princess Beatrix of The Netherlands, Crown Princess Margrethe of Denmark, and Britain's Prince Charles.

"It looks like a chess match —live," said Bob Hope, star of the floorshow. He shared the stage with dancer Rudolf Nureyev, singers Petula Clark, Tom Jones and Engelbert Humperdinck, and master of ceremonies Rex Harrison.

Neil Armstrong, the first man on the moon, sat at Queen Elizabeth's table, while Queen Juliana got Cary Grant.

Princess Anne, in a Victorian hairdo and yellow silk dress, spent much of the evening laughing and talking with Roger Moore, television's Saint.

Hollywood film costume designer Edith Head, seven times an Academy Award winner, chats with members of the international press in London, where she was a judge for a world-wide sewing contest. The 70-year-old designer turned a press conference into a two-way discussion.

Film Costume Designer Proves Short Women Can Wear Midis

By FORENCE DE SANTIS

LONDON — Edith Head, who has seven Academy Awards for movie costume designing and 30 Award nominations, is in London to judge the Singer World Stylemaker Contest, and she's full of both opinions and questions about fashion today.

Miss Head is about the only designer who can turn a press conference into a session where the questions flow both ways. She's as interested in what the fashion press thinks about current trends as they are in what she thinks. Miss Head's career goes back to the Thirties, but she's still eager to hear what other people think.

"Women are afraid nowadays of looking older, some men are against longer skirts, and there's the economic problem of a fashion change," she said, summing up the present controversy about skirt dropping.

She herself was a walking refutation of the idea that small women can't wear longer skirts. She was in a costume with a bolero jacket, a reflex-length skirt whose front invert pleat produced a perfectly calculated flare, and a plain bone-color bodice on which rested a large, antique gold abstract pendant on a necklace.

The costume was in an oversized herringbone jersey of beige and white, and it looked as perfect as Edith Head clothes have always looked on any star who ever wore them in movies.

"The problem right now is how to turn a poor sick mini into a healthy midi," she said cheerfully, using the word "midi" to include all longer lengths. Every month she holds a clinic at Universal Studios for young actresses who want to use their good clothes in the new trend.

"The trick is to change a mini into a midi without it's being obvious," said Miss Head, passing around some sketches. "On a coat, if you're a half-way good sewer, you can add a wide border of fake fur, but be sure to also add cuffs and collar, or your border will look like a make-shift."

Other suggestions included adding a poncho skirt to a mini, an overskirt of midi length, culotte legs or a lot of deep fringe.

Asked about fashion influences today, Miss Head replied, "London is way ahead. Mary Quant started the mini, and the first maxis, called 'granny' dresses, began here. 'Do your own thing' is fine for the individual, but I think it's had a bad effect on fashion."

It developed that what was troubling Miss Head is the current desire to return to costumes, ethnic or folkloric. She has always considered fashion as creative, forward-looking, and is somewhat at a loss to account for the rage to return to any period but now.

She asked the press present at her London conference to account for it, but she still doesn't believe in harking back to other times.

"No, I don't like boots with everything, but I know they're saving the new lengths. Ankle lengths? I don't see them for the kind of jobs women will be taking over if this Women's Lib thing really takes hold."

Miss Head went on wondering where fashion was in all the nostalgia. It seemed evident that she was looking for creative talent which just isn't evident today.

"One thing that all this sewing trend could restore is the respect for quality. When you've spent time constructing a garment, you're not going to discard it overnight. Studio work, such as I've always done, breeds a respect for quality which I can't get out of my bones."

Amid the applause of her audience, Miss Head accepted a sheaf of roses for her birthday.

I remembered how she had once been furious at her movie company when they failed to greet her in New York with flowers (movie companies were then in the first stages of their decline), and was happy for her that at least the new world of self-sewers knew how to recognize a great talent in fashion.

(A Fashion League Feature.)

Designer Edith Head sketched one of her ways for turning a "tired mini" into a "healthy midi." Striped fabric worked on a bias adds a poncho skirt to the mini dress, left, whose hem has been cut to match the poncho top and then seamed to it.

Rum Island for Sale With Strings Attached

RUM ISLAND, B.C. (CP) — Rum Island is for sale with its eight acres of arbutus and cedar; its wild inhabitants — mostly mink, otters, cormorants, loons and herons.

But only, says owner Mrs. Renee Nelson of White Rock, B.C., if it is kept for the enjoyment of Canadians.

Rum Island is one of the Gulf Islands between Vancouver Island and the British Columbia lower mainland, only half a mile from the United States border.

Mrs. Nelson is an American-born museum curator who came to Canada as a child in 1912 and bought the wilderness property in 1945.

Now she wants to sell it to the provincial government with the proviso that it be kept for Canadians.

"I've had two or three private offers but I said I wasn't really interested," says Mrs. Nelson. "I don't want it ever to be sold to Americans."

She adds: "God forbid that the Gulf Islands get any more commercial than they are . . . American ownership is mostly the result of apathy on the part of Canadians who didn't recognize a good thing.

"When they do, it's too late."

Mrs. Nelson says Rum Island would be an ideal addition to the marine park proposed by federal Fisheries Minister Jack Davis.

Blessed event!
This is the true story of a blessed event—and how the beautiful Spartan apple came to be.
Many years ago, the apple growers in British Columbia's sunny Okanagan Valley decided to cross the McIntosh Red apple with the green Newtown apple. The apple created by this union was totally unique. It was a beautiful, deep red. It had a distinctive, sweet flavour. It was equally good for cooking and eating. It had a snowy-white flesh, and an unusually small core. They called it the Spartan apple!
The new Spartan apple was so good that the growers planted more and more. Today, the Okanagan grows almost all the Spartan apples in the world! So you can be reasonably sure that any Spartan you buy is the real thing—nourished by the Okanagan's clear mountain streams and bright, warm sunshine!
Make a point of trying them next time you shop. Ask for B.C. Spartan apples.

Personalized Gifts Take Time But Gain More Appreciation

By HILDA BEASTALL

Home crafted, personalized gifts take more time and thought than just running through a list of commercially prepared gifts. As advertising becomes increasingly sophisticated, so the home-created gift gains more appreciation.

Since sharing is the basic theme of gift giving, one's own recipe makes highly personalized gifts, especially if they are for good food concoctions you have served your friends during the year.

With some recipes, as for cakes, cookies, jams and other foods which will keep a while, samples gaily decorated and packaged could accompany the recipes.

Perhaps you have pickled walnuts, fresh horseradish (either grated or the frozen roots), rose hip sauce, Oregon grape sauce or loganberry jelly among the special delicacies you want to share with friends. Why not include the recipe with the gift?

Most recipe file boxes are standard sizes, so that file cards can be bought in packs, decorated according to your own artistic standards and very clearly printed.

Typing is preferable to handwriting, since figures of quantities must be easily seen and ingredients easily read while the dish is being prepared.

Another idea for home crafted gifts is the collecting of small or attractively shaped bottles and jars to contain dried herbs for cooking, and to hold dried scented leaves and petals for fragrant enjoyment.

Recipes with the dried herbs are helpful just in case the recipient hasn't a clue what to do with them. I once sent a collection of prepared dried herbs in packets, and enquired later how the family liked them when used.

"Well, do you know, none of them came up" came the reply. It had not occurred to me that non-gardeners would think the stuff was seeds to sow in the garden.

Baskets of almost any size are good to have ready for packing little collections of goodies as gifts. Nearer Christmas I have found it almost impossible to find baskets, yet at other times of the year both new and used turn up in the most unexpected places.

If they have been used, wash them in tepid water and pure soap; rinse in clear water and dry at room temperature.

Handcrafted pottery pieces filled with some delicacy you have made lifts something ordinary to the personal level.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Family affairs

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I lost my husband three years ago, and was left with three daughters who are now 13, 14, and 16.

I met a man who was in the same boat. His wife died and left him with three sons, ages 10, 16 and 17. We had so much in common, this man and I, that we started seeing each other, fell in love, and within six months we were married. We pooled our resources and live in a lovely old, but large home, and everything seemed perfect, but it was too good to be true.

I suppose you are ahead of the story because the inevitable happened. Our two eldest daughters and sons like each other too much. We don't dare leave them alone any more. I am going out of my mind with worry. I suppose if a genuine "love" developed between his sons and my daughters nothing would be wrong with it, but I'm afraid there has already been too much intimacy. Please suggest something.—Worried Mom

DEAR MOM: I presume the girls have been told the facts of life, and the boys, too. Under the circumstances, since you feel there is cause for concern, if possible send the girls or the boys to boarding school, relatives or friends. You can't keep them separated forever, of course, but the temptation will be reduced considerably, at least until they've had a chance to meet others and grow up.

DEAR ABBY: I have a serious problem. My husband and I have recently become quite friendly with some neighbors who are about our age—middle fifties.

While playing cards, the man started playing "footsies" with me. I moved my foot and pretended not to notice. Then he grew bolder and started "finding" my foot no matter where I moved it.

I finally told my husband, and instead of getting mad, he laughed and said, "It doesn't mean anything. Forget it."

Well, I can't forget it. I have already cooled off my friendship with the wife, but the awkward part of the situation is that my husband continues to be friendly with the husband, and he can't see why we all can't be friends.

Should I tell the man's wife why I cooled the friendship? Or should I insist that my husband tell the man off? Or should I resume friendship to please my husband?—In Doubt.

DEAR IN: Don't tell the wife anything. But do tell the man that because your husband wants to be friendly with them you will give him another chance. But one wrong move and that's it!

DEAR ABBY: I am a divorcee with two small children. My ex-husband pays me no alimony as he is broke. That's why I divorced him—no support.

Right now my husband is unemployed and he has no car so he thinks I should provide him with transportation every Sunday so he can see the children. I can't see spending my Sundays chauffering him back and forth. Am I selfish?—Griped

DEAR GRIPED: No. Feeling as you do, tell your husband that if he wants to see the children on Sundays he will have to provide his own means of transportation. If he wants to see them, he'll find a way.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ONLY A HOUSEWIFE: What do you mean, "ONLY?" As far as I'm concerned, the job of a housewife is an executive position. In your home you are the Director of Health, Education and Welfare, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Head of Entertainment and Public Relations, and Chairman of the House Rules Committee. And you'd have to be married to a millionaire to be paid what you're really worth.

deep and shallow!
Wide and narrow? Right. New Confidets, from Scott — the first tapered sanitary napkins ever: wide in front, narrow in back. Just like natural body contours. And that's why a Confidet fits perfectly. Stays put. Gives you greater comfort than you've ever known before! Deep and shallow? Yes, both. A Confidet is twice as deep in the middle because that's where you need the greatest protection. Yet shallower at the ends, so there's no bulkiness. That means you get the security of a super pad (when you need it) without the worry of embarrassing outlines! It's the extra absorbency that makes Confidets so unique. And so comfortable. Confidets have just recently come to the West. Have you tried them yet?

UNICEF Calendar And Cards on Sale

UNICEF greeting cards are once more available in Victoria stores.

In 1969 proceeds from the sale of greeing cards provided about half the Canadian UNICEF Committee's total contribution of 1.5 million dollars to the United Nations Children's Fund.

Nineteen different cards, some of them featuring children's art as in the past, are available. Three slightly larger, more expensive cards are the work of artists Edvard Munch, Norway; Francois-Noel Levasseur, Canada and Abel Grimmer, Belgium.

The pictures are reproductions of eight by eight foot murals painted by children from all over the world in Mexico City for the 1968 Olympiad.

Cardinal Takes More Lenient View

LONDON (WP)—In sharp contrast to the outright condemnation of birth control Monday by Pope Paul VI, the Catholic primate of Britain took a reserved — almost neutral — position on the issue Tuesday.

In a speech to The London School of Economics, John Cardinal Heenan, Archbishop of Westminster, said the only observation he wished to make about artificial methods of birth control was that "sufficient throught has not yet been given to the implications of contraception as a way of life and love."

He added, however, "if it is an act of virtue for a mother to use contraceptives it is difficult to convince her unmarried daughter that their use is sinful. The policy of the Family Planning clinics to make no distinction is hard to fault."

His comments came in the course of an urbane lecture on "ethics 1970 style," the theme of which was that moral anarchy had been the accompaniment, if not the consequence, of modern flight from religion.

He argued that man cannot be his own lawmaker, even with the best of conscience, but must take his moral precepts from revealed religious teaching. Only an "informed" conscience — informaed by divine law — can prevent one's going astray.

He noted that both "the prevention of life and the destruction of life have been removed from the traditional moral prohibitions." His condemnation of abortion, as distinct from contraception was vehement.

Elsewhere in his speech, Cardinal Heenan observed that the greatest shock given to mankind in modern times was not the atomic bomb on Hiroshima but the Nazi extermination of the Jews during the last war.

"The realization that national leaders in the 20th century could plan the systematic destruction of a whole race put an end to the myth of human progress," he said.

He advocated showing the films taken on the Belsen concentration camp to young people every year, because "the best way of preventing barbarism is to put it on display."

The full horror of the Jewish persecution in Germany "is scarcely known to citizens under 40 years of age," he pointed out.

The British primate was emphatic in his condemation of pornography. Yet, he said, "all forms of censorship are abhorrent," and "if people want to wallow in filth that is their responsibility."

U.S. House Favors Protectionist Policy

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The House of Representatives was expected to approve today legislation curbing textile and shoe imports in a bitter battle over U.S. trade policy.

Protectionists were confident they could pass the bill and send it to the Senate after beating back an attempt by opponents Wednesday to hold up the legislation to delete what they regarded as its most objectionable features. The vote was 203 to 186 in favor of accepting the bill as it stands.

Wilbur Mills (Dem.-Ark.), chairman of the House ways and means committee, threatened to withdraw the measure rather than see it exposed to hasty amendments.

Opponents called the bill's mandatory quotas on textiles and footwear a dangerous break from American traditional free trade policies, and one that could lead to a world trade war.

The bill goes further than President Nixon intended when he reluctantly supported textile quotas, and it provides machinery to protect other American industries if imports rise above a certain level.

COULD BE VETOED

If the bill passes the House and Senate, as is expected, it could be vetoed by Nixon. But the Senate finance committee hopes to avoid this by attaching the trade bill to a popular measure to an increase in old-age pensions, and no president has ever vetoed a social security measure.

Critics called the import-curbing quotas a move to U.S. economic isolationism.

The textile quotas are aimed primarily at Japan, which is holding talks with the U.S. government on a voluntary agreement that would limit the flow of Japanese textiles to the U.S.

Mills also defended the bill's perpetuation of oil quotas, which opponents say adds $5,000 million to 7,000 million a year to the price of oil.

A less restrictive tariff system, Mills said, would automatically drive up oil prices.

'TOO DAMN POLITE FOR TOO DAMN LONG'

Retaliation Hinted If Bill Passes

LONDON (Reuter) — The top spokesman for Britain's export industries bluntly warned the United States today that if a protectionist trade bill is approved by Congress there will be a danger of retaliation by other nations.

"We have been too damn polite for too damn long," Peter Tennant, director-general of the government-sponsored British National Export Council, told the U.S. Chamber of Commerce here.

"People have come to believe that nothing much will happen if this bill goes through—provided they assure us that, of course, it is not aimed at us. This is nonsense.

"World trade is indivisible and whoever the bill may be designed not to hit, there is no doubt it will hit us all.

"It has been part of international good manners to avoid the word retaliation, but this does not mean retaliation will not happen if this bill goes through. Of course it will."

The bill, which would curb imports of shoes and textiles into the U.S., is scheduled for a vote in the U.S. House of Representatives today.

Tennant said: "The bill invites retaliation the moment it has the presidential assent and retaliation in a form which many congressmen and a great many American industrialists will regret. It has the seeds in it of a bitter trade war."

Atlantic Liners End Winter Trips

LONDON (CP) — For the first time since regular transatlantic services began in the 19th century, no passenger liners will be making winter crossings this year between European and North American ports.

The Daily Telegraph, reporting an announcement in New York by the Transatlantic Passenger Steamship Conference, says this applies to Mediterranean, British, Irish and North European ports as well as to Halifax, New York and Boston.

QUESTION OF MONEY

The first eastbound liner crossing in 1971 will be at the end of March by Cunard's Queen Elizabeth 2 after her Caribbean cruise season. Until then, ship-lovers will have to make the crossing by freighters carrying 12 passengers.

The service is being abandoned for economic reasons and all transatlantic liners now spend the winter cruising. Last winter only four large liners maintained the link—two from the Italian Line on the Mediterranean route and one each from North German Lloyd and the Greek Line.

The Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Canada will make her last crossing of the season to Quebec City and Montreal Nov. 23 before embarking on a cruise season out of New York.

The sailing had been threatened by strike action on the part of stewards who wanted a £25 ($62.50) cruise bonus. A spokesman for CP Ships said today agreement had been reached with the seamen's union for a bonus of £17 10s ($43.75), and the Empress now will sail as scheduled.

Youths Denied Customs Entry

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Canadian immigration authorities refused admission Wednesday night to 25 busloads of youths from the midwestern United States at the Windsor-Detroit Tunnel.

An immigration officer said the youths, in a convoy of buses "of all sorts, sizes and colors", were headed for a rock music festival in Vermont. They also had with them an assortment of potted plants.

The officer said the group had no money and could not meet Canadian immigration requirements.

"Even if they did, they could not pass through customs since the buses were also loaded with potted plants, which cannot be permitted into Canada except under special conditions."

The bus convoy jammed traffic in the tunnel for more than an hour.

The youths had apparently decided to travel through Ontario and Quebec to save toll charges on U.S. highways.

Site Protected

PARIS (AP) — The French ministry of culture has decreed Colombey-les-Deux-Eglises, where Charles de Gaulle lived, a protected site to preserve the village and its surroundings as de Gaulle knew them.

MAN NOT GUILTY OF MURDER ATTEMPT

NANAIMO (CP) — Wayne Allen Dick, 24, of Port Alberni, Wednesday was found guilty of causing bodily harm and not guilty of attempted murder in the Aug. 21 shooting of RCMP constable Paul Sommer.

He was sentenced to 18 months in jail by Mr. Justice Thomas Dohm.

The B.C. Supreme Court jury of 11 men and one woman took 2½ hours to reach its verdict.

Constable Sommer was hit by a bullet which struck his cap band below the badge when shots were fired at a house on an Indian reserve near Port Alberni. Police had gone to the house in response to a telephone call for help.

Police Handling Of Drug Laws Rapped

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democrat MP David Orlikow says police are actually making the law regarding marijuana although they are "the last people to have any scientific knowledge" about the drug.

"There is enough evidence to prove that marijuana is not an addictive drug," the MP for Winnipeg North said during a panel discussion at the University of Ottawa Wednesday night.

"I believe the ill effects of the drug are less than those from cigarettes or alcohol. I am not prepared to say that marijuana should be legalized but we should definitely make a division between marijuana and other stronger drugs."

Three other MPs were on the panel with Mr. Orlikow.

Roch Lasalle, Conservative member for the Quebec riding of Joliette, said he is against making marijuana use legal but the government should be thinking more about rehabilitation centres for drug users than about punishment for those caught with marijuana.

Lloyd Francis, Liberal MP for Ottawa West, said he would support making marijuana use legal as long as it was under strict control, similar to use of alcohol.

"I don't think marijuana will do the younger generation any more harm than alcohol and cigarettes did mine."

Dr. Paul Yewchuk, Conservative member for the Alberta riding of Athabasca, said more information is needed before the government makes a decision on easing the law regarding marijuana.

Problem Defined

WYNYARD, Sask. (CP) — Judge M. A. McPherson said Wednesday one of the greatest problems facing legal administrations in Saskatchewan is how to stop Indians from killing Indians. He made the remark in sentencing Charlie Stoney to five year in penitentiary on a reduced charge of manslaughter in the death of George Machiskinic, 16, of the Nut Lake Indian reserve.

New Prison Boss Aims for 'Normal' Jails

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — John W. Braithwaite, 40, is a lean six-footer with gamblin' boat sideburns and that Johnny Cash look. As new boss of the federal prison system, his appearance shouldn't hurt him any.

Braithwaite, billed by Solicitor-General George McIlraith as an innovator and "one of North America's leading penologists," Wednesday was appointed associate deputy commissioner of penitentiaries.

He will be responsible for the prisoner programs in the 35 institutions in the federal system while Paul Faguy, the recently-appointed commissioner, will concentrate on administration matters.

Braithwaite said his job will be "re-integration" of the 7,000 federal offenders into society. He hopes to make the prisons more "normal," in the sense that they operate more like the everyday world, and establish more community involvement with offenders.

The Vancouver-born Braithwaite breaks a tradition of lawyers and colonels at the top of the prison system. He has a master's degree in social work from the University of British Columbia.

However, he isn't ivory tower. While at UBC, he worked evening shifts at the Oakalla prison farm in Burnaby.

At 28, he became the federal system's youngest warden, running the Haney Correctional Institution for young adult offenders.

While there, he developed a pilot program for young Indian offenders, a socialization program for narcotic addicts and a rehabilitation program for 200 young prisoners.

He set up honor camps as pre-release units and later helped to develop programs in which prisoners worked or studied in neighboring communities by day, while the community used the prison for classes at night.

Severely Disturbed Youth Just One of 'Hundreds'

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The parents of a 13-year-old Surrey boy who knifed his sister, beat his young brother until he was black and blue and held a rifle to his mother, say the boy is not getting psychiatric treatment because of a lack of facilities in British Columbia.

The parents, who asked that their name be withheld to protect their other children, said in a statement their son is a menace to society.

Unless he receives the extensive care he has needed since he was 10, he eventually may destroy himself or his family, they said.

"There are hundreds more like him . . . There is simply no place at all for our son, but what can we do?"

The couple made the statement after Dr. Pierre Flor-Henry, director of Simon Fraser Mental Health Centre, said citizens must take the lead in pressing for establishment of a proper treatment centre for children with severe problems.

Dr. Flor-Henry said there are only eight beds available on the Lower Mainland for in-patient care of severely disturbed children and adolescents.

The couple said their son spent 40 days in a hospital designed for adults when he was 10 years old after he "blew up," slashing his baby sister with a knife, beating up a younger brother and threatening his mother with a rifle.

Abhorred by the sight of their child being detained in an adult institution, the parents brought him home.

After four psychiatrists recommended extensive psychiatric treatment, the boy was placed in a health centre for children, but was there only three days when his parents were asked to take him back because he had attacked three nurses.

Later, the couple appealed to the courts, charging him with incorrigibility and surrendering him temporarily to the care of the superintendent of child welfare.

The judge ordered extensive psychiatric treatment and placed him in a group home in the country, where he has been for the last year and a half. The parents said they have learned the boy has been seen by a psychiatrist for 30 minutes in that period.

Indians to Battle For Rights to Game

OTTAWA (CP) — Erik Nielsen (PC-Yukon) says Indians in the Old Crow area of the Yukon are ready to go to court to protect their traditional hunting and fishing economy from damage by oil and gas exploration companies.

Nielsen, a Whitehorse lawyer, said in an interview that the Indians want written assurances from the government and the companies that the main source of their income won't disappear because of the exploration work in the area.

Without these written assurances, Nielsen said, a declaration will be sought from the courts that the Indians hold aboriginal rights over the land.

The Old Crow dispute is similar to the one that erupted earlier this year on Banks Island in the Northwest Territories. When two companies announced they planned seismic work there, Eskimo trappers feared the work would scare off the white fox which is the main cash source for Sachs Harbour residents.

The Banks Island issue was taken up by the Committee for Original People's Entitlement, an organization of Eskimo, Indians and Metis whose aim is to gain aboriginal rights for their members in the N.W.T.

Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien met the trappers and a lawyer acting for COPE. They reluctantly accepted his verbal assurances he would go so far as to stop exploration work if it proved harmful to the trapping industry.

But COPE did authorize its lawyer to take part in an upcoming Supreme Court of Canada appeal in which the Nishga Indians of British Columbia are seeking aboriginal title over more than 1,000 square miles of land in northwestern B.C.

Japan Worries About Deluge Of Vehicles

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese automobile salesman looked bewildered, disbelieving and resigned.

He had just been told by his boss to take it easy on the old sales pitch. The reason: Rising public sentiment in regard to cars, air pollution and traffic deaths.

The situation represented another paradox in booming Japan, where the auto has become a status symbol but where serious questions are being asked about a deluge of vehicles and the problems created.

The government already has banned automobiles from a number of shopping and entertainment districts in major Japanese cities at certain periods to decrease air pollution. New orders have gone out to police to crack down on careless and reckless driving habits.

A record 16,258 persons were killed in traffic accidents in Japan in 1969.

One Car for Every 12 Persons

In addition, high annual automobile taxes, a new purchase tax of $55, high gasoline prices, insufficient parking space and road congestion have made the automobile lose some of its attractions.

But officials say the fact that there is today one auto to every 12 Japanese as against one to 30 five years ago indicates that the automobile "boom" is still on because "people still have the itch to drive."

At the last count there were more than 17 million automobiles in use in Japan, about 70 per cent owned by private individuals.

What Japanese automakers are worried about is the lessening of the desire to drive, as the number of automobiles in use in the country reaches a saturation point.

Nissan Motor Co. officials predict the point will be reached in five years if taxes and gasoline prices continue to be increased, road conditions are not improved, more roads not constructed and air pollution not controlled.

Electric Cars Experimented

Automobile makers say they are not in a position to decide tax, road and gasoline price matters. They say, nevertheless, they are doing the best they can to help the country fight against air pollution.

Major makers like Toyota, Nissan and Mitsubishi already are experimenting with electrically-driven automobiles. Manufacturers also have turned to the gasoline-burning rotary engine as a means to help decrease the share of air pollution attributable to the automobile.

Manufacturers say their efforts in helping combat air pollution are "very costly," and to cover the expenses incurred it is "only natural" that more automobiles be produced and sold.

Japan produced 4,670,000 automobiles in 1969 to rank second only to the United States in automobile production. Of the total, 858,068 automobiles were exported.

Nissan officials say that when the saturation point of automobiles in use in Japan is reached, manufacturers may try for gradual increases in exports to counterbalance drops in domestic sales.

They say, and other makers agree with them, that toward the end of the 1970s Japan may well be the major supplier of automobiles to the world, outstripping even the United States.

UNMENTIONABLES POSE PROBLEM FOR POLICE

PENZANCE, England (UPI) — Police have hired a church hall to put up a display of women's underwear.

The garments were stolen from clothes lines. Police recovered the items and arrested a suspect but their owners have been too embarrassed to claim them.

"We thought of displaying them at the local police station," a police spokesman said. "But there wasn't enough room — we couldn't festoon the booking office with lines of frillies."

NEW LOWER PHOSPHATE

SURF

GETS THE BIG OK!

SURF HEAVY DUTY

OK

says Mrs. L. Logan of Pictou, Nova Scotia.

We gave Mrs. Logan an advanced pack of new lower phosphate SURF, reformulated with substitute materials. Here's what she had to say about it:

"SURF has always been a good buy. I have tried the new lower phosphate formula. It still gets my clothes really clean and I'm saving money too. So I will stay with SURF."

This is just the beginning. Lever research will continue to try to find ways to use substitute materials to lower phosphate levels while maintaining SURF's high quality performance.

Royal Adoption Queried

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — A storm has blown up around Margaret, Duchess of Argyll since the 56-year-old millionairess announced she had officially adopted two young schoolboys as her "sons and heirs."

Questions about the legality of her unorthodox adoption, which has not yet gone through the courts, have been raised in Parliament and in the national press. Now the duchess, whose divorce from the 11th Duke of Argyll in 1963 is still recalled here as a sensational case, faces the prospect of being thrown off the board of governors at the school her new proteges will attend.

Worcestershire County Council also took the unusual step Wednesday of ordering inquiries into the adoption "in the national interest." The boys, Richard and Jamie Gardner, aged nine and seven, are the sons of a retired Worcestershire sales manager who described the duchess as a "fairy godmother" and a school teacher who said she had signed away her rights as a mother.

COURTS MUST APPROVE

Adoption societies said Wednesday that unless an adoption has been approved by law through the courts it is not legally an adoption.

Soliciter Patrick Wheeler, chairman of the governors of the private school in Warwickshire where the boys' mother teaches and where the Duchess of Argyll proposes to send them as pupils, said this was not a legal adoption.

He added that if the governors had known the duchess was planning to make such a claim, they would never have allowed her to hold a news conference at the school. Unless the mystery of the adoption process was cleared up, they might have to drop her from the board to which she was appointed two weeks ago.

Meanwhile, Brian Sweeney, 31-year-old stockbroker son of the duchess by her first marriage, said his mother did not understand what all the fuss was about.

"She merely wants to help a couple of young children. Why should the governors object?"

ANGLO-CANADIANS IN BETTER POSITION - EDUCATORS

'Privileges' Blamed for Rise of Terrorism

MONTREAL (CP)—French Canada's frustration and despair in the face of the eternally "privileged" position of the English-speaking minority is blamed by three political scientists for the explosion of terrorism in Quebec.

This viewpoint from Jacques Benjamin, Guy Bouthillier and Maurice Torrelli of the University of Montreal is part of a study of the whole anatomy of terrorism, published in the current issue of the magazine Actualite.

And they warn that if governments allow this chronic social injustice to continue instead of rooting out its causes, then the establishment itself is simply sowing the seeds of future violence.

MUST MAKE ANALYSIS

In a special 27-page section coinciding with the 10th anniversary of the 104,000-circulation French-language monthly, nine separate facets of Quebec terrorism are discussed, including its relationship to education, labor, the arts, the church and the family.

The professors suggest that someday an analysis will have to be made of the weight of history, which seems to press heavily on the present crisis.

"It is not, in effect, just because the French-Canadian . . . has been held back by the English . . . on such and such an occasion that violence is generated," they said.

"It is the fact, that, under the present system, French-Canadians are doomed to a status of eternal minority in Canada and that today, like yesterday and tomorrow, their collective will can very easily be thwarted by the English majority.

"Nor does violence spring from the mere fact that Quebec has five, seven or 10 per cent unemployment, but from the fact that it has been this way for so long and no end to it can be foreseen."

Among the root causes of Quebec violence over the last weeks, the professors say, are the following:

—The authorities are trying to create a Canadian nationalism, while condemning Quebec nationalism as racist.

—The police can go unpunished after an illegal strike, but workers who do the same are fined millions of dollars.

—Immigrants from Germany or Russia enjoy a social position superior to that of French-Canadians.

—The English language is guaranteed safeguards, while it is the French which is threatened.

—The political system is based on the right to opposition, but the mayor will not tolerate the least disagreement.

—When it suits its purpose, English Canada is prepared to see a single-party system in Quebec.

RUSSIANS BLAME U.K. FOR SHIP COLLISION

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The Soviet defence ministry daily Red Star blamed the captain of the British aircraft carrier Ark Royal today for the collision with a Russian destroyer in the Mediterranean 10 days ago.

"One would not like to think that the collision was the result of deliberate actions by the commander of the Ark Royal," the newspaper added.

Giving the Soviet version of the incident, Red Star said the two vessels were sailing parallel courses about 110 miles west of Crete Nov. 9. The Ark Royal was moving at 14 to 15 knots and the two craft were about three miles apart.

"During this period none of the usual signs of preparation for the takeoff of aircraft were visibly observed. Furthermore it did not carry extra light, signalling aircraft taking off," demanded by the international regulations for avoiding collisions at sea, the newspaper said.

Britain has blamed the collision on the captain of the Soviet Kotlin-class destroyer 365, declaring that the 43,000-ton Ark Royal's manoeuvrability was hampered by planes taking off.

The Red Star report revealed the accident to Russian readers for the first time, also mentioning that two Soviet sailors were killed.

Smallwood Sees Jobs For Province

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Joseph Smallwood says if planned negotiations with Japanese industries are successful, between 1,500 and 1,800 new jobs will be created in Newfoundland.

Mr. Smallwood said in an interview today the negotiations would be carried out during his two-week visit to Japan.

The premier and John C. Doyle, whose Canadian Javelin subsidiaries are involved in various industrial developments in Newfoundland, are scheduled to leave here Tuesday.

Mr. Smallwood said the negotiations would not involve any financial guarantees by the provincial government.

Sihanouk On Tour Of China

TOKYO (AP) — In mid-August he promised to return to Cambodia "in the near future." Now, eight months after his overthrow, Prince Norodom Sihanouk is on the tourist trail in China.

The Chinese news agency says Sihanouk and his family arrived this week in Sian, northwest China, as part of a trip to Yenan "and other places."

The party seeing him off at Peking airport was impressive. It included Premier Chou En-lai; the army's general staff chief, Hunag Yung-sheng, and Li Hsien-nien, who doubles as vice-premier and foreign minister.

Chiefs of state who are preparing to leave generally take the grand tour of China first. That includes Yenan, the cave-capital from which Mao Tse-tung and his comrades surged to the conquest of China.

Another Nader Is on the Way

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dr. Adolph S. Butkys, a crippled Villanova University professor, wants to use consumer protection "to make this world of ours a better if not groovier place to live in."

Severely handicapped and confined to a wheelchair since a childhood accident, Butkys — who teaches business — is called by his friends "a happy, garrulous guy who has a super brain."

He hopes to use his thinking powers to help the poor, the exploited and the uneducated to budget their money and get better buys — and perhaps out-Nader Ralph Nader, his idol and inspiration.

Butkys, 35, thinks his dream is close to reality, and that it can take off from the college campus.

That's why Butkys organized the National Student Consumer Protection Council, which moves into high gear at Villanova Friday when some 3,000 students from colleges and universities across the U.S. get campus charters.

Specifically, the idea is to have students go into the slums and help families design a weekly budget by setting up a single bookkeeping system. Or help them choose the TV set, furniture, even groceries which are the best deal for their money.

Butkys calls this "consumerism," and defines it broadly as "any legal but effective activity carried out by all who oppose and object to any and all business operations which profit the businessman at the undeniable expense of their respective customers regardless of the political, social, or economic powers of the customers."

Club Robbed for FLQ—Student

MONTREAL (CP) — Ottawa student Andre Lavoie was convicted Wednesday of conspiracy to rob an east-end nightclub, a holdup he said was carried out to finance the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Lavoie, 22, a sociology student arrested in the editorial offices of Ottawa Le Droit where he was employed temporarily, is to be sentenced Nov. 26 by Mr. Justice Albert Leblanc, who presided over the jury trial.

Lavoie said he was invited to join the clandestine movement early this year when he met here with Marc-Andre Gagne, 25, and Robert Hudon, 26.

They decided to hold up Le Patriote, a well-known east-end nightclub.

Hudon was sentenced Oct. 30 to 20 years in penitentiary after admitting that he took part in 13 robberies to finance the FLQ. Gagne, who confessed to 19 holdups, is serving a 25-year term.

Both Hudon and Gagne are among the so-called "political prisoners" whose release has been demanded by the FLQ cells responsible for last month's two political kidnappings.

PRINCE CHARLES is doing his Christmas shopping like the cautious fellow the most eligible man in the world has to be. Last year he sent 20 girls identical beaded evening purses. The married couples in his set are getting prints of Welsh beauty spots with his own Prince of Wales crest of three feathers [illegible] this year. But court circles say he is still looking around for gifts for the young lovelies who go with him to theatres and concerts and who meet him at parties at the home of mutual friends. He has given no clue as to his choice. Except that all 20 or so will be exactly the same.

CHARLES

Decision was reserved today on an appeal by former Secretary of State Judy LaMarsh against a libel damage award to a radio reporter, Thomas Edward Murphy, former Ottawa reporter who now is moderator of an open-line radio show for station CKWX in Vancouver, was awarded damages of $2,500 last Feb. 9 because of remarks in Miss LaMarsh's book, Memoirs Of A Bird In A Gilded Cage, published in 1968. She said Murphy was "heartily detested" by most MPs and members of the Ottawa parliamentary press gallery. The B.C. Court of Appeals was told Tuesday by lawyer D. K. Laidlaw, for Miss LaMarsh, that the statement was the author's own opinion and nothing more, and as such could not be libelous.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson Wednesday was called the Charlie McCarthy of the chartered banks by George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) after the Conservative member asked the minister to urge the banks to lower interest rates. Hees said that a lower prime interest rate is "not only justified but very necessarry" before the end of this year. Pointing to the minister, Hees said: "When will he begin acting as a financial leader rather than the Charlie McCarthy of the chartered banks?" Charlie McCarthy is the famous top-hatted dummy of ventriloquist Edgar Bergen.

The Canadian Council of Cuhurches was told Wednesday that $110,000 is being spent in Canada this year by church groups to aid an estimated 50,000 American "draft-age immigrants." Rev. Maurce Wilkinson, associate secretary of the 11-denomination council, released the figures at the annual meeting of the council's central committee at Hamilton. "Draft-age immigrants" is the blanket term the council uses to describe draft dodgers, military deserters and American men aged 19 to 26 in Canada on visitors' permits. Canon Wilkinson said the council itself is distributing $26,009 of the money, but most of that comes from churches in the U.S. He noted that the federal immigration department last summer identified only 25,000 such immigrants in the last four or five years, but said they are believed to number 50,000.

RESISTANCE IS EMOTIONAL

Water Export to U.S. Long Way Off

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Canadian water some day will flow to arid regions of the United States, a Canadian water expert and a U.S. resources official agree, but they say that day is a long way off.

"Most Canadians are opposed to any discussion of water export at this time," said Cleo M. Mowers, vice-president of the Canadian Water Resources Association. "Their resistance is emotional. They are hung up on it."

The association is a private one and does not necessarily represent government opinion.

The head of the U.S. interior department's bureau of reclamation, Commissioner Ellis Armstrong, said Americans eventually will have to go outside the United States for water, and Canada is the natural place to look.

"But we are going to have to convince them it is a good idea," Armstrong said. "It is going to be a time coming."

BLOCKED BY DISTRUST

Mowers and Armstrong were in Las Vegas Wednesday at the annual meeting of the National Water Resources Association. Mowers addressed the meeting. Armstrong's remarks were made in an interview.

Mowers said Canadian distrust of the U.S. is the most substantial block halting the flow of water across the border.

"We are madly suspicious of you," he said.

"Our problem is that we want the benefits of your capital without paying for it," he said. "But the great debate in Canadian politics is whether we have already sold our country to you."

Most discussion of moving Canadian water to the United States calls for its transfer via canal through Montana and Nevada into the Colorado River, from which it could be moved to the Southwest and Southern California.

The drawback to that or any other plan, both men said, is the expense.

Steelworkers Unveil Demands

PITTSBURGH (AP) — United Steelworkers President I. W. Abel has taken the wraps off major 1971 contract demands and left little doubt his 1.2 million-member union will strike if necessary to back them up.

Although a "substantial wage increase" will be a major issue in the bargaining, Abel said, priority goes to a cost-of-living escalator clause in the new contract.

"We waived this in 1959, and as a result the membership has suffered ever since," he said.

Abel spoke Wednesday at a news conference where a 14-page list of union demands was unveiled.

Cost-of-living wage escalators usually provide for automatic wage increases if government surveys indicate price increases.

Other demands disclosed by Abel include cutting the five-day, eight-hour work week to four days and improved pension-health benefits.

The average steelworker's earnings, including overtime and other extra compensation, the labor department says, is $4.32 an hour. With the implementation of the third and last phase of the steelworkers' three-year contract with the industry, the average worker now earns a basic $3.39½ an hour. The scale ranges from a minimum of $2.88½ to a maximum of $5.52 an hour.

Woman Confined

EDMONTON (CP) — A tuberculosis carrier has been ordered confined to hospital after magistrate's court was told she had not co-operated with health authorities for treatment. Two doctors testified that the 30-year-old woman had an open tuberculosis that was infectious and that she had not attended clinic regularly since she was diagnosed as a TB victim in 1965.

Up 'til now, the hardest thing to get used to about Contact Lenses was the price.

Now, instead of $150 or more, you can get prescription-perfect contact lenses for $49.50 at London Drugs Optical Dept., with no extra charges.

That $49.50 price includes as many return visits as may be necessary to ensure wearing comfort. And no sacrifice in quality has been made to achieve this low price; London Drugs Optical Dept. contact lenses are made to the most exacting tolerances, with quality checks at every step.

Success with contact lenses depends to a high degree upon the desire of the wearer. It'll take you a certain length of time to get used to wearing contacts. We can't change that.

But we've made it a lot easier to get used to paying for them.

HARDING

Hardy Climbers Claim Victory

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK (AP) — The heroes of El Capitan celebrated their 27-day climb up the sheer side of the 3,000-foot granite monolith and began casting glances today at new peaks to conquer.

Warren Harding and Dean Caldwell sipped champagne and munched fried chicken—their first hot food since Oct. 23—and said their first ascent of El Capitan's Wall of the Morning Light would be their last.

"I feel great, " said Harding, 46, of West Sacramento, Calif., as he arrived on the El Capitan crest just before noon Wednesday, smiling broadly through a heavy beard.

But when a reporter asked Harding, the dean of Yosemite climbers, whether he'd repeat the ascent, he said, "No way, man!"

PLAN NEW EXPEDITION

Caldwell, 27, of Portland, Ore., commented: "I don't think I want to do the same one again. But I'll do others like it."

They have their sights on a climbing expedition to South America.

The climbers said they hope to form an expedition next June to attempt a new ascent route on a 20,000-foot ice peak in the Peruvian Andes called Jirishanca. Then they want to try the unclimbed rock wall along the Angel Falls in Venezuela.

Their first reaction on reaching El Capitan's summit was astonishment at the size of the welcoming crowd, about 75 fellow climbers and reporters who reached a the top the easy way —by a trail on the opposite side.

"God, I don't believe it!" said Caldwell as he arrived on top first at 11:34 a.m. Wednesday. He turned away and calmly resumed the chore of hauling up the 400 pounds of gear the men had carried 3,000 vertical feet and bringing up Harding on the climbing rope at 11:53 a.m. Then their girl-friends hugged and kissed them.

The reunion of the climbers and the girls began a celebration that lasted into the night and delayed their return to the flat-rock-bound valley until well after dark.

125 Energy Experts Launch Wide Study

NEW YORK (AP) — A group of 125 experts in all forms of energy has launched an 18-month study that could have a major impact on future United States government policies.

In addition to projecting the long-range requirements and sources of supply of the U.S. the National Petroleum Council's Committee on U.S. Energy Outlook also is to study government programs and policies affecting any phase of energy supply and demand.

The committee was organized formally Monday and Hollis Dole, assistant secretary of interior for mineral resources, said its findings "should get us back on track as to energy and determine how we should go forward in the future."

"This is the largest group of energy experts ever assembled for such a project," Dole said.

EXPLORATIONS LAG

Greater U.S. demand for energy at a time of lagging explorations for new oil and gas reserves prompted the interior department to ask the Petroleum Council, its industry advisory body, to undertake the study to project demand-supply trends for the balance of the century.

The committee headed by John G. McLean of New York City, president of Continental Oil Co., held its first meeting Monday in conjunction with the opening of the annual meeting of U.S. oil's largest trade group, the American Petroleum Institute.

In addition to oil and gas, the committee includes experts on coal, hydro-power, nuclear energy, synthetic oils and gas from shale, oil sands and coal, and on such unconventional supply sources as solar energy, fuel cells and magneto-hydro-dynamics.

Rare Kangaroos

NEW YORK (Reuter) — The Bronx Zoo has acquired a pair of rare full-grown tree kangaroos, together with a baby kangaroo still in the mother's pouch, it was announced. They belong to the Matschies species, one of nine known species. Only about a dozen such kangaroos are listed in zoos outside Australia.

WIND AND TIDE took just 16 days to carry casual scientific inquiry by bottle about 60 miles from Tacoma, Wash., to the beach at Esquimalt. Cindy Leishman, 12, of 484 Sturdee, took a soaking Monday to recover the bottle as it bobbed near the beach at the foot of her street. Message inside is from Thomas Jefferson of Tacoma, who wants to know where and when the bottle arrived. His purpose: to examine tidal currents in the Puget Sound and related areas. Cindy had to break the bottle to get at the note. (Bill Halkett photo.)

SOVIET VEHICLE KEEPS UP LUNAR TRIP

Moon Buggy Sends Pictures to Earth

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Russia's bathtub-like lunar buggy went into its third day trundling over the moon today showing no sign of ending its trips in the barren Sea of Rains.

Tass said Lunokhod I, the first land vehicle to move on the moon, was continuing its program of scientific and technical research. The Soviet news agency does not usually predict Russian space efforts in any detail although observers presumed the space car would not return to earth.

The eight-wheeled pioneer vehicle, basically a bath-shaped metal tank packed with instruments, rolled down a ramp off the top of its Luna 17 ferry ship Tuesday, pulling off another surprise first in moon exploration for its Soviet builders.

Since then it has taken sharp-focus television pictures while prowling around the flat plain of lunar lava. Some pictures relayed back to earth and shown on television in Moscow Wednesday night revealed how its spoked bicycle-type wheels sank deeper in some places than others.

Lunokhod's equipment includes a French-made reflector for bouncing back laser beams to observatories in the Soviet Union and France to measure radio interference.

DETERMINES DISTANCE

A Soviet space scientist, academician Boris Petrov, said the reflector could determine to within several yards the exact distance between earth and moon.

The government newspaper Izvestia reported that the vehicle could keep moving on as few as two wheels if necessary. All its eight wheels are independently driven by electric power.

If one wheel got stuck in a rift, information would be signalled to earth, Izvestia said. A remote-controlled charge would then break a shaft in the drive and the wheel would be without power while the others pulled the buggy out of difficulties.

Petrov told Izvestia that self-propelled vehicles were indispensable for thorough study of a specific area of the moon.

Another scientist, academician Nikolai Barabashov, told Tass the moon's exploration would be followed by similar experiments with Mars, where it would be much easier for a self-propelled vehicle to move.

Meeting of Poor Has Own Ideas

By KEN KELLY
Canadian Press Science Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Position and cash mean nothing when it comes to invitations to the poor peoples' conference in January.

Even Health Minister John Munro may yearn in vain for one although he authorized the $50,000 grant that is making the Toronto conference possible.

Planning is entirely in the hands of poor peoples' organizations. They have already made it plain publicly that they intend to run the meetings along their own lines.

Mr. Munro has acknowledged in an interview that he would like to be there.

"I'm hoping to be there—that's on the assumption that I might be invited," he told reporters. "And I may not be."

"But in any case I'm certainly going to watch their deliberations."

PROGRAM NOT DECIDED

Conference sources say Mr. Munro's assumption may be premature. The program will not be decided until mid-December.

But planning committee chairman Peter Robinson of Toronto has already made it plain that the format "will allow only members of poor people's organizations to participate."

Informants said the idea is to keep the conference entirely in poor people's hands and beyond the influence of the "system."

They regard it as a "system" approach to use part of the Jan. 8-9 conference to discuss Mr. Munro's welfare administration problems or those of the provincial welfare ministers for that matter.

There have been some hints thrown out that the provincial ministers might also like invitations.

Whatever the planners decide about ministerial attendance or non-attendance, the deliberations will loom large at the federal-provincial conference of welfare ministers here a week or two later.

In fact, one reason for postponing the ministerial conference from October was to see what the welfare recipients produced at the Toronto meetings.

Workers Sound Off

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — More than 500 employees of Malaysia-Singapore Airlines have been wearing noisy, wooden-soled sandals to work since Oct. 19 to protest alleged delays by the airline in settling wage disputes. This week, the workers put their leather soles on again. Their union president said acting Labor Minister Lee San Choon told them they were giving Malaysia a bad image in the eyes of tourists. He also said he would try to speed up wage settlements.

'Activist Journalists Don't Use Objectivity'

HONOLULU (AP) — The director of the American Press Institute says many young reporters believe their news stories "should take a point of view with no pretence to impartiality."

Malcolm Mallette told the Associated Press Managing Editors Wednesday the philosophy of activist journalism "has sprouted and spread swiftly into many newsrooms."

"The new activists contend that objectivity in the news columns should often be cast aside as unequal to the problems of society," Mallette told the more than 400 representatives of AP member newspapers.

Mallette quoted one 24-year-old reporter as saying: "There is too much wrong to allow the traditional constraints of objectivity to get in the way."

"I keep seeing reporters who try to call their moral cowardice distance or objectivity," the reporter had replied in an API survey. "If I can't work for social change through journalism, I'll get out of journalism."

EDITORS OPPOSED

However, Mallette said the AP survey found editors in almost unanimous agreement that involvement diminishes a reporter's ability to cover a story fairly.

Wes Gallagher, general manager of The Associated Press, told the news executives that a reporter should not decide "which side is right and then become the advocate of that side."

"There are enough strident, partisan, intolerant voices today without adding that of the journalist," Gallagher said. "His should be a clear voice of fact—not rhetoric, the voice of fairness—not partisanship, the voice of reason in an irrational world.

"Yet the very basis of journalism—objective news reporting—has come under increasing attack, in some journalism schools, by politicians and, regrettably, within our profession itself."

Gallagher said there are many who question that the journalist can be objective.

"It makes just as much sense to say a journalist cannot put aside his own feelings as to contend a lawyer can't give a client a sound defence because he finds him personally obnoxious," Gallagher added.

Levesque Snipes at Governments

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP) — Rene Levesque, leader of the Parti Quebecois, said Wednesday night that "if the Parti Quebecois did not exist, there would be 10 times more members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec."

Mr. Levesque, here to prepare for the party's regional convention Nov. 27-29, said during a news conference the Parti Quebecois did not believe in violence as a means to speed up Quebec's independence.

By wishing to give Quebecers their freedom by democratic means, the Parti Quebecois was acting as a conductor for those who no longer saw violence as the only course of action, he said.

In the current crisis the Parti Quebecois "continues to fight both Ottawa and Quebec governments."

Mr. Levesque described as "inhuman, dishonest and anti-democratic the Trudeau, Marchand, Drapeau and Bourassa governments."

The Goo of Fellini's Unconscious: It's Becoming a Bore

By PETER McNELLY

When Fellini's Satyricon ended, someone in the row behind us said, "If you ever talk me into going to another movie like this I'm going to kick you in the head."

Whether that statement typifies Victoria's response to genius is impossible to know. However, Satyricon clearly flopped here.

No wonder. It is a bizarre film, perhaps impenetrably personal. The flamboyant subterranean vision of an image-drunk director possessed by his dreams.

I didn't like the movie. But that's no reason to discard it like a scenic postcard from a travelling aunt.

Fellini has made several lovely, sad and subtle films. That Satyricon is so different from these is no reason to say the Italian master has disappeared in the goo of his unconscious.

Satyricon is a series of sketches on imaginatively reconstructed pagan Rome. Because Fellini uses the same characters in different roles, and because it is at first difficult to tell where one episode begins and another ends, the movie is confusing.

Satyricon is also confusing because Fellini never gives his audience time to become adjusted to the grotesque faces and behavior of his characters.

They jump into action without explanation, and we are left alone to start sorting out the meanings of each scene.

Satyricon is confusing for still other reasons. Nothing adds up. The ending is as arbitrary as the beginning, casually inconsequential.

The setting is unfamiliar, not because we cannot reconstruct a vision of ancient Rome — Charlton Heston fixed that for us — but because Fellini's vision is unique.

And the film is confusing because it seems, superficially at least, to assault conventional morality with impunity.

I think Fellini deliberately made a confusing film. I think he wanted to shock his audiences out of the Twentieth Century and into total submission to his imagery.

Only then, he has suggested in the quote which accompanied Satyricon's advertising, will we see what he offers with innocent eyes. Of course, it is too much to ask that everyone drop his ordinary moral code and ordinary expectations.

So Fellini simplified matters by shocking these into the background. To show us what? His attempt to escape a peculiar kind of terror.

Fellini's last two films, 8½ and Juliet of the Spirits, studied psychological and spiritual aridity against a background of sex and pleasure.

Fellini is haunted by a powerfully sensual soul, which, godless, seems to veer blindly toward extravagant gratification of any kind. He hates the Roman Catholic Church for its arrogance, cruelty and power over the body.

But having rejected the church, he cannot jettison the residues of fear it inspired. Fear of damnation, eternal suffering.

With Satyricon, he seems to have dropped his recent preoccupation with God, despair and sensuality and plunged deep into his unconscious desires.

How else to explain Satyricon's amorality, its total acceptance of anything that happens, its wild lust, its freakish beauty?

But Satyricon is not an allegory of contemporary decadence.

Fellini is challenging our conscious values and ideas of human dignity by refusing to judge the behavior of his characters.

On his own terms, Satyricon suggests a life of absolute tolerance and absolute death. Though much of the film is mocking, the laughter is directed more at life's foolishness than at fools.

The main character, Encolpius, is a wanderer who gets nowhere and discovers nothing. Life in Satyricon is short, meaningless and sensual. Only a Christian, it seems, could find it disgusting.

But disgusting it is. If he only intended a simple portrait of paganism, Fellini would not have distorted so much. He asks us to see with innocent eyes, then mocks our naivete with ugliness.

Unable to accept paganism's licence, Fellini ruins its face. He cannot escape the claws of God.

The result is a nihilistic statement demeaning man. Perhaps Italian audiences will find Fellini's conspicous Godlessness more sympathetic to their own experiences with the church.

I am beginning to find it boring.

Spirit Not So Blithe

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Noel Coward's play, Blithe Spirit, is one of those long-term fail-safe comedies that bloom periodically. They're usually a flash-in-the-pan like Charley's Aunt or Harvey, or cream of a big crop like Neil Simons' The Odd Couple.

The Bastion Theatre production currently at McPherson Playhouse proves the indestructibility of some of these things, for the audiences are laughing as heartily as ever at lines and situation created 25 years ago.

In general terms, as seen Wednesday night, it lacks the light, buoyant touch, the air of elegance, the crispness of a sparkling tempo.

As a matter of fact, I feel that the set is to blame for a lot of the problems.

I cannot escape the conviction that at least some of the cast and direction might have been far more effective against a different set.

What we had was garish color in a solid middle class 1930s stuffiness. Try being a blithe spirit in that environment and dicsover what it means to be earth-bound.

There also appeared to be a total lack of co-ordination between costume department and set design. How otherwise could Pat Barlow have been put into a long-blindingly-blue velvet skirt that focused one's vision and hampered her performance throughout the first act.

Pat Barlow, and to a slightly lesser extent, Ann Purdon, are capable actresses who could easily have been excellent. Miss Barlow has vitality, the power of conviction and of getting well inside the skin of her character.

But the director allowed her to use too much of the top range of her voice and apparently had failed to notice that when the two actresses were on stage together they shared e,actly the same tonal level and rhythm.

What I really find it hard to forgive however, is the burlesque made of that wonderful character, Madam Arcati.

The medium is kooky — quaint — bizarre. But not ridiculous.

Hilary Young's Arcati is a parody. The costuming initiates it and her unrelated gesticulation, her obviously phoney walk, poses, blurted articulation are good for laughs but not for a well developed from-within-out characterization — and not for Coward.

Loan Fund for Uvic Students Set Up by Library Employees

A fund is being set up to help deserving students at the University of Victoria by employees of the Greater Victoria Public Library.

They've named it the J. C. Lort Student Loan Fund for their former chief librarian who was forced to resign by the library board Nov. 1.

More than 60 employees and former department heads attended a reception for Lort and his wife Wednesday.

In announcing the establishment of the new fund, Jim Simpson, vice-president of the Victoria Public Library Staff Association, said the fund had been established because of the "respect, admiration and affection" which every staff member held for Lort.

Simpson added that although the fund is in its infancy $185 had already been collected.

He said Lort had approached association president Laura Quance when he realized his enforced resignation was imminent and asked that instead of giving him a farewell gift, if this was what they planned, the money collected be given to Uvic's student loan fund.

Wednesday Lort was also presented with two Eskimo soapstone carvings.

Two former chief librarians were among those who honored Lort Wednesday. They were Miss Margaret Clay, librarian from 1924 to 1952, and Mrs. F. J. Shenstone, the former Miss Theresa Pollock, who served as librarian from 1952 to 1954.

Lort told his former staff that they could look forward to a golden future. "It can't be anything else than better."

FORMER EXECUTIVE OFFICER of HMCS Malahat, Capt. D. R. Leroyd, now commanding officer of HMCS Discovery, will be promoted to commodore Jan. 4, 1971, and appointed senior naval reserve adviser. Working out of Vancouver, Learoyd will visit the other 15 naval reserve units in Canada, co ordinating reserve activities with officials in Ottawa, Halifax, Calgary and Esquimalt.

OAK BAY WOMAN IN RACE FOR ALDERMANIC SEAT

Mrs. Shirley Dowell, 3270 Upper Terrace, today filed nomination papers as an aldermanic candidate for Oak Bay.

A former income tax assessor, Mrs. Dowell, 43, is residential chairman for Oak Bay-Victoria's United Appeal-Red Cross campaign.

A strong advocate of having the Victoria Riding Academy property rezoned from high-rise development to either single-family or parkland, Mrs. Dowell is also opposed to spot zoning.

She is secretary-treasurer of the University Ratepayers Association, a board member of the YM-YWCA, and a member of the Association of Women Electors.

Oak Bay alderman Ian Horne announced Wednesday he will not seek re-election on Dec. 12.

He said he had reached the decision "with considerable reluctance" but added "I cannot see myself being able in future to devote the time that would be required."

Laywer John Goult, 40, of 1605 York, has already filed nomination papers and three other sets of nomination papers have been taken out by would-be candidates.

Peking Names New Envoy To Moscow

MOSCOW (WP) — Tass confirmed Wednesday that Peking has appointed a new Chinese ambassador to Moscow — Liu Hsin-Chuan, a former deputy foreign minister.

Tass reported that Liu was among those present at a meeting between Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai and Vasily Tolstikov, the new soviet ambassador in Peking. Observers saw the meeting as another step in the slow normalization of interstate relations between the quarreling Communist giants.

Uvic Team Wins Rounds In TV Quiz

A University of Victoria team has defeated McGill University and the University of Waterloo, in two consecutive rounds of a national television quiz show.

The team gets $1,000 for student scholarships with each victory.

The Uvic-McGill test will be televised on the CTV network Sunday, Jan. 3. A week later the Uvic-Waterloo quiz will be shown.

Top Prices Paid For Art Works

NEW YORK (AP) — The highest auction prices in history for a single painting and a single sculpture by living U.S. artists were paid Wednesday night for works by "pop" masters Roy Lichtenstein and Claes Oldenburg.

Lichtenstein's Big Painting No. 6 sold for $75,000 and Stove, an Oldenburg sculpture, for $45,000. The buyer in each instance was Rufolf Zirner, a West German dealer.

Fifty contemporary pop paintings and sculptures brought bids totalling $1,179,450 at the auction at Parke-Bernet Galleries, held in conjunction with Sotheby, the London dealer.

The previous high auction price for a contemporary American work was $60,000 for Andy Warhol's painting of a Campbell's soup can, the galleries said.

9 IN MEMORIAM

COWARD — In loving memory of Robert Coward, who passed away Nov. 19, 1964.
Dear Father, you are not forgotten
Though on earth you are no more,
Still in memory you are with us
As you always were before.
—Remembered by your loving son, Rod, and wife, Helen.

COWARD — In loving memory of Robert Coward, who passed away Nov. 19, 1964.
Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear;
Fond memories linger every day.
Remembrance keeps him near.
—Always remembered by his daughter Eleanor, Ken and family.

COWARD — In loving memory of Robert Coward, who passed away Nov. 19, 1964.
I have lost my soul's companion,
A life linked with my own;
And day by day I miss him more
As I walk through life alone.
—Always remembered by his loving wife, Helen.

HOLMES—In loving memory of my beloved husband, dad, granddad and great-granddad, Joseph C., who passed away on Nov. 19, 1969.

PATTERSON—In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Clement R. Patterson, who passed away Nov. 19, 1968.

SMITH — In treasured memory of my dear husband, James Campbell, who passed away suddenly Nov. 19, 1965.
To hide my tears when
I speak your name,
No goodbye, but a broken heart.
Sometimes in the busy hours,
Or in a crowded place,
There comes a floating vision
Of a dear remembered face.
A pleasant word may strike a chord.
So cruel can life be,
You lose all hope, all joy is gone.
The way you cannot see.
But if you grope through tragic night,
There breaks at last, the morning light.
—Ever remembered and sadly missed by his loving wife, Madelaine.

FAMILY AFFAIR. 7 p.m., Channel 8; 7:30, Channel 7. Uncle Bill falls victim to one of the most popular problems of comic strip fathers and one which has had its share of television exposure. Jody and a tough schoolmate are at odds. They settle their dispute in the time-honored, "my father can lick your father" tradition, and is Uncle Bill in for a surprise when he calls on the other parent. Clint Howard and John Lawrence are featured.

THE FLIP WILSON SHOW. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. Arte Johnson guests along with Moms Mabley and Cajun singer Doug Kershaw. The evening's feature had Flip as "Geraldine Jones" accompanying Moms Mabley to a beauty parlor presisided over by Monsieure Rene (Arte). Arte also plays an apprentice holdupman practicing on Flip. An added guest is Marcel Marceau, performing his famed pantomime, "The Mask Makers," and joining Flip in a pantomine duet.

ODD COUPLE. 7:30 p.m., Channel 2. Oscar is a slob . . . and little boys often prefer the company of slobs to that of more meticulous men. Oscar doesn't appreciate this, however. He refuses to give up his Saturdays to act as a big brother to a young fellow who has no father, leaving the situation in poor square Felix' lap.

THE INTERNS. 8 p.m., Channel 2 and 6. Act of God. Intern Greg Pettit picks up four hitchhikers who are seriously injured in an accident. His problem then becomes how to give them medical care and at the same time find help. The show was filmed in California's Bronson Canyon.

BEWITCHED 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. Samantha's going out of her mind trying to rid hereself of her out-of-this-world boyfriend. ★ ★ ★

THE DEAN MARTIN SHOW 8:30 p.m., Channel 8; 10, Ch. 5. There's nothing spectaculer about this Martin presentation, but there's nothing wrong with it either. Vikki Carr, the Temptations and Charles Nelson Reilly are the guests with Reilly again breaking Dean up as a fustrated jolly green giant. Miss Carr's feature is a well-belted "Lucky Old Sun" while the Temptations star with "Cloud Nine" and "My Girl."

IRONSIDE. 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. "The Man on the Inside" Don Galloway as Detective Ed Brown puts his arm on Raymond Burr as Chief Ironside and not so calmly tells his boss he's under arrest. An elaborate frameup begins with information from junkies that it was Ironside who tipped off several dope pushers that a raid was planned against them. A subsequent investigation by Sergeant Brown turns up such damning evidence that the department is forced to jail their "untouchable" man.

THE THURSDAY NIGHT MOVIE 9 p.m., Channel 7. "A Place in the Sun" starring Elizabeth Taylor, Montgomery Clift and Shelley Winters. This adaptation of Theodore Dreiser's best-selling "An American Tregedy" is one of those rare cinematic instances of the film being as good or better than the book. Clift plays a poor mill worker who gets romantically involved with a dumpy blonde co-worker, Miss Winters. A short time later, he meets the lovely daughter of a millionaire and two fall deeply in love. His dreams of a wealthy and happy future are shattered with the news of the other girl's pregnancy. Now he is faced with an agonizing decision. Raymond Burr, Anne Revere and Fred Clark are featured.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

I occasionally see articles by psychiatrists who write that they feel people who develop high blood pressure are of a certain personality type which is the cause of their disease. One article described the person who develops high blood pressure (we doctors call it hypertension) as having personality problems such as "exaggerated dependent strivings, submissiveness coupled with stubbornness, feelings of weakness and defenselessnes, suppression of hostility, fear of injury, and emotional detachment."

This type of theoretical writing is much in contrast to my experience with many hypertensive patients. I have known a number of two-fisted, hard-driving business executives and self-made millionaires who were anything but fearful, repressed, or inhibited. One of these patients dominated one of the toughest unions on the San Francisco waterfront for years, and another fought his way up from being a stevedore to being the owner of a large shipping line. This last man had a sudden big rise in his blood pressure whenever he lost his very violent temper. I was able to convince him that in order to save himself from having a stroke when he exploded at a customer or discovered someone was trying to cheat him, he had to keep from letting his temper get out of hand.

There is no doubt that at times, and in some cases, mental strain and strong emotion have something to do with high blood pressure. I have had patients with hypertension whose pressure shot up 50 millimeters (mm.) or so when they got angry. I remember a widow whose pressure used to shoot up from about 160 mm. (a fairly normal blood pressure) to 240 mm. whenever she had a stormy interview with her good-for-nothing son, who was always trying to break the trust fund which his father had set up for him.

My impression is, however, that the most important factor in producing high blood pressure is a hereditary predisposition to the disease. Without this, a man can live a very strenuous life with plenty of worry and resentment and emotional upset without ever developing high blood pressure. A person needs to watch out for high blood pressure when he knows that someone in his family — perhaps his father or uncle — got into trouble because of hypertension. With a certain inborn predisposition, a person under a lot of emotional strain can develop various types of nervously connected diseases, such as a peptic ulcer, severe migraine, asthma, or giant hives.

6,000 FLQ Leads Checked by Police

MONTREAL (CP) — Maurice St. Pierre, director of Quebec Provincial Police, said Wednesday that some 6,000 leads have had to be checked out so far in the search for the abductors of James (Jasper) Cross and the abductors and murderers of Pierre Laporte.

Mr. Cross, a 49-year-old British trade commissioner, was abducted from his home Oct. 5 by the Front de Liberation du Quebec terrorists. Mr. Laporte, former Quebec labor minister was kidnapped five days later by the FLQ and his body was discovered in the trunk of a car Oct. 18.

Mr. St. Pierre denied that information was being withheld from the RCMP, outlining how the workload in the kidnapping investigation is being handled.

"When the work to be done is within Montreal, Montreal handles it. When it's not in Montreal, we take it over.

"This is the understanding . . . it's very plain."

Asked the RCMP's role, Mr. St. Pierre said:

"They are working with us on both cases. If we need their help, they come in. It all depends on what it is."

He said he did not know of any communications gap among the Montreal, Quebec and RCMP forces.

Meanwhile, the Gazette says Mr. Cross may have been held for a while in the apartment where accused terrorist Bernard Lortie was arrested Nov. 6 and where three other kidnap suspects hid in a false wall to successfully avoid capture.

An unnamed police officer is quoted as saying the hidden compartment in an apartment closet was "big enough to hold more than three persons."

History Society Backs Save-the-Birds Effort

The Victoria Natural History Society Wednesday supported efforts by the Fish and Game Wildlife Branch to preserve habitats for wild birds.

In a brief presented to the Capital Regional District's planning committee, the society added that it does not condone hunting on the Saanich Peninsula.

This possibility has been raised by studies now under way. Present municipal regulations on the peninsula prohibit discharge of firearms.

The society said the number of birds quoted in a recent report are incorrect. An estimate of 1 million ducks is "altogether impossible," it said.

"In spite of these strictures, we support and welcome the basic endeavor of the branch to secure habitat preservation," the society said.

"We believe, however, that in such a densely-populated area as the Saanich Peninsula this might be achieved more satisfactorily if areas were set aside for breeding and wintering waterfowl rather than their shooting.

"If hunting is nevertheless to be permitted, our society, while not condoning hunting, would urge that it be permitted in certain restricted and well-marked areas only."

It said that one of the "most severe difficulties" is that with notable exceptions "many hunters have a very poor knowledge of bird identification and there could easily be irreparable damage done to the populations of some of the uncommon species."

Condominium Plan Eyed

A group of Victoria's senior citizens plans to build and buy apartments in an 11-unit condominium on Jackson Street if city council approves necessary zoning changes.

Architect Kaj Pederson designed the project, to be considered by the Victoria advisory planning commission today.

Saanich Silver Threads member Winnifred Nielsen said planning has been under way since March.

"It's the answer for older people in the moderate income bracket who cannot or do not wish to remain in the family home," she said.

Plans call for eight two-bedroom suites and three one-bedroom suites. Each will have its own fireplace, laundry facilities and sun deck.

Apartments will be soundproofed. They will be located next door to a park in the middle of a single-family dwelling area.

Those involved in the project will either buy their apartments outright, or finance them at monthly payments of $104.

What to Do With House Plants

By HILDA BEASTALL

House plants are popular gifts to take one's hostess during November, but too frequently she doesn't have a clue what to do with them when the flowers are over. A few of these are normally grown outdoors, others are of tropical origin, others bloom indoors and then must go into dormancy.

Hilda

Which are which? And what to do with them?

One of the hardiest we see as a house plant at almost any season is the chrysanthemum. Since it blooms normally outdoors in fall, it likes the coolest place we can find for it though it needs also to have strong light. After flowering has finished, it may be planted from the pot into the garden.

There it will grow again in the spring and bloom at the normal fall season. Before moving outdoors, cut the plant down to about an inch above the pot and keep in a place cooler than house temperature for a week or two just to acclimatize it a bit.

Hibiscus plants are to be seen now in some stores, with their five-inch flowers spread wide and the long stamens united into a column.

These hibiscus have a woody stem about three feet tall with the lovely flowers on short side branches. In a sunroom, glassed-in porch or conservatory-type room as part of the house, such a plant will continue blooming for several winter weeks.

A temperature between 60 to 75 degrees F. on sunny days is helpful if full daylight and a few hours sunshine are possible. Under these conditions give water only when the top soil is dry. Fill the pot slowly with tepid water, let it run out the bottom into the dish and soak up what it can in a half hour. Then empty any which remains.

Hibiscus blossoms fold up and drop after a full day, but more develop. When no more come, cut down watering and keep the plant in a cooler place for a rest.

About late April or early May, shorten all the stems, repot into fresh compost and sand. Hibiscus may be stood outdoors in a sunny warm corner when the nights get warm — usually well into June here. The plant will flower outdoors in July and August.

Cyclamens grown in pots as house plants do not go outdoors at all. In bloom now from greenhouses, they often will continue flowering until March or April if in not too warm a room nor overwatered.

As the leaves begin to look withered and no new ones are forthcoming, the soil is allowed to become gradually dry. The tuber from which the plant grows remains in the pot of dry soil indoors until late August. Then by repotting into fresh soil and watering a little, it will start into growth again for another winter of flowers.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

Generally speaking most deceptive tactics employed in the play are put to use by declarer. The reason is that declarer does not have to worry about deceiving his partner, since the latter, as the dummy, has no role in the play. But when a defender attempts to deceive a declarer, the former runs the grave risk of also deceiving his partner—and this can be ruinous to the defensive side.

But defensive deceptive plays do have their little niche. Here is an example that achieved the desired effect. The deal arose in the Life Masters Pairs Event, which was played at the recent Summer National Championships held in Boston.

Neither side vulnerable. West deals.

♣ Q 10 5

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	1 NT
Pass	3 NT	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♡.

Had declarer had the courage (or the clairvoyancy) to play a low heart from dummy on west's opening lead of the heart five, this story might have been over before it started. Declarer would now have five heart tricks, and assuming that he finessed East for the queen of spades, nine tricks would then be there for the taking. But declarer, unfortunately, could see only two hands, and it just didn't seem right to play a low heart from dummy at trick one.

And so the opening heart lead was won by dummy's queen, after which the 10 of diamonds was led. When East put up the queen, declarer, allowed the queen to win (after all, East had bid diamonds, and he figured to have both the queen and king, expecially when West had failed to lead a diamond originally).

After a few moments of relection, East found the "killing" lead—he plunked down the king of clubs! With the king winning, he then continued with the seven of clubs. Declarer now paused to indulge in some agonizing thought.

From South's point of view, East, who had opened the bidding, really figured to have the ace and king of clubs. Otherwise why would he have played the club king at trick three. So, on the second club lead, South put up the club queen.

Upon taking the queen with the ace, West returned a club. When play had ended, declarer had gone down a trick, losing four clubs and a diamond.

STOP MIDI PROMOTER RETURNS TO STOCKS

CHICAGO (UPI) — Edward A. Toppel, who gave his all for the miniskirt, says he is going back to stockbroking.

When the midiskirt first appeared, Toppel, 29, quit his job as a stockbroker and began selling "stop the midi" buttons in eight cities across the nation.

Toppel said button sales are down lately, but claimed to have sold 75,000 at 50 cents each, clearing $5,000.

"It is the end of an era," he said. "I think the campaign was a success. It gave men a chance to protest against fashions."

Giant Bulldozer Didn't Scare Her

LONDON (AP) — Terence Round, 27-year-old laborer, brooded when his wife, Hilda, went home to mother, but then sprung into action.

He swiped a bulldozer and aimed it in the general direction of his mother-in-law's house.

Before he got there, however, he knocked down two highway engineers' sheds, several lamp posts, schoolyard railings and traffic signs. The 42-ton machine also tore up pavements and lawns. By this time it was clear what he was up to.

Hilda tore out of her mother's house and planted herself directly in front of the bulldozer.

Terence stopped. He told the police later and this came out in the court case Monday: "This is the most courageous thing I've seen in life, a woman standing in front of a 42-ton bulldozer and refusing to move."

He pleaded guilty to the theft as well as causing about $3,000 worth of damage. The sentence: 2½ years in jail.

Study Suggests Maritime Union

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says a 2½-year study to be released Nov. 27 recommends the creation of a joint secretariat to co-ordinate major policy and administrative functions of Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick.

The study was sponsored by the three provincial governments, with 50 per cent of the financing coming from the federal government, the newspaper says.

It says the report and 15 accompanying papers are expected to identify a number of areas in which economies can be achieved and efficiency improved through administrative integration or policy co-ordination.

The story says such areas likely will include medical care insurance, health and welfare, education, highways, labor-management relations, economic intelligence, pollution control, tourism, industrial development, sales tax collection and control and land title administration.

The newspaper says formation of such a secretariat could constitute the first step to the eventual creation of a single Maritimes administration.

It says a co-ordinated computer data-processing system would be an essential prerequisite for such increased regional administration, and an assessment of computer capability will be recommended in the report.

The story also says that initially the three provinces would maintain distinctive individual identities and would probably have the right of veto over crucial matters of special local interest dealt with by the secretariat.

Indians Want Compensation

VANCOUVER (CP)—With a former federal justice minister as their legal scout and lookout, Indians in British Columbia are going after Ottawa for compensation for lands lost and for guarantees of hunting and fishing rights within their lost domain.

He was instructed by the chiefs Wednesday, at their annual conference, to prepare a brief in support of their land claims plus a demand for the return of aboriginal hunting and fishing rights.

Mr. Fulton, now in private law practice in Vancouver, said in an interview that it is expected the brief will take up to six months to prepare. The land-and-hunting question involves an Indian population of approximately 47,000.

Trapper Portrays Grizzly Country

Grizzly County, a film that took three years to shoot in northern Canada, will be seen at the McPherson Playhouse Dec. 3, 4 and 5, with each performance beginning at 8:30 p.m.

It will be narrated by its maker, Andy Russell, author of a book of the same name, who now lives in Hawk's Nest near Waterton Lakes Park in the extreme southwest corner of Alberta.

Russell has spent 27 years as a professional guide, trapper and student of nature.

Police Court

A 21-year-old man who told court here the doctor who saw him couldn't possibly know whether he was mentally ill was remanded to Riverview Hospital for psychiatric observation.

Kevin MacDonald, of 2646 Victor, had appeared Tuesday before Judge William Ostler on a charge of causing a disturbance and was remanded to Wednesday so a doctor could observe his mental condition.

A doctor appointed by the court gave evidence that "I believe this man would benefit from at least 30 days psychiatric observation at Riverview."

MacDonald objected.

"Why would he say that?" he burst out in a loud voice.

"He only saw me just a second. All he did was ask me my name and that."

"Have you any doubt that he is mentally ill?" Ostler asked. The doctor replied he had no doubt.

"How can he say something like that when he doesn't even know me," asked MacDonald. "I'm not that ill."

Court was told the man had recently been a voluntary patient at the Eric Martin Institute for treatment of a problem involving glue-sniffing.

He said he had been under the influence of glue when charged with causing a distrubance by shouting.

MacDonald said he had sniffed glue and liked "the smell of it", but "I can quit any time I want."

He said at the Eric Martin Institute "they took more tests than they can handle and they couldn't find a darn thing wrong with me."

"It's the boy's future I'm interested in," Ostler said, and remanded MacDonald to Riverview until Dec. 16.

Gerard Langis, 40, of Vancouver, who pleaded guilty to theft under $50, was sentenced to four months in prison.

Langis was charged with shoplifting merchandise from the Bay.

Ostler was told he had an extensive criminal record and had only recently been released from prison.

Howard Abercrombie, 35, of 1218 Hillside, was fined $400 when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving Wednesday.

Richard and Kelly Bell, charged with possession of marijuana for trafficking Oct. 13, had a new information read before the court and changed their election to trial by higher court judge without jury.

They waived preliminary hearing and were committed for trial.

Bell and his wife are currently free on $6,000 cash bail, which was ordered to continue at $3,000 each for the new charge.

Jack Cressman, no fixed address, was found guilty on a charge of fraudulently obtaining food from Paul's Restaurant and fined $35.

"You look like a decent fellow who's being ruined by alcohol," Ostler said.

Bruce Radford, 23, of 1825 Fairfield, one of the 113 suspected drug-traffickers rounded up throughout the province by RCMP, pleaded not guilty to a charge of trafficking in LSD Aug. 24 and elected trial by magistrate.

He was remanded to Nov. 26.

Bail was fixed at $3,500, sureties only, after the Crown alleged "an extensive previous history including escaping lawful custody."

A man who said he considered two men in wetsuits as adequate life-saving gear for a third man in a boat was fined $10 for not having the required life-jackets.

David Dormer of 352 Gorge Road told court that while there were no life-jackets in his boat the wetsuits worn by two men were "better than DOT approved."

Of the third man Dormer said:

"He had two moveable life-jackets, if you want to put it that way, sir."

Soldier Didn't See Calley

FORT BENNING, Ga. (AP) — Frank Beardslee, a former U.S. soldier, has testified that he saw 15 to 20 dead Vietnamese women and children at My Lai. But he said that he did not see Lieut. William Calley on the day of the assault on the hamlet.

Beardslee, 23, of Lathrop, Mich., corroborated the earlier testimony of a former army combat photographer who said he witnessed the multiple killings of Vietnamese civilians at May Lai and also took pictures of the slayings.

Both Beardslee and a Los Angeles free lance photographer, Ronald Haeberle, 28, testified they never saw Calley at My Lai March 16, 1968.

The court martial of Calley, 27, enters its third day today. He is charged with murder of 102 unarmed Vietnamese civilians. If convicted, he could face the death penalty or life in prison.

$17,500 SOUGHT

Track Campaign Launched

Students and teachers at Claremont Senior Secondary School launched a campaign Wednesday to raise $17,500 to help finance an all-weather running track, the third in the area.

The ambitious scheme involves selling raffle tickets at a dollar a ticket with the prize to be a new car, the draw being at the end of January next year.

The $17,500 figure represents one-third of the cost of the international-size track. Some of the money is intended to assist the school choir on a trip to the United Kingdom at Easter.

School officials have been negotiating with the municipality of Saanich and the Saanich Peninsula school board for the remaining two-thirds of the track cost.

Organizers hope the track will be a reality for the 1971 spring track and field season.

The only operating all-weather track at the moment is at the University of Victoria's Centennial Stadium. The second, at Esquimalt Senior Secondary School, is near completion.

Teacher Gerry Montgomery pointed out advantages of the track, which could be available to both elementary and secondary schools in the district.

"You just can't get the Uvic track—it's in use all the time from 10 a.m. on," he said.

He said within two years of its construction a program for its full use could be developed.

It shouldn't need repairs for 10 years and would eliminate the raking, rolling and lining that is necessary with conventional cinder tracks, he said.

The track could be built in a month.

Pollution Permits In Doubt

The provincial government can't find out from Ottawa what status provincial pollution control permits will have if they conflict with federal permits under the Canada Water Act.

"At the moment, nobody knows," said Resources Minister Ray Williston following a meeting Wednesday with J. J. Greene, federal minister of energy, mines and resources.

Williston, who has been critical of some aspects of the federal water act in the past, said discussions with Greene were "inhibited" by the fact that responsibility for the water act will pass from Greene to Fisheries Minister Jack Davis, who will co-ordinate Ottawa's anti-pollution efforts.

The meeting was held to review federal-provincial responsibilities under the Columbia River Treaty. Such meetings must be held annually under terms of the treaty.

Greene said the meeting was of an "administrative" nature.

'MY PEOPLE ARE COSSACKS'

Man, 65, Guilty in Machete Attack

Sixty-five-year-old Stephen Trach was found guilty Wednesday of a machete attack that blinded University of Victoria student Jack Whitlock in his right eye.

Trach, a tall, grey-haired man who wears thick glasses, was expressionless in the prisoner's box when Judge William Ostler found him guilty of assault causing bodily harm at the conclusion of a provincial court trial that took two days.

Ostler remanded Trach to Dec. 3 for preparation of a presentence report, and in view of the man's age ordered him released on $500 bail.

Court was told during the trial that Trach had assaulted Whitlock with the heavy bush knife following a drinking bout and argument Sept. 29.

The judge said it was clear Trach had wielded the machete, which has an 18-inch steel blade, and struck Whitlock's eye causing a "grievous wound."

"I am satisfied he was assaulted by this man with this machete," Ostler said, and added that even if Whitlock has been trespassing at the time of the incident the attack would constitute "a great deal more force than necessary."

Court has been told during a defence by lawyer Edward Pollard that Trach had asked Whitlock to leave his premises three times and that Whitlock had refused.

He argued that Trach was entitled to use force to evict him.

The judge, however, said the evidence indicated that Trach had asked Whitlock to leave and then poured another beer.

MOTION DENIED

He said evidence by Trach was "fanciful" and "transparent" and that he believed the testimony of Whitlock.

Trach took the stand as a witness in his own defence after a motion for dismissal by Pollard at the conclusion of the crown's case was denied by Ostler.

The accused said in his evidence he was first attacked by Whitlock, who was a guest at his home at 439 Atkins Avenue in Langford.

He claimed the dispute began when the student began taking pills while drinking.

Court had learned earlier the pills were a medical prescription and that when Whitlock went to take one Trach's wife seized them.

Whitlock's wife asked that he be stopped from taking the pills because "when he takes those pills he goes wild," Trach said.

"He took one every time he would pour himself some rum, and he was drinking two to my one." Trach claimed he was afraid because "I've seen addicts before."

When Whitlock started "getting awful wild" he asked him to leave and got a refusal.

"The next thing you know, crash, he hit me. Bing, bam he hit me twice in the chest."

"When I stood up he hit me twice below the belt and then he kicked me twice in the groin."

Trach said he lost three quarts of blood as a result of the blows.

"He went and picked up a chair and was advancing on us and in one hand he had a knife." Trach said he faced up to the attack, then "I went to the bedroom and I got a machete what I kept for that special occasion."

He said he was hit in the shins with the chair and dropped the machete on the floor before pushing Whitlock out the door.

When Anderson read from a statement given to Colwood RCMP after the incident by Trach, the accused said it was not accurate. He said police had not been interested in listening to what he wanted to say about the matter and tried to get him to sign a confession.

Parts of the statement read by Anderson included answers by Trach to questions in which he referred to himself as "drunk as a skunk."

When asked if he would describe the machete as a "sabre," police recorded Trach as replying:

"My people are Cossacks. To us a sabre is a sacred thing. I would feel sorry for that guy if I had a sabre. I was a champion bayonet man in the army."

In his argument, Pollard pointed out that Whitlock's wound was caused by an upward jab and that Trach had been jabbing at the ceiling to ward off the complainant's chair.

He said it was merely a case of self-defence in "a drunken brawl."

Ostler noted in his judgment Trach's reference to the Cossacks and Whitlock's evidence that his assailant had yelled something similar.

He also rapped the "completely unwarranted attack on the integrity and impartiality of police officers" during Trach's evidence.

Satellite Complex Confirmed

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Construction of an approximately $4 million transmitting and receiving satellite communications complex likely will be under way at Lake Cowichan by late summer.

The station will have a 97-foot-high semi-steerable antenna and a 2,000-square-foot building to house the equipment and operators, a Telesat Canada official said here today.

It will be the main station in B.C. and serve as the western anchor of a national network of up to 35 ground stations, most of them small and unmanned.

One or two remote substations will be built in central or northern B.C., depending on the proposals of tenders for the national contract to be opened Jan. 5. Remote stations are expected to cost about $200,000.

DOZEN ON STAFF

Roughly one-third of Telesat Canada's $90 million program will go into the ground facilities, which are to have a 60 per cent Canadian construction and equipment content.

The Lake Cowichan complex will be manned on a round-the-clock basis by a staff of about a dozen operators. It will provide two-way transmission to other Canadian points in varying configurations, such as two telecasts and up to 80,000 telephone and broadband messages simultaneously.

Besides tranmissions, it will have a limited tracking capacity so it can serve as a partial back-up to the network's main control station near Toronto.

Located alongside the existing Canadian Overseas Telecommunications Corporation installation in Lake Cowichan, it also will provide an interconnection with the International Network of Communications Satellites.

IN TIME FOR LAUNCH

It will be completed in time for the late 1972 launch of Anik 1, the $31 million satellite to be built for Telesat by the Hughes Aircraft Corporation of California with at least 20 per cent content.

The communications department is about to sign a contract with NASA to launch in the mid-1970s an experimental satellite to be built by the federal communications research centre near here.

It will be a high-powered prototype for the second Anik generation of satellites, operating on a super high-frequency range of 12 million cycles per second, which offers the promise of sending TV signals to simpler ground stations costing only about $10,000 for unmanned remotes.

Ottawa 'Cool' To Joint Brief On Harbor Future

Lack of Details Hit By Federal Officials

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — It probably will be several months before Victoria and Esquimalt learn whether their harbor commission ship will come in.

A joint brief by the two councils to the department of transport — virtually repeating one presented last summer by a special delegation sent here — is under lukewarm study, it was indicated today.

The Victoria-Esquimalt briefs have been criticized here as being "too thin and insufficiently detailed" with a particularly large gap left in the presentation because the tangled problem of the Ogden Point grain elevator was not dealt with.

The department currently is engaged in a total review of the National Harbors Board to produce a new policy on harbor jurisdiction and apparently is not deeply impressed with the Victoria-Esquimalt bid for separate and immediate consideration.

There also is a hint that their bid may be considered immature as well as premature.

'Wait for New Guidelines'

"Their request is being considered now but it will likely be suggested to the city that they await the formulation of new national guidelines," a senior DOT official told the Times.

"It will only be a matter of months, not years."

The new policy criteria for transferring some harbor jurisdictions to local commissions are expected early in the new year but, the official indicated, it won't necessarily mean that the Victoria-Esquimalt bid will be granted automatically.

"We are considering numerous suggestions from various cities on what the guidelines should be but once the criteria are set up, each request for a commission will have to be considered on its own merits," he said.

The briefs stressed that lumber shipments through the outer wharves have doubled in the past decade and could be doubled again to about 400 million board feet within three years if a vigorous harbor promotion was undertaken by a local commission.

It added that it would be easy to expand storage area and facilities to stockpile 1 billion board feet to help lumber shipments and further initiatives should be able to add a pulp and paper shipping capacity.

These developments could augment current revenues of about $450,000 realized by the CNR from the lumber trade if a local harbor commission took over but, apparently, the brief makes no mention of taking on the grain elevator operation which currently loses more than $300,000 a year.

"It can't be a very realistic brief if it implies that it should take the profitable operation away from the CNR and leave the losing one in the railway's hands," one critic observed.

"Yet this whole question,

Island A-Power In Works?

B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum was host at a luncheon meeting in Victoria today which included Dr. Lorne Gray, president of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., and representatives from the Duncan - Cowichan Bay area.

The combination led Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife to speculate this morning that Hydro may be contemplating some move on a suggested nuclear generator on Cowichan Bay.

Quaife said he was "in the dark" on the purpose of the luncheon but hoped Hydro would be announcing something about the proposed $150 million nuclear generator for lower Vancouver Island which was in the news earlier this year.

The meeting was not open to reporters and Shrum could not be reached for comment.

One source suggested the meeting was called because Gray was passing through Vancouver en route home from Australia and Shrum saw it as an opportunity for him to meet local officials.

AID SLOW FOR TIDAL WAVE SURVIVORS

Death Estimates Soar

By HOWARD WHITTEN

DACCA (Reuter) — Six days after a tidal wave which local reports say may have killed two million people in East Pakistan, blankets today were stripped from prisoners to warm survivors facing death from exposure, hunger, thirst and disease.

Officials in the devastated islands in the Bay of Bengal, still covered in ankle-deep mud and debris, started going through jails gathering up blankets as an urgent relief measure.

Word of the action by harassed officials came here amid unofficial estimates of a final death toll from last Friday's cyclone and tidal wave of around two million, ninety per cent of the whole population of the area.

The officials' desperate attempt to at least keep survivors warm pointed up the major problem of getting aid to the isolated low-lying disaster zone in the Ganges Estuary in East Pakistan.

SUPPLIES PILING UP

Relief supplies from abroad were steadily piling up in Dacca but there was only one helicopter in East Pakistan available to transfer them.

News reports here now predict astronomical death tolls. The English-language daily Dawn forecast 1.5 million, the Bengali daily Songgram had a figure of two million.

Two leading Bengali newspaper chiefs said they were convinced a concentrated effort was being made to inflate the figures so the government will postpone elections due in December. Campaigning has been muted but not halted by the disaster.

Relief Commissioner A. M. Anisuzzaman told a news conference Wednesday that many thousands of survivors are still in grave danger because they have not received help. He said there are still "very inaccessible places with which we have not yet had contact."

Anisuzzaman said the official death toll now stands at 39,800, with 3,136 missing, but this "may shoot up like

'ALWAYS FREE' MISSES BY $1,100

Mayor Courtney Haddock got approval from council's finance committee today for a $1,100 coat of arms plaque to be placed over the mayor's chair in the council chamber.

The committee was shown a cardboard dummy of the plaque measuring about three feet in height.

"Always free," came the reply.

"It's going to cost $1,100," said Christie. "What the hell do you mean, its free?"

Committee decided to recommend that council include the item in the 1971 budget.

Haddock did not attend the committee meeting but city manager Dennis Young said "the mayor is very anxious" to have the plaque of the city's coat of arms placed on the wall between two flags.

Jordanian Troops, Guerrillas Battle

By United Press International

Palestinian guerrillas and Jordanian army troops battled for 13 hours in Amman today with mortars, machine guns and grenades before an uneasy peace was restored at nightfall. The guerrillas said they also shelled an Israeli border settlement with mortars for 90 minutes.

Jordan's tough new prime minister, Wasfi Tel, met face to face later with the Palestinian guerrilla leaders following the heaviest fighting since the September civil war. Arab truce officials arranged the meeting to prevent another outbreak that could lead to another civil war.

It was the first time Tel and Palestinian chiefs had met in direct talks. The guerrillas have attacked him for his loyalty to King Hussein, and Palestinian Al Fatah chief Yasser Arafat was reported to have said in an African interview he would not return home as long as Tel is premier.

Committee Backs Tax Review Board

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons justice committee today approved a bill to create a tax review board.

An amendment by Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) requires that the government must go to parliament to remove any board member "for cause." The bill presented to the committee would have allowed the cabinet alone to make the removal.

The Lambert amendment was carried unanimously after Justice Minister John Turner agreed to it.

The review board would replace the present tax appeal board. Proceedings before the review board would be less formal than those required now before the appeal board, which conducts itself under the rules set for courts.

Taxpayers would appear before the review board without legal counsel. Most cases before the appeal board are argued by counsel.

The bill now goes back to the Commons for final consideration.

Loffmark Hopeful On Hospital Land

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark may persuade the Sisters of St. Ann to sell about two acres of their land alongside St. Joseph's Hospital.

But if he does, it will have to be for a proven need, likely a 150-bed unit for extended care or chronic patients.

Sister Kathleen Moroney, the order's provincial superior, reiterated today the sisters' stand taken a week ago: they will not sell all their 7.1 acres alongside the hospital, and their high school will continue.

At the same time she repeated the sisters' willingness to negotiate on part of the land if there is a proven need for it to expand the hospital, which they founded and now are in the process of turning over to a public society.

Loffmark said today he is "very optimistic" that the sale of land by the sisters can be "revived," but declined to disclose what new terms may be involved.

He said he had just sent a letter to the solicitor for the sisters and that it was written following conversations with the solicitor.

"I've never felt more optimistic than now . . ." he said.

Blunt Davis Talk Scolds Americans

By STEPHEN SCOTT

NEW YORK (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis bluntly told Americans Wednesday:

"We (Canada) would have preferred to have a smaller neighbor with a smaller appetite for raw materials and a smaller output of industrial and other pollutants along and across our international boundary line."

Davis was making a call at a Canadian-American symposium for the United States to keep its pollution on its own side of the border.

He called for recycling of pollutants and asked when the U.S. is going to catch up with Canadian anti-pollution programs.

Davis's tough talk was made at the 12th annual seminar on Canadian-American relations sponsored by the University of Windsor, Ont., and Columbia University here.

In other talks:

—Alistair Gillespie, parliamentary secretary to the president of the Canadian Treasury Board, said it is a "shocking fact of life" that 95 per cent of all text books used in Canada are or shortly will be published by firms controlled by non-Canadians.

—David Lewis, deputy leader of the New Democratic Party, said every aspect of Canadian life—economic, cultural and recreational—is invaded by foreign domination.

'WE NEED FACTS ON GOVERNMENT DECISIONS'

Stanfield Seeks Quebec Terrorism Probe

TORONTO (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield called Wednesday night for an independent commission of inquiry headed by a justice of the Supreme Court of Canada to investigate Quebec terrorism and federal promulgation of the War Measures Act.

Mr. Stanfield, speaking to the Lawyers' Club at Osgoode Hall, said the commission's report should be made public to make Canadians aware of the facts before any permanent legislation is introduced to deal with political terrorism by the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

"We owe it to ourselves as Canadians to get the facts on the extent of the terrorism and the effectiveness of the measures that have been taken against it," he said.

"We need facts on the reasons for the decisions made by the government and on the treatment of those who have been detained."

Mr. Stanfield said his party will vote for passage of the proposed Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970, to replace regulations now in effect under the War Measures Act.

Although he was "by no means happy" with the proposed legislation, he would support it because it is temporary and would avoid some of the harsher provisions of the War Measures Act with "its truly awesome powers."

But he urged calm deliberation before approving permanent legislation that would impinge on the rights of individuals.

"It is vital to know what the pattern is before we make up our minds as to the future between social order and traditional liberty that defies our political democracy."

The Opposition leader said the rule of law has been "temporarily and partially suspended."

"Before we decide definitely what we should do in the present and in the future, I think we have to be satisfied in our minds to what extent that suspension was justified because if we don't we are liable to make hasty and bad decisions today and tomorrow on what may be a questionable precedent."

Mr. Stanfield said he was worried about the apparent lack of knowledge and preparation by police even though the terrorists had been active for seven years.

He said the police in Quebec had apprehended a few hundred people and most of them subsequently had been released with no charges being laid.

"Either the police work was woefully inadequate, even under the huge powers the authorities had at their disposal under the Act, or the power and influence of the FLQ at the time had been considerably exaggerated.

"And so, the basic question remains: Was the imposition of the War Measures Act necessary?

"I admit at once that I do not have the answer. What worries me is that I am not sure that the government has one either."

Shadow Mischief

Moonlighting Policy Asked From Ottawa

Victoria Labor Council will write Defence Minister Donald Macdonald asking for clarification on the government's policy toward Canadian Forces personnel holding down an extra job.

The move came at a Labor Council meeting Wednesday as a result of comments made Saturday by Rear-Admiral Richard Leir who said there is nothing wrong with servicemen moonlighting to earn extra income.

Most of the union delegates did not support Leir's remarks, but there was some criticism of moonlighting by members of local trade unions.

"I don't see where we should come out against the servicemen before we clean up our unions," said Art Berry of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

Boilermakers business agent Neil Hindle did not agree. He said organized labor is quite explicit in opposing moonlighting, even if it is condoned by certain individuals.

"A rearadmiral has made a statement which citizens in this town have interpreted as government policy," Hindle said. "So we should ask the government for clarification."

"I think Rear-Admiral Leir will have to make a retraction of his remarks."

Copies of the letter to the defence minister will be sent to Prime Minister Trudeau, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and New Democratic Party leader Tom Douglas.

The Times contacted the admiral's office today but the admiral had no statement to make at this time.

at Cowichan Bay produced an outcry last spring.

Ecologists argued the plant's cooling system would involve discharging huge volumes of hot water into the bay, raising the bay's water temperature and harming marine life. There was also concern over the possibility of pollution from radioactive material.

COOL TO IDEA

Premier Bennett in statements last June indicated a coolness to the idea of nuclear generator on Vancouver Island and a concern for the pollution threat it might pose.

He said the Hydro proposal for a generating station with nuclear power near Duncan hadn't been abandoned but it had some great drawbacks, to be avoided if possible.

Last spring the cabinet instructed the B.C. Energy Board to determine the best use of public and private energy sources in the province up to 1985 but the terms of reference for the study made no mention of nuclear power.

Since then Bennett has described his long-range view of Vancouver Island as a pollution-free haven, free of heavy industrial development.

. . . HOSPITAL

land has waxed for more than a year because of disputes involving future road patterns, land use, title and lease terms.

The arguments have involved the provincial government and the city of Victoria, but mostly the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society (the group designated to take over the hospital) and the Capital region's hospital board, charged with regional hospital planning.

Beyond offering their land for sale at its assessed value a year ago for hospital expansion, the Sisters had remained out of the arguments until withdrawing the offer last week.

They said at that time the experts who had earlier advised them the land was essential for the hospital's development now are saying it isn't.

Another factor in their decision was continuing pressure to settle the future of St. Ann's high school.

Parents Oppose Stop-Gap Centre

The Oak Bay Recreation Commission Wednesday abandoned its proposal for a $200,000 stop-gap sports centre at Henderson Park and instead urged council to build a full-scale recreation complex to serve all age groups in Oak Bay.

The decision was reached after a group of citizens, most of them parents of small children, attended the commission's regular meeting to oppose the building of a minicentre.

One person said, "It's been six years since the referendum for a recreation centre was turned down and in that time the number of young people who have moved into Oak Bay is enormous."

Another said, "At this time we need a recreation centre, period . . . and we should go to the taxpayers for the whole lot."

Council had proposed building a centre, containing an ice rink, swumming pool, meeting rooms and other facilities, using the proceeds of the sale of the Victoria Riding Academy site —minimum of $1.3 million to defray capital costs.

Failure of a competition designed to sell the property has dictated the postponement of such a complex.

The group attending Wednesday's meeting insisted that building an interim centre that would not fit into the major complex would be a waste of money.

GROUP PRAISED

Council delegate Ald. Brian Smith warned: "If you put it to the electorate as an expensive package, it may go down and you'll be put back several years." He suggested that time should be given to see if the riding academy could be sold in the near future.

Chairman Krull Symones commended the group for appearing at the meeting after hearing about proposed plans for the substitute centre at Henderson Park.

"I hope that you will remain an action group and keep in touch with us."

Smith will present the commission's findings at Monday's council meeting.

Many of those attending Wednesday's meeting plan to attend to discuss what steps might be taken regarding recreation facilities in the municipality.

anything." The government announced several days ago an official figure of 55,000 dead and other unofficial estimates range from 300,000 to 650,000.

RELIEF WORK LAGGING

The relief operation is lagging badly because of the absence of Pakistani Air Force helicopters.

The Pakistani Air Force has some helicopters, but most are in West Pakistan and would have to cross 1,000 miles of India. During the news conference Anisuzzaman refused to answer questions about the failure of the military to provide more aircraft.

Other relief officials said there had been a delay in the arrival of U.S. helicopters because the Pakistani government tried to specify that its pilots fly them. When the United States refused, the Pakistanis backed down.

Two American helicopters were due today from Nepal. Four others expected tonight will not be ready to fly again before Saturday. Britain also is sending two helicopters.

Otherwise, aircraft now available consists of a military C-130 Hercules freighter, which was to start drops today; one military helicopter which had to be grounded for maintenance after 14 hours aloft; one short-takeoff-and-landing plane, and the only seaplane in East Pakistan.

AREAS STILL FLOODED

The air is the only feasible avenue for delivery of supplies to many of the stricken areas of the Bay of Bengal coast and the islands at the mouth of the Ganges River because all normal transport facilities were swept away by the winds and waves. Helicopters are particularly needed because many sections are still flooded, and drops from fixed-wing planes probably would miss the dry spots and be lost in the water.

Thirteen shallow army boats are also being sent by Britain from Singapore. Each will be able to take 15 passengers.

Three West German planes landed 39½ tons of supplies Wednesday, while two Iranian air freighters brought tents, blankets and medical supplies. A medical team arrived from Kuwait.

Reports from the area still speak of bodies and carcasses strewn all over the place, bloated after days in the water and tropical heat and giving off a stench.

The rotting bodies and carcasses have endangered water supplies and raised the spectre of a widescale outbreak of such diseases as cholera and typhoid.

A number of cholera cases were reported earlier this week on Hatia, one of the islands worst hit by the tidal wave. Unconfirmed reports say cholera has also broken out on three other islands.

. . . HARBOR

which has to be dealt with, has not even been mentioned and there's more than one person here wondering how such an unbusinesslike brief could be submitted."

Another criticism expressed was the apparent assumption that the government would hand over free to a civic commission assets which, based on capitalization of revenue potential, would be worth at least $15 million.

The harbor commission promoters also appear to have created an additional problem for themselves by a cavalier treatment of local MPs.

In asking for help to present the first brief, delivered by former Esquimalt Reeve Ray Bryant and City Solicitor T. P. O'Grady, both David Groos (L—Victoria) and David Anderson (L—Esquimalt-Saanich) were told to make appointments but stay out of the meetings themselves.

"Well that hardly seemed hospitable but we did so", Anderson commented recently. "But even worse, neither we nor the ratepayers who paid for that presentation, have been told what happened at those meetings with federal officials."

He said he was disturbed by the unfolding indications that the drive for a harbor commission is intended more to assist commercial shipping interests than give local control of the waterfront so that beautification, citizen and tourist interests could be promoted.

Anderson said he was willing to be a go-between with the department for the civic authorities but personally could not support any commission proposal which was not firmly tied in with the area's regional planning. Groos, attending a NATO Conference in Europe, was not available for comment.

Crash Victim Named

RCMP have released the name of a North Saanich woman killed Wednesday morning in a Sidney crash.

She was Mrs. Phyllis Margaret Kask, 10185 West Saanich Road. Driver of the other car was Mrs. Lacone Landie, 3950 Carey Road.

PLANNERS TO STUDY BICYCLE PATH SYSTEM

The planning department of the Capital Regional District will study a report by the Youth Commission of Oak Bay recommending bicycle paths in the area.

This was agreed to Wednesday by the planning committee of the district.

Mayor Frances Elford told committee members she hopes consideration will be given "with ultimate approval" to the recommendations.

The youth commission report recommended a network of bicycle paths linking downtown Victoria with the university, out Lochside Drive to Swartz Bay and out Interurban Road with links to Thetis Lake Park and Elk Lake.

It said many Victoria roads are hazardous to bicyclists who are "plagued by thieves and insulted by bullying motorists. It is not uncommon for cyclists to be forced off the road or into ditches by disrespectful motorists."

According to an American agency, there should be nearly 100 miles of bicycle paths on southern Vancouver Island but all that is offered is "a host of No Bicycling signs."

KEYNES METHODS FINISHED

'Wage, Price Controls Needed'

By ALFRED FRIENDLY

LONDON (WP) — Control over the economy by the Keynesian methods of tax and money policies is overdone [illegible] unions and big corporations, American economist John Kenneth Galbraith told an important British audience Wednesday night.

Its replacement, or adjunct, must be a system of permanent wage and price controls, he said. Otherwise, there is no way to maintain high employment without intolerable inflation.

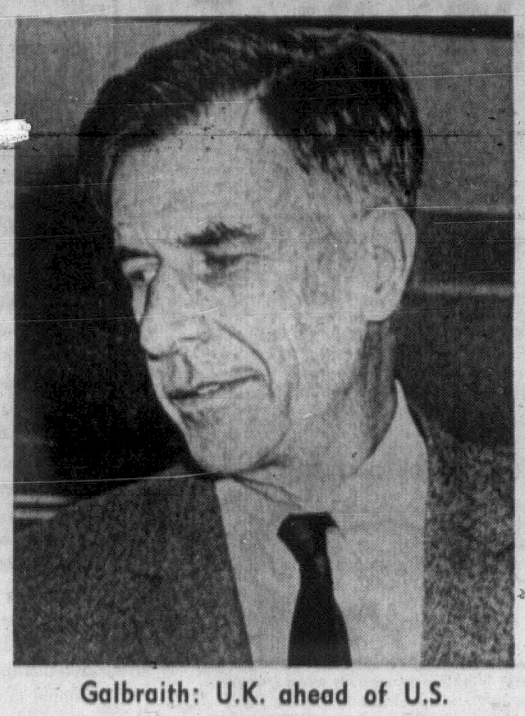
The flamboyant Harvard professor, now holding a chair for two terms at Cambridge University, gave the annual Fabian lecture to the British Fabian Society, the philosophic and political parents of the present British Labor party and socialist movement. His subject was a "comparative diagnosis" of the political left in the United States and Britain.

In both countries, he said, "the truth we evade is that the age of Keynesian economics is over; the macro-economic revolution in fiscal and monetary management we owe to Keynes has run afoul of the macro-economic revolution in trade union and corporate power. In consequence, there is no way within the Keynesian modalities to reconcile adequately high employment with reasonably stable prices . . .

SOMETHING MORE

"The reason for the Keynesian failure is that at any near approach to full employment, unions can seek and win wage increases much in excess of productivity gains, because . . . corporations can retrieve wage increases and something more."

But the difference between the liberal-left in America and Britain, Galbraith argued, is that in the United States, while the liberal economic establishment opposes them, "The unions, after some ritual protest to the contrary, will probably accept wage and price control in preference to the alternatives," provided they are assured that the control is "real," i.e. that it will stabilize living costs.



Galbraith: U.K. ahead of U.S.

In Britain, however, both the socialist establishment and the unions are hostile to any form of governmental wage and price control, he said.

"Any idiot can argue the case against controls in the abstract," Galbraith continued. "It is only that there are no alternatives.

"The control need not be comprehensive. Macro-economic change has only defeated Keynesian policy where strong unions and strong corporations are involved. In the United States, only a few hundred unions and a couple of thousand corporations need be touched.

"And perfect stability is not the goal. One seeks to eliminate only the gross movements inherent in private price- and wage-fixing.

"Additionally the past efforts have all incorporated the hope that they might be temporary. We shall only have a workable system of permanent controls when we recognize that they are forever."

One reason for wage and price control, Galbraith said, is that it is not otherwise possible "to preserve a civilized balance" between the public and private sectors of the economy.

In depression times, he argued, and when economic expansion was sought, the public sector benefitted through increased public spending — and accordingly Keynesian policy favored the public sector.

But in today's world of chronic inflation, the tendency is to cut down on public expenditure, and Keynesian policy then "strongly favors the private sector."

BOW TO BRITAIN

Bowing to his host country, Galbraith said:

"An American coming even briefly to England cannot but sense how much better British socialism, as compared with American liberalism, has supported the public sector since the Second World War.

"Perhaps one could argue that, in consequence of the better balance between public and private services, the British standard of living is, in its general yield of satisfaction, now higher than that of the United States.

"Few things to me are so discouraging as the reluctance of the American left to face up to the costs of modern government. The modern metropolis in particular is an incredibly expensive thing. Until its price is paid, modern urban life is not even tolerable, much less agreeable.

"There are, I've long thought, few problems in New York City which would not be solved by doubling the city budget. There are none which will be solved by using the present liberal device which is to use sociology as a substitute for higher taxes.

"On these matters the British left (and, to be fair, also the British right) is a geological age in advance of the United States."

Official death toll has been put at 40,000 but unofficial estimates range as high as two million, which would make it the single worst natural disaster in history. (AP Wirephoto)

Disaster Record 900,000 Deaths

By Reuter

If the latest estimates by Dacca newspapers prove correct, the cyclone and tidal wave that hit East Pakistan last Friday will be the biggest killer of any individual natural disaster in history.

Pakistani newspapers Thursday said the total killed may range as high as two million people, although the latest official confirmed death toll is nearly 40,000.

The previous high in any single disaster was 900,000, when the Yellow River overflowed in China in 1887.

In 1881, a typhoon and tidal wave killed an estimated 300,000 in China and Indochina. The following year, a cyclone and tidal wave in the Bombay, India, area killed about 100,000.

When the Yellow River overflowed its banks in 1911, about 100,000 Chinese were reported killed.

Wars, plague and disease have been the biggest killers during the last few centuries.

No reliable statistics are available for the number of persons who have died from famine, malnutrition and neglect.

MILLIONS DIED

But records report millions upon millions of people have died within the last 300 years from pandemics sweeping through countries.

In 1889-90, an influenza pandemic was estimated to have affected about 40 per cent of the world's population.

A cholera pandemic which swept through continental Europe from 1826 to 1837 killed millions. In one year alone, 1831, about 900,000 Europeans died.

From 1840 to 1862, the cholera pandemic became worldwide, claiming many millions more lives.

In Russia, in the first four years of the Soviet government, 1917-21, a typhus pandemic took a death toll estimated at between 2.5 and three million.

In the 1920s, bubonic plague is estimated to have claimed two million lives in India. Also in India, cholera took 300,000 lives in 1924 and smallpox 423,000 between 1926 and 1930.

The Tokyo and Yokohama earthquake and fire of 1923 still stands as the world's worst earthquake tragedy, with 200,000 killed.

New Line Would Double Bus Service

Expanded bus service for the Saanich Peninsula was proposed Wednesday by an employee of Vancouver Island Coach Lines.

Sales supervisor Wayne McArthur told reporters he has an option to purchase two Vancouver Island Coach Lines buses. He will leave the company when and if approval is given by the Public Utilities Commission and peninsula municipalities.

No name has been chosen for the new firm, but McArthur Transportation is a possibility.

The proposed schedule will roughly double the present VICL service, cut drastically at mid-month after the company had said it was losing more than $100,000 a year on peninsula service.

VICL will pull out of Victoria-Vancouver and Nanaimo-Vancouver service at the end of this month with Pacific Stage Lines, a B.C. Hydro subsidiary, taking over.

This leaves VICL, a subsidiary of International Utilities, an American company, running bus service up Vancouver Island, from Victoria to the airport and summer trips on the Gray Line.

DESERVES SUPPORT

VICL manager Jack Thomas told reporters there is no immediate thought of disposing of the rest of the company's services. He said McArthur deserves support in his new venture.

McArthur outlined this schedule, which he emphasized needs Public Utilities Commission approval before it can start:

1. Leave Sidney at 7:10 a.m. via Bazan Bay, Mount Newton, Veyaness, Tanner Road, Royal Oak and Victoria;
2. Leave Victoria 8:15 a.m. for Sidney by same route;
3. Leave Sidney 8:50 a.m. via Swartz Bay, Sidney Resthaven, Bazan Bay Road, Mount Newton Cross Road, Wallace Drive, Brentwood, Keating Cross Road, Prospect Lake Road, Royal Oak and Victoria;
4. Leave Victoria 10:50 a.m. for Cordvoa Bay and return;
5. Leave Victoria 12:15 p.m. for Sidney by same route as 1, returning by same route from Sidney at 1:15 p.m.
6. Leave Victoria 2:15 p.m. for Cordova Bay and return;
7. Leave Victoria 3:30 p.m. via Royal Oak, Prospect Lake Road, Keating Cross Road, Brentwood Bay, Wallace Drive, Mount Newton Cross Road, Bazan Bay Road, Mount Newton Cross Road, Veyaness Road and Royal Oak arriving back in Victoria at 5:10 p.m.;
8. Leave Victoria 5:40 p.m. for Sidney via Royal Oak, Tanner Road, Veyaness, Mount Newton and Bazan Bay.

The service would run daily except Sundays and holidays at the same rates now charged.

Because of the small staff needed to run the peninsula service, it was indicated that costs will be less than those by VICL.

Recognition and Action

FISHERIES MINISTER DAVIS is less than satisfied with the performance of the United States in regard to halting and reversing the process of pollution in the Great Lakes. The ruination of vast stretches of these inland fresh-water seas, both for fish life and man's use, is proceeding despite wide recognition of the dangers and the ultimate cost.

There is hope for better results in combating oil pollution of the high seas. The Brussels meeting of a NATO committee on challenges of modern society earlier this month dealt with the problems of oil spills and oil dumping at sea, and some helpful generalizations were presented by Mr. John Volpe, the U.S. secretary of transportation.

The remarks of Mr. Volpe and other delegates will, of course, have to be translated into action if any good is to result. But at least a growing number of nations are alive to the danger to the sea which is posed by increasing oil contamination. In Canada this realization was brought home by recent destructive accidents to oil tankers in coastal waters.

Canadian concern for the coastal areas, and particularly for the vast, vulnerable Arctic coastline and waters, quickly led to legislation which should do much to curb the coastal entry of sub-standard shipping and to minimize the possibility of accidental or deliberate discharge of lethal petroleum products. Severe penalties have been set for law breakers, although the international aspects of the legislation have not yet been directly tested. The attitude of the NATO committee, however, gives hope of progress in this vital field.

Mr. Volpe noted the lack of definite knowledge of the total effects of oil pollution, but declared that beyond the direct effects on marine life, many of which are known, "the hazardous substances, particularly oil, currently being dumped and spilled into the seas, are an immediate danger and a future threat to the health, recreation and welfare of mankind..." He speculated on "the long-term effects of hydrocarbons in the marine food chain . . . including those that pose the threat of cancer."

Mr. Volpe outlined the U.S. government's action to control oil pollution. There was April's legislation to protect inland and coastal waters, other actions by Congress and the executive, and presidential appeals for co-operation by industry and individuals. Further action by Congress has been recommended to ban unregulated ocean dumping of all materials and to limit strictly the ocean disposal of any potentially harmful materials.

The United States called on NATO nations to "achieve by mid-decade a complete halt to all intentional discharge of oil and oily wastes into the oceans by tankers and other vessels." Since the NATO countries control about 75 per cent of the tanker tonnage of the world as well as of total world shipping, and more than 70 per cent of the world's annual oil production enters their ports and their coastal areas, unified agreement by the group would have an important, even decisive effect.

Canada has a particular interest in this proposed internationalization of measures which Ottawa has already implemented on a national scale. At least the nations are on the move, and that is a great advance over the laissez faire which dominated past decades and helped to produce the increasingly obvious dangers of today.

The Last Rejection?

A SIMPLE UNITED STATES strategy will probably result in the rejection once again of efforts to seat Red China in the United Nations. If support for an American move to make the issue an "'important question" is forthcoming — and it is expected — tomorrow's vote would require a two-thirds majority to pass. As the nations line up at present, that majority is not anticipated.

Last year 48 nations voted for the so-called Albanian motion to admit Peking and expel Taiwan; 56 voted against it, 21 abstained and one was absent. Since then, support has reportedly grown for seating Red China, though not to the extent of a two-thirds majority. It is argued that mainland China cannot be excluded if the United Nations is, in fact, to be the United Nations. A quarter of the world's population cannot be overlooked and kept out of the global body if it is to be global.

The simple solution would be to admit both. However neither Taiwan nor mainland China accepts that case. Each wants to be the one and only Chinese representative seated.

The earlier point, that Peking does not want membership, appears now to have been eliminated. Peking does want in and has made it known, unofficially, that its earlier pre-conditions have been changed. There is, according to report, no insistence now from mainland China that the UN charter be revised to throw out the "imperialist puppets," that the 1950 resolution branding China the aggressor be rescinded and that UN pass a new resolution branding the United States as the aggressor in Korea. But Peking has not retreated from its original demand that Taiwan be excluded.

On the basis of "universality," this sticking point seems totally illogical. Taiwan has a population of 14 million people, a larger population than the majority of UN member nations, and is one of its important financial contributors (only the United States, the Soviet Union, the United Kingdom and France supply a larger percentage).

Some observers believe this may be the last year when opposition to Peking membership will prevail. But the two-China problem remains. Illogical as it may seem to have excluded mainland China so long, is it any more illogical in principle to reverse positions: to admit a new member and exile an old one?

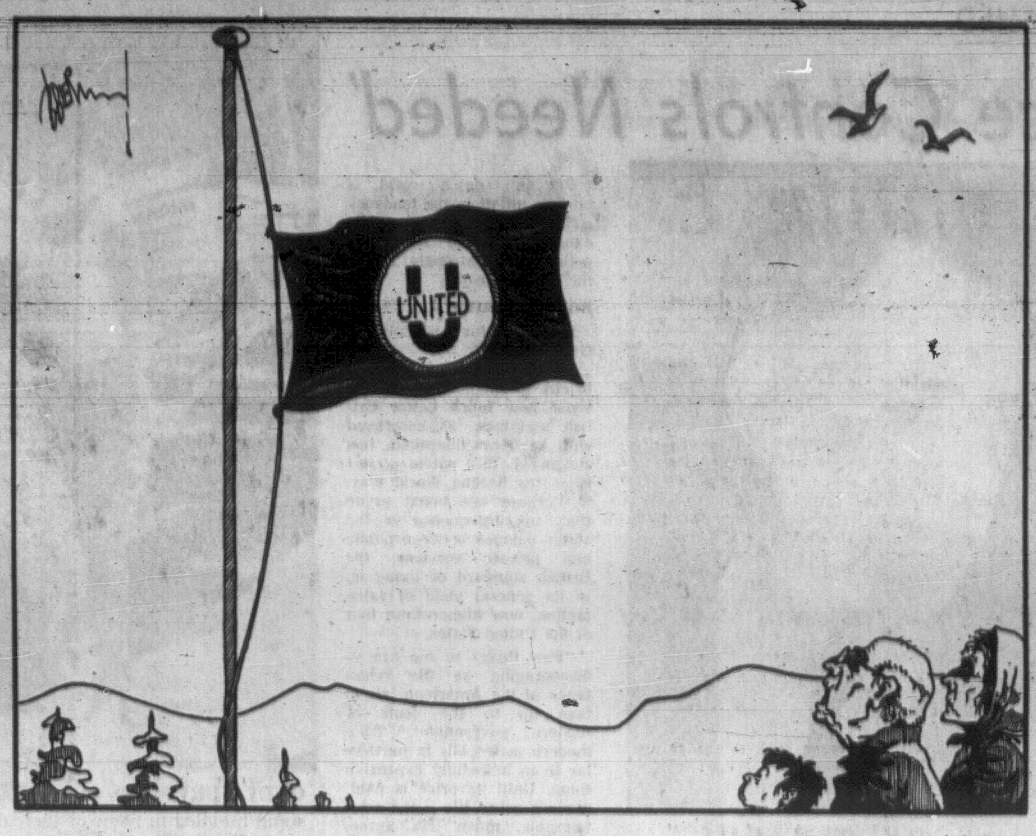
Waiting for Franco's Nod

BEFORE THE END OF NEXT month, according to frequent speculation, Generalissimo Francisco Franco is expected to divest himself of some of his responsibilities by naming a prime minister for Spain. This is presumed to be included in the time-table for a gradual transition of powers which would divide, for the first time since his assumption of the country's top offices, the posts of head of state and head of government.

Franco has already made provision for the succession to his post as head of state, having named Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon y Borbon as his heir apparent. The constitution of 1967 gives that office particular importance since its holder "exercises supreme political and administrative power."

When and if the 78-year-old dictator steps down — or appoints a prime minister — substantial change is in prospect for the government. Younger men are expected to move up in the cabinet and the influence of the Roman Catholic lay organization, Opus Dei, is expected to grow. This would shift authority more noticeably away from the military, and conceivably bring to the government a more pronounced progressive tone.

But the only man who can effect the transition is the man who drew the blueprints for it, Francisco Franco, and when it was suggested to him some time ago that at his age he might consider retiring, his response was revealing. He had, he said, no interest in playing the role of queen mother.



"... Has charity died ...?"

Without Fuss

Montreal Gazette

Prince Edward Island becomes the 10th province to opt for medicare, plans to put its medical insurance plan into operation on Dec. 1, and doesn't expect any fuss or bother. The plan should be adopted smoothly in striking contrast to the travail of Quebec.

The Charlottetown government has wisely refrained from trying to make a far-reaching social change by the very implementation of medicare. The P.E.I. plan will be closely modelled on Nova Scotia's MSI or medical services insurance. After 18 months the Nova Scotia plan is operating efficiently with full opting out privileges plus extra billing for all doctors. In the first year, only nine of Nova Scotia's 700 doctors practised outside the plan.

It is all rather frustrating to watch. Now there is the prospect of eight provinces having adopted medicare without trouble, the other exception being pioneering Saskatchewan.

Perhaps if Quebec had been willing to settle for medicare, rather than a fundamental reform of the doctor's relationship to society, and had been willing to profit from the experience of others, there would be no crisis here.

FROM OTTAWA

By MAURICE WESTERN

An Embarrassing Count of Empty Commons Seats

THE Trudeau government, after two relatively serene parliamentary years, was given a sharp reminder on Friday that a carefree majority is no guarantee against sudden ambush. Fortunately for the ministers, many of whom were on their travels, it was not High Noon in the Commons; merely a somewhat embarrassing episode, that turned into a comedy of errors. But this happy outcome, bringing embarrassment to the Conservatives in turn, was not attributable to good management; it was due simply to the fact that the opposition could not have anticipated the plight of the government and were not in a position to exploit their sudden opportunity.

Western

Mr. Trudeau operates on a rota system which was introduced without the consent of other parties and has never ceased to be an opposition grievance. It usually surfaces nowadays when ministers who are supposed to be on House duty are otherwise engaged. Sometimes they are represented by acting ministers, sometimes by their parliamentary secretaries but in either case a member seeking information obtains little satisfaction beyond the standard assurance that his question has been noted and will be drawn to the attention of the minister on his return.

On Friday Robert Stanfield, gazing across the chamber, found himself confronted with a vast expanse of empty ministerial benches. There was no Prime Minister and no House Leader (Mr. MacEachen being absent through illness). There was no sign of the ministers who normally answer questions about the situation in Quebec. Most of the ministers in charge of the major economic departments were also otherwise engaged. Of the 30 who serve, two-thirds were elsewhere.

Formal Protest

Mr. Stanfield entered a formal protest. He then attempted one or two questions which produced various disarming remarks from a parliamentary secretary but nothing much in the way of definitive answers. Further questions, now directed to the whereabouts of the ministers, disclosed that Arthur Laing, minister of public works was acting for Mr. Trudeau. Mr. Laing, an experienced and widely popular minister, attempted to pour oil on troubled waters. On this occasion, however, the opposition was not to be calmed.

Sensing an opportunity, Stanley Knowles moved that the House go on to government business. This being refused, the opposition demanded a formal division. The question was purely procedural in no way comparable to the 1968 vote which brought the defeat of a tax bill. But a reverse even on such an issue, would have been an obvious rebuke to the government and damaging to its prestige.

In fact the ministry was never in danger. Only 79 Liberals answered the bells but the vote was anti-climatic because the combined opposition could arouse only 42.

The members to Mr. Speaker's left then fell silent while question period was taken over exclusively by Liberals. Not all the questions carried the stamp of urgency; some were found defective by the chair; but a few were pertinent enough or pointed enough to test the skill of the ministers and to permit them at the same time to make invidious comparisons at the expense of the opposition.

As matters turned out, therefore, the backbenchers did a creditable job of rescuing the ministers. Even so Friday's performance was not one to justify any preening of the government's feathers. Mr. Trudeau set out to improve the efficiency of Parliament. It is not likely to become more efficient if the ministers marked for duty on the official roster, are not available to answer questions or if adequate Cabinet representation can be secured only by some opposition manoeuvre which sets the bells ringing in the Parliament corridors.

There is rather more to this, however, than apportionment of blame. The figures tell their own story about House of Commons attendance. Certainly members have duties which frequently keep them out of the chamber. But in this case less than half the membership was available on the call of the whips.

Important Business but—

By long tradition Friday is a slim day in the House. This was not, however, an ordinary Friday because the business of the day was the Public Order, (temporary measures) Act, which is to replace the War Measures Act as the source of the emergency powers now required. According to all parties, this is business of quite unusual importance; furthermore there was at least some expectation, encouraged by the attitude of Mr. Stanfield, that it would come to a vote before the evening adjournment. In any event amendments of importance awaited disposal.

Speeches are important but votes are crucial unless they seem likely to occur on Fridays in the House of Commons.

Look for the Good

In a recent letter a correspondent suggested that English Canada should send Quebec packing, because of the French temperament. May I give another point of view by quoting from "A History of England" by Andre Maurois?

"With the death of Simon de Montfort there vanished the last of the great Frenchmen who helped to fashion England. When William the Conqueror landed, he found a country of settlers. His vigor, the vigor of Henry I, the vigor of Henry II, had established a new country. Many of the institutions imposed or preserved by these kings are extant today—the jury, the assizes, the Exchequer (at any rate in name), and the universities. The period between 1066 and 1272 (which included the signing of the Great Charter) is one of the most fruitful in English history."

In later centuries great numbers of Frenchmen, driven from France, settled in England, much to that country's benefit. "The English silk manufacture, for instance, was founded by French Protestants."

It is extremely difficult for a comparatively weak nation, living within the reach of a great power, to keep its independence. History leaves no doubt of that: Canadian history, though short, has provided some sharp reminders. If we use as much zeal in discovering one another's good qualities as we do with our faults, we may survive outside pressures, and preserve our freedom.—S. G. Woodeson, 6456 Pat Bay.

Art Gallery Views

The letter by Audrey Johnson in the Nov. 7 Times was in my opinion the best she's ever written! I've been reading Mrs. Johnson's column for many years and can appreciate the true feeling and dedication she has for the Arts. She has expressed the thoughts of every one of the members of the Gallery in this outstanding article. Her facts are correct—and I hope the city fathers have all taken it to heart. — Laura M. Miller, President, Women's Committee, Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Check the Price

Your cartoon of last week showing the woman questioning the storekeeper re the price of salmon at $1.00 was to the point with one big exception — namely the price.

A well-known large store was selling Coho salmon at $1.58 per pound on Nov. 12, 1970.

I wonder how many people are interested in saving the salmon at this price? This is more expensive than good beef and to me seems exorbitant.

I am certainly in favor of saving the salmon but I wonder if the water used at Goldstream would not be more valuable to the people as a whole than saving fish they cannot afford to buy.—T. D. McMurray, 307-548 Dallas.

Civil Rights! Whose?

The War Measures Act is clear for anyone to read and it is presumed that those who teach in our schools are familiar with it.

It is about time something was done to suppress the activities of revolutionaries in our midst and those from foreign countries who, in some cases have been invited to speak and to brainwash our students, all at the expense of the taxpayer.

No law-abiding Canadian can object to interrogation by a police officer, so now is the chance for them to weed out all those draft dodgers, deserters and undesirables in British Columbia; we have all been too complacent in allowing minority groups to flourish (out of line) and to cross our border at will.

Civilized persons do not condone kidnapping and murder as a means of changing conditions. In our society this can be done by peaceful means and the ballot box.

The stand taken by our Provincial Government is to be commended. A little discipline for a short time is preferable to jungle law and we are only one jump ahead of that situation. Then it will be too late to cry "Civil Rights". — P. W. de P. Taylor, Box 109 Sooke.

Mild Rebuke

The Society for Pollution and Environmental Control is disappointed to note that the fee to pollute the Upper Harbor and Selkirk Waters is so modest.

The $200 fine imposed for spillage of wood chips by a local mill on June 4, 1970, is a very gentle tap on the knuckles for an offence which is not an isolated incident.

It is good to know the company concerned is "aware of its responsibilities."

Public vigilance will help to sharpen the awareness of other companies with similar operations.—J. White, President, Victoria Branch, SPEC.

Inform the Donor

I am comparatively new to this area, having arrived since the last United Appeal was launched (by this I mean last year's appeal), and I therefore cannot judge by those that were included last year. Where I lived before however, (which was in B.C.), I was always told in the form of advertisement and news items in the paper and on radio and TV just what organizations are included in the local drive. I suggest that if the same thing is done here, instead of taking people for granted, there might be a much better response to the appeal — Pearce Morton, Metchosin.

Goode Funne

Could Mr. Arthur Mayse be a kill-joy?

I hope that Victorians as a whole will support (and have fun in so doing) the Victorian Days being initiated by the Chamber of Commerce this coming May.

What could be more appropriate, especially during our Centennial celebartions, than to make-believe for a few days that we are living in that period of 100 years ago, with B.C's capital city named after Queen Victoria of Britain.

The Calgary Stampede is great! Edmonton's Klondike Days are great! Viking Days at Gimli, Manitoba, are great! Vancouver's first three-day Octoberfest, just recently held, was fun and a big success! Why not Victorian Days Festival?

I have no connection whatsoever with the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, or this upcoming project, but as an onlooker I wish them lots of luck. I'm sure that all age groups can become involved and have fun if they get into the spirit of this thing called LOVE.—Fran Ratcliffe, 8501 Emard Terrace, North Saanich.

Far Afield

This morning's Honolulu paper reported that you have ordered the release of 100,000,000 gallons of water to help exhausted salmon to spawn in streams shrivelled by the driest summer in 36 years.

Formerly museums adviser for the B.C. Provincial Museum, I'm well aware of Freeman King's anguish.

Intelligent, concerned and far-sighted public figures in Canada can still counter, through sensible and informed actions like yours, the rising incidence of ecological tragedy overpowering so many areas of the Excited States of America.—George Moore, Honolulu.

Looking Back

From the Times of November 19, 1910:

The singular tradition among Scottish undergraduates to render almost inaudible the address of their lord rector and to engage in destructive mischief was again illustrated during Mr. Asquith's visit to Aberdeen University recently. So badly did the young men behave that he threatened to stop his address. At the close, the carriage in which he was to have been drawn was smashed and sunk in the harbor.

The lord rector's is practically an honorary post to which the students elect distinguished men.

CARIBBEAN PROJECT

A Scientific El Dorado

By IRWIN GOODWIN

ST. CROIX, V.I. — The idea of drawing icy water from the warm Caribbean seems far fetched. So, too, does a scheme to wring moisture from trade winds to cool a whole community, extract fresh water, and, at the same time, breed seafood by the ton.

But all these revolutionary objectives are just what scientists from Columbia University's Lamont-Doherty Geological Observatory are attempting to reach here on a remote stretch of rocky beach.

When a new marine biology station, housed in the stone-and-mortar buildings of a historic Dutch sugar plantation, was dedicated on this island's north shore in early August by Lamont's director, Maurice Ewing, and Virgin Islands Gov. Melvin Evans, the first phase began for a promising scientific El Dorado.

Breed Fish, Oysters

An ambitious concept, first advanced in the weekly journal Science in 1967 by Robert D. Gerard and J. Lamar Worzel, both of Lamont, it is an integrated, multi-purpose system that is designed to:

- Breed fish, lobsters, shrimp, oysters or any other seafood in seafarms or aquaculture "gardens."
- Produce millions of gallons of unpolluted fresh water from the humidity in sea breezes.
- Develop electric power and cool, dry "air-conditioning" for a tropical island community.

Though the operation here is only a limited pilot experiment, the success of its main feature could herald bigger projects.

The essential component is a simple, mile-long, 3½-inch-wide polyethylene pipe that carries 30 gallons of seawater each minute from 400 fathoms (about a half-mile) down on the bottom of the Caribbean. On the surface, the water temperature is around 80 degrees fahrenheit, but that deep it is near freezing at 40 degrees.

In this experiment, which began recently after years of calculations, the Columbia scientists, supported by the National Science Foundation, are trying to duplicate a crucially important phenomenon of nature that yields an abundance of fish to the oceans off Peru, Guinea and South Africa.

Vast Swarms of Life

Vast swarms of sea life are found in these regions because of what oceanographers term "upwellings" — the steep ascent of cold water bearing rich nutrients from the decay of dead sea life. These nutrients are swept from the seabed to the surface by winds, currents and the topography of the continental shelf.

Off the northern coast of St. Croix, the scientists have created an artificial upwelling — the water pumped up in the pipeline containing the same nutrients, a primordial life-giving soup.

This cold soup is thick with vital salts — most notably nitrates and phosphates — which, when mixed with gases in the sea, like carbon dioxide, and when struck by sunlight near the surface, generate microscopic single-celled plants called phytoplankton. This is the first link in the great chain of life.

For years, researchers at Lamont's lab in Palisades, N.Y., have been studying how to forge this chain by subjecting the basic soup as well as phytoplankton and algae to subtle change in temperature and sunlight. By doing this, they have come to understand how to cultivate a sea garden.

On St. Croix, researchers have constructed two concrete pools that hold 16,000 gallons each of the basic salt soup. In these they propose to raise oysters, shrimp, lobsters and, eventually fish that will feed on the phytoplankton bloom.

Though many aquaculture farms are operating around the world, the St. Croix station will be the first, if successful, using natural sea nutrients as a kind of fertilizer.

No longer is aquaculture a Jules Verne fantasy. Oysters, shrimp, turtles and fish are herded on watery ranches from Japan to Florida. The output is still a fraction of the world's total catch, now about 55 million metric tons a year.

Some specialized seafood, such as oysters and lobsters, are in increasing demand. It is difficult enough for the industry to keep up with the demand, the supplies are now imperiled by overfishing and pollution.

The first seafood to be grown in Lamont's St. Croix gardens will be simple mollusks like whelks, snails and oysters. As a test of the operation's commercial value, the station's manager, Pedro Centeno, proposes to raise Chesapeake Bay and Long Island oysters.

"We intend getting specimens of the finest oysters found anywhere, whether these are in France or Tasmania or England," says Centeno. "I'm sure we can grow the best — unblemished and untainted."

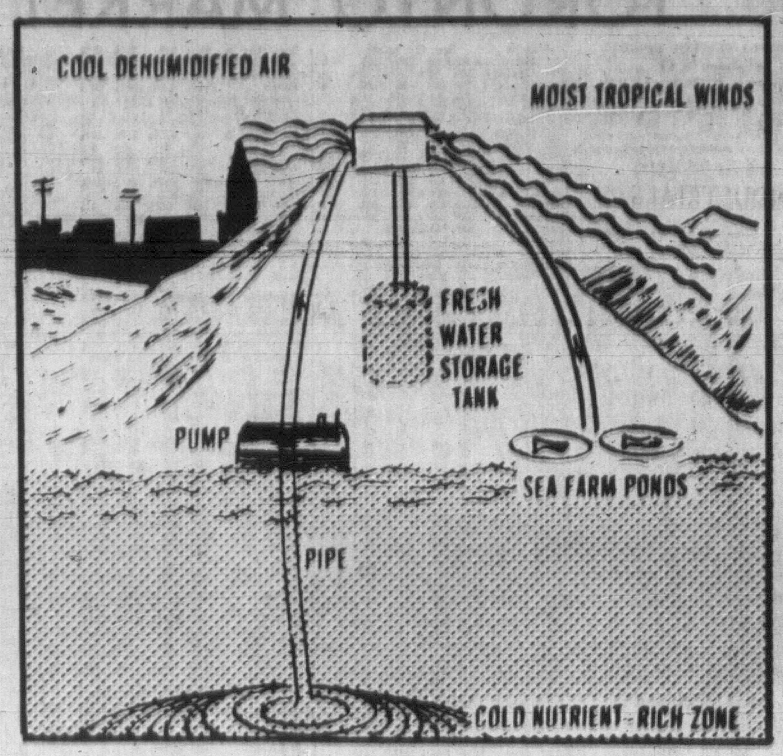
Perhaps even more important for St. Croix, however, is the promise of electric power and fresh water to come in later phases of the experiment. St. Croix, like most small tropical islands, is short of both.

Drip Down into Tank

"Every day," observes Lamont's associate director Worzel, "more than 300 gallons of water, in the form of vapor in the lower atmosphere, sweeps across every mile of shoreline exposed to trade winds."

The complete system that Worzel and Gerard outlined in Science includes a conventional 60-square-foot condenser through which the cold seawater is pumped before it reaches the sea farm.

As the winds whistle through the condenser, ideally located on a hilltop near shore, moisture collects on its plates or louvres. The moisture, like that in the warm air that enters a refrigerator, will drip down into a storage tank.



How sea can be tapped for cold water, food, air-conditioning

The scientists reckon that 245 gallons of icy seawater must flush through the condenser to produce one gallon of fresh water from the wind's humidity.

Another part of the system uses the big temperature difference between deep sea water and tropical surface water to generate power. The principle for this was originally established in 1832 by a French scientist, d'Arsonval. A century passed before another Frenchman, Georges Claude, constructed such a plant at Matanzas, Cuba, in 1930. It produced 22 kilowatts of electric power.

A French company built a similar power unit in the 1950s at Abidjan in the Ivory Coast. It had a planned output of 7,000 kilowatts but never ran at that level.

Better engineering, improved heat-exchangers and new intermediate fluids such as freon, the Lamont scientists believe, will increase the efficiency of the plant.

An extra dividend of the condenser's operation, the researchers claim, will be the reduced humidity once the trade winds pass through the condenser. As they see it, the winds will provide a kind of dehumidified air-conditioning for buildings inland.

Lamont's pioneering project may change conditions for the Caribbean islands. "Its development," says Gerard, "could have important economic and social benefits. Areas that are today unproductive and uninhabited could be supplied with abundant power, fresh water and high-protein food."

Earlier Debate Saved Canada, But Today . . .?

By GEORGE OAKE

Back in 1881 Alexander Mackenzie had an idea that might have solved the continental issue once and for all for Canadians.

As an alternative to the Canadian Pacific Railway, not to mention Sir John A. Macdonald's Conservatives, Mackenzie launched a rival syndicate, promising to build a national railway in stages for less money and land than the maligned CPR.

There was some small print, however.

And as Pierre Berton's The National Dream quotes Macdonald, "the scheme was nothing more than an impudent offer to build the prairie section and to do it by means of political friends. Connecting with the Yankee railways at Sault would be to the utter ruin of the great policy under which the Dominion of Canada has been created, the utter ruin of our hopes of being a great nation . . ."

Fiery Orators

In short, fruition of Mackenzie's scheme would have meant a north-south trade axis, establishing a ready-made southern avenue for Canadian raw materials.

Unlike today's politicians, indulging in half-hearted debates and clouding the issue of continentalism with uncertainty, the fiery Grit and Tory orators of 90 years ago raged at each other through all-night House of Commons sittings.

Nothing less than Canada was at stake.

Just before midnight, on a snowy February evening in 1881, the Pacific Railway Bill passed third reading. The anti-continental forces had won; Canadians inherited half a continent.

Today the old Canadian products — timber, wheat, fur and fish — which created an east-west trade axis are not so much in demand. Instead new raw materials — natural gas, oil, ores and possibly water — have created a north-south trade axis.

But only the direction has changed.

As Harold Innes pointed out in The Fur Trade in Canada, "The raw material supplied

to the mother country stimulated manufactures of the finished products which were in demand in the colony. Agriculture, industry, transportation, trade, finance and governmental activities tend to become subordinate to the production of the staple for a more highly specialized manufacturing community."

By 1968 only 35 per cent of Canadian exports were end products, compared to 61 per cent of our imports. Over the last 20 years there has been a trend away from raw materials in Canadian exports. A continental energy policy could reverse this trend easily, leaving Canadians hewers of woods and carriers of water in the literal sense of the phase.

Not Reassuring

As early as 1965 the United States was bargaining for a continental resource plan. The Merchant-Heeney Report — produced jointly by the United States ambassador to Canada and the Canadian ambassador to Washington — contained a little noticed allusion to shared resources: "Under appropriate conditions, joint planning and development of resources . . . in various regions would appear to offer promising opportunities. For this reason we recommend early and serious study of such possibilities."

Nor have three Canadian prime ministers been very reassuring on the subject. As historian James Laxer points out in his Energy Poker Game, John Diefenbaker called the Columbia River agreement "a great advance for mankind."

Lester Pearson, during the 1965 election campaign said, "We have to be careful not to alienate this resource without taking care of our own needs and we will be discussing this with the United States who are very anxious to work out arrangements by which some of our water resources are moved down south. This can be as important as exporting wheat or oil."

Talking about resources in general, Prime Minister Trudeau said in Febrary, 1970, "I don't want to be a dog in the manger about this. But if people are not going to use it, can't we sell it for good hard cash?"

Slips of the tongue? Provocative politics? Perhaps. But deeds seem to bear out words.

Only last month Ottawa approved export permits for 6.3 trillion cubic feet of natural gas to the United States — 12 per cent of Canada's established reserves. Mines and Energy Minister J. J. Greene assured Canadians that the sale was not part of a continental energy policy.

But Laxer notes a 1969 National Energy Board publication estimates by 1990 the United States will be able to supply itself with only two-thirds of its need from domestic supply.

Laxer adds, "By then two-thirds of Canadian natural gas would be flowing to the U.S. and this assumes that production in Canada will increase six-fold over the next 20 years."

'Turning Point'

Pure speculation? Not likely. Once the $200-million pipelines are built the United States is not going to allow them to lie unused after current contracts have expired.

Ninety years ago — almost to the month — Goldwin Smith in his Bystander discussed the merits of the all-Canadian CPR as opposed to a continental railway through the United States:

"What is truly momentuous, and makes this a turning point in our destiny, is the choice which our people are now called upon to make between the continental and the anti-continental system, between the policy of antagonism to our neighbors on the south and that of partnership."

As Pierre Berton writes in The National Dream, "Goldwin Smith was talking in extremes when he used words like 'antagonism' but he managed to catch the sense of the issue. To MacDonald, 'partnership' meant something perilously close to engulfment; to the Liberals, it was not a danger but an economic asset."

Smith's argument is just as fresh as it was 90 years ago. His words echo down the years like the lonely sound of a steam engine on a dark night, carrying wheat and furs to the mother country.

The Brain Drain in Reverse

By JOHN NOBLE WILFORD

NEW YORK — Leslie Cole, his wife and three children will sail home to England next month. After five years as an aerospace engineer here, he has lost his job, sold his house, said his good-byes to his American friends and is reluctantly going back to London to look for work.

Cole and his family are casualties of the recent economic recession and widespread cutbacks in aerospace and research spending. But his story has a difference.

Like thousands of foreign-born engineers and scientists who were lured to the United States in the last decade with promises of big salaries, better research facilities and bright futures, Cole now feels trapped by the cutbacks and disillusioned about his career prospects here. He is, therefore, becoming part of an apparently growing emigration of foreign-born workers back to their homelands.

In the last year or so, for example, a Nobel laureate returned to work in his native Germany, an astrophysicist returned to Denmark, an RCA engineer returned to Austria, a University of Illinois physicist returned to Japan and several Dutch astronomers went back to The Netherlands.

Just how many are going back has not been definitely established, but nearly every scientist can cite several cases of foreign-born colleagues who are heading home.

If the trend continues, American science administrators say, such emigration could lead to a significant reversal of the so-called "brain drain."

This is happening at a time when the brain drain from the rest of the world to the U.S. shows signs of being partly plugged. Last year, nearly 3,000 fewer scientists and engineers—10,255—came to the U.S. to work than in 1968.

While there are no similar statistics on the reverse flow, science attaches at the Washington embassies of several European nations report a growing number of calls from scientists investigating the opportunities to work abroad. Dr. Alessandro Silj, a Ford Foundation official who is a former deputy director of the European Economic Community's Washington office, said that he kept "meeting people who are going back to Europe."

In a series of interviews at laboratories and universities across the country, a variety of reasons for the emigration were given. They ranged from the sharp cutbacks in the aerospace industry and the general tightening of American research spending to the improved and sometimes superior scientific facilities now available in Europe and Japan.

A few scientists said they were leaving, or wanted to leave, because they were disturbed by the American social and political climate. Others cited family reasons—a homesick wife or aging parents, a preference for European schools for their children or concern that their children were losing touch with their own culture. Aside from the personal and professional reasons, there also seems to be a vague feeling that the exciting momentum is gone from American science and technology. The foreigners fail to see a clearcut science policy for the future, or any public support for one.

Sales peaked at $13.86 million in the three quarters compared with $7.6 million last year, and net income was $404,800 or 20 cents a share against $317,100 or 15.6 cents after year-end adjustment of 2.3 cents.

The company operates retail showrooms in 25 Ontario centres, with Toronto having 10 of the 38 outlets.

Banks Remain Silent on Further Rate Cut

By IRVING C. WHYNOT
Canadian Press Business Editor

The chartered banks have been prominent by their silence in reaction to the latest cut in the central bank rate.

The prospect is that the silence will continue and that no reduction in the chartered bank prime lending rate—the one that eventually means something to the average bank customer—can be expected in the immediate future.

The Bank of Canada cut the bank rate—the rate at which it lends money to the chartered banks—to six per cent from 6½ per cent effective Nov. 12.

It was the fourth reduction in the rate since mid-May, the most recent on Sept. 1, and continued the trend started in May when the rate was reduced to 7¼ per cent from eight, which had been in effect since mid-1969.

The bank rate is usually considered an indicator of government policy and a signal to the banks to lean toward easier credit. High bank rates are used to cool the economy during inflationary periods, and lower rates tend to put life back into a slow economy.

BANKS REACT SLOWLY

The chartered banks also were slow to react after the Sept. 1 reduction until Finance Minister Benson criticized them publicly for not lowering their rates.

The banks said no reduction in their prime rate—the rate at which they lend money to their best no-risk customers—was warranted. But they eventually reduced the prime rate to 7½ per cent from eight, apparently under considerable political pressure.

Mr. Benson says he has no intention of calling for another prime rate cut at this time, and the banks will say only that they are looking at the situation.

A Bank of Montreal spokesman noted: "The change in the Bank of Canada rate does not necessarily imply a change in the prime rate of the chartered banks. Therefore, no action is contemplated at this time."

His comment brings out a point which often is misunderstood. It is popularly regarded that a bank rate change automatically triggers changes in other rates. This is a myth.

Leif Olsen, senior vice-president of the First National City Bank in New York, told a recent conference board meeting that the prime rate is only one element in the broad spectrum of interest rates.

ACTION EXPLAINED

"It changes in response to changes in demand and supply of credit generally," he said. "Indeed, historically, the prime rate has generally been a laggard—responding after other rates have changed."

Mr. Olsen said the prime rate has never been a leader although it sometimes moves coincidentally with changes in other rates.

It is interesting to note, however, that more than 50 U.S. banks have just reduced their prime rate to 7¼ per cent, following a bank rate cut to 5¾ per cent.

That means rates are fractionally higher in Canada than in the U.S. and, in a roundabout way, makes more money available for Canadian business and individuals.

When rates are lower in the U.S., large American subsidiaries operating in Canada will borrow their money in the U.S. at the lower rate—leaving more money in Canada for Canadian borrowers.

When rates are lower in Canada, the U.S. firms borrow here, putting a heavy drain on the available money supply.

Nickel Deposit Largest?

MONTREAL (CP) — J. H. Kentish, president of Dumont Nickel Corp., said Wednesday a nickel deposit north of Val d'Or is possibly the largest single deposit discovered in the history of Canadian mining.

He told a news conference the deposit has a potential estimated at 4,000 million tons. It is located about 40 miles north of Val d'Or.

Kentish said an investment of more than $100 million will be necessary to bring the deposit into production by 1973. He said he expects the money will come from small investors in Quebec.

Dumont Nickel Corp., which is exploring and plans to develop the deposit, was incorporated in 1954.

Kentish said the strip of nickel ore is 4½ miles long and 3,000 feet wide.

Dumont stock gained 11 cents to 75 cents on a volume of 649,850 shares Wednesday on the Canadian Stock Exchange.

It has traded as low as 16 cents in April, 1970, and on Oct. 16 was still only 36½ cents.

Increased Rates Bid By AT & T

WASHINGTON (WP) — The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. will ask the Federal Communications Commission for a 6 per cent increase in its long distance revenue — or $385 million the company says.

The request would be the first for higher long distance rates in 17 years. During that time, the telephone company and the FCC have periodically agreed upon rate redutions, reflecting the lower costs of less costly long distance transmission facilities.

Now, AT & T says, inflation is raising costs faster than new technology can reduce them.

The biggest increases would be concentrated in person-to-person, operator-assisted, and coil calls, where AT & T says it is incurring sharply-higher-labor costs; customer-dialed calls, by contrast, would rise less sharply. In addition, daytime rates would also rise steeply in an effort to encourage more calling during the off-peak evening and night hours.

GARBAGE BURNER NEEDS FIXING

'Stench Has Kept Me Indoors'

NORTH COWICHAN — A fly-ash problem caused by a faulty screen on North Cowichan's $80,000 garbage incinerator will soon be rectified, Mayor Gerry Smith told council Wednesday.

"The manufacturer will be over next week and try to rectify the problem," he said.

The incinerator discussion was introduced after John Comer, of Herd Rd., complained about the fly-ash being a continual menace to nearby residents. He also complained about the "thunderous roar of the steel shovel as it grates along the concrete.

Pieces two to three inches long frequently rain down on my property," he said. "Some of these are still glowing hot. I have in my possession a large piece found on the vinyl roof of my automobile, which left behind a heat impression. The damage to the paint work is so severe that it requires repainting."

Comer said "the smoke and stench has kept me indoors most of today, and as I type this letter, I can see through the window a continuous shower of ash descending on the lawn.

"The thunderous roar of the steel shovel as it grates along on the concrete is to say the least unpleasant. This noise has increased beyond all reasoning in the last 10 days or so."

Ald. Jim Roome agreed that Comer has a certain amount of justification for his complaints but "he is living close to the incinerator and he will just have to face up to it."

Ald. Tom Burge, chairman of the pollution control board, was surprised at the complaint of the gabage disposal system, which has been in operation since June.

"Until this letter I always received comments on how cleanly the incinerator does burn."

The faulty screen and the inexperience of the incinerator operator under various weather conditions may be the cause of the fly-ash, Burge said.

Sawmill Expansion Protested; Residents Rap 'Trash', Noise

NORTH COWICHAN — North Shore Cowichan Bay residents fear their property values will decrease due to the expansion of Slegg Brothers Ltd. sawmill.

In letters to North Cowichan council J. A. B. Green and David Chase complained about noise from the mill, and "trashy" being dumped daily into the bay.

Council was asked to "take all possible steps to have this eyesore corrected and pollution threats minimized."

Mayor Gerry Smith told council members the company will clean up the mill site and that further development is planned.

Smith said he met mill officials and "they agreed the place is a mess and agreed to clean it up."

Green said "The huge piles of wood chips and the large area covered with ends of scrap lumber and debris" around the sawmill on Tzouhalem Road are a "disgrace to any industry and potential threat to a large area of this estuary. Even an average winter's flood water will wash the debris into the river channels where the salmon are already having a very difficult time.

"The marshes at the head of the bay are literally covered with abandoned logs which are effectively and prematurely filling the tidelands," Chase said.

"After each high tide the shores are littered with logs and logging debris (particularly bark) that is a product of the booming operation. Log booms are everywhere with no regard whatsoever for registered booming grounds limits. I am told that in some areas waterlogged bark lies 20 feet deep and is turning to slime which not only fills the bay but damages marine life in the process."

Ald. Tom Burge said all pollution should be curbed, and Ald. Jim Roome, referring to a proposed land fill at the sawmill, warned that if hogfuel is used, problems could arise. Experts should examine the situation, he said.

Revised Handbook On Welfare Due

Victoria's Community Action Group will publish its second welfare rights handbook in early December.

The group will print 1,000 copies. If demand is great, more copies will be produced.

The CAG's action committee chairman Susan Talbot said the handbook will have 10 pages. It will include explanations of recent policies on allowable earnings for welfare recipients and the provincial incentive plan for welfare mothers.

"The purpose of the booklet is to make people on welfare aware of what they're eligible for," she said.

FACTS CHECKED

Facts in the publication have been checked by officials at Victoria's welfare office.

She said the handbook would also include information on social allowance rates, overages and other benefits available to welfare recipients.

Last year, the group tried unsuccessfully to distribute copies of the first handbook in area welfare offices.

Mrs. Talbot said the CAG will try again this year to make copies available through welfare offices. Failing this, she said, group members will distribute them outside the offices.

The handbook is free to welfare recipients, but agencies desiring copies will be charged.

Mrs. Talbot said copies also can be ordered by phoning her at 479-7545, or phoning CAG president Dee Rafferty at 384-7965.

Requests for the group's first handbook came from communities as remote as Alert Bay and Prince George.

Man Charged With Prowling

DUNCAN — Trial of Peter Harold Clugston, charged with prowling by night near the dwelling house of another person, was adjourned to Dec. 18 in provincial court today.

Clugston, 31, Duncan and district director for the department of rehabilitation and social improvement, is charged with being in the area of the residence of Dennis Bundy, 350 Dogwood Ave.

The adjournment was granted after an application from Clugston's lawyer, Lloyd McKenzie of Victoria.

Hard-Luck Zoo Keeper To Leave

DUNCAN — Jim Oyen plans to sell his zoo here and move to Australia within two years.

After a fire in October which destroyed the zoo's reptile house—and a rainstorm that hit when he was rebuilding—Oyen said he became convinced he should move to a warmer climate.

He will take some animals with him and board others at the Oriole Bird Sanctuary at Sooke until he is established on the east coast of Australia.

He will donate his seal to the Sooke operation.

Oyen came to Vancouver Island from Holland in 1952 and founded the Duncan Zoo in 1958 at Glenora. He moved to the present location on the Trans-Canada Highway just south of here in 1963.

MORE THAN ASKED FOR

Crofton Gets Pool Grant

NORTH COWICHAN — Although Crofton asked for only $4,000 from the North Cowichan centennial grant towards a $15,000 swimming pool, it will get $6,400.

Henry Beeple, spokesman for the Crofton Ratepayers' Association, community centre and volunteer fire department, said they will try to raise the remaining amount from private organizations, public functions and volunteer labor and equipment.

He said they hoped to have the 25-by-60-foot pool completed in May in time for swimming lessons.

Mayor Gerry Smith advised council Wednesday that if it agreed to the grant Crofton residents would have more leverage to acquire four lots south of the community hall from the municipality for the project.

Council also agreed to three other projects for their $29,900 centennial grant:

A $12,000 concert stage at the Cowichan Exhibition Grounds, the mounting of a locomotive at Chemainus, estimated cost $4,000, and $7,500 to the Cowichan Valley Forest Museum for expansion plans.

The projects now need the B.C. Centennial committee approval.

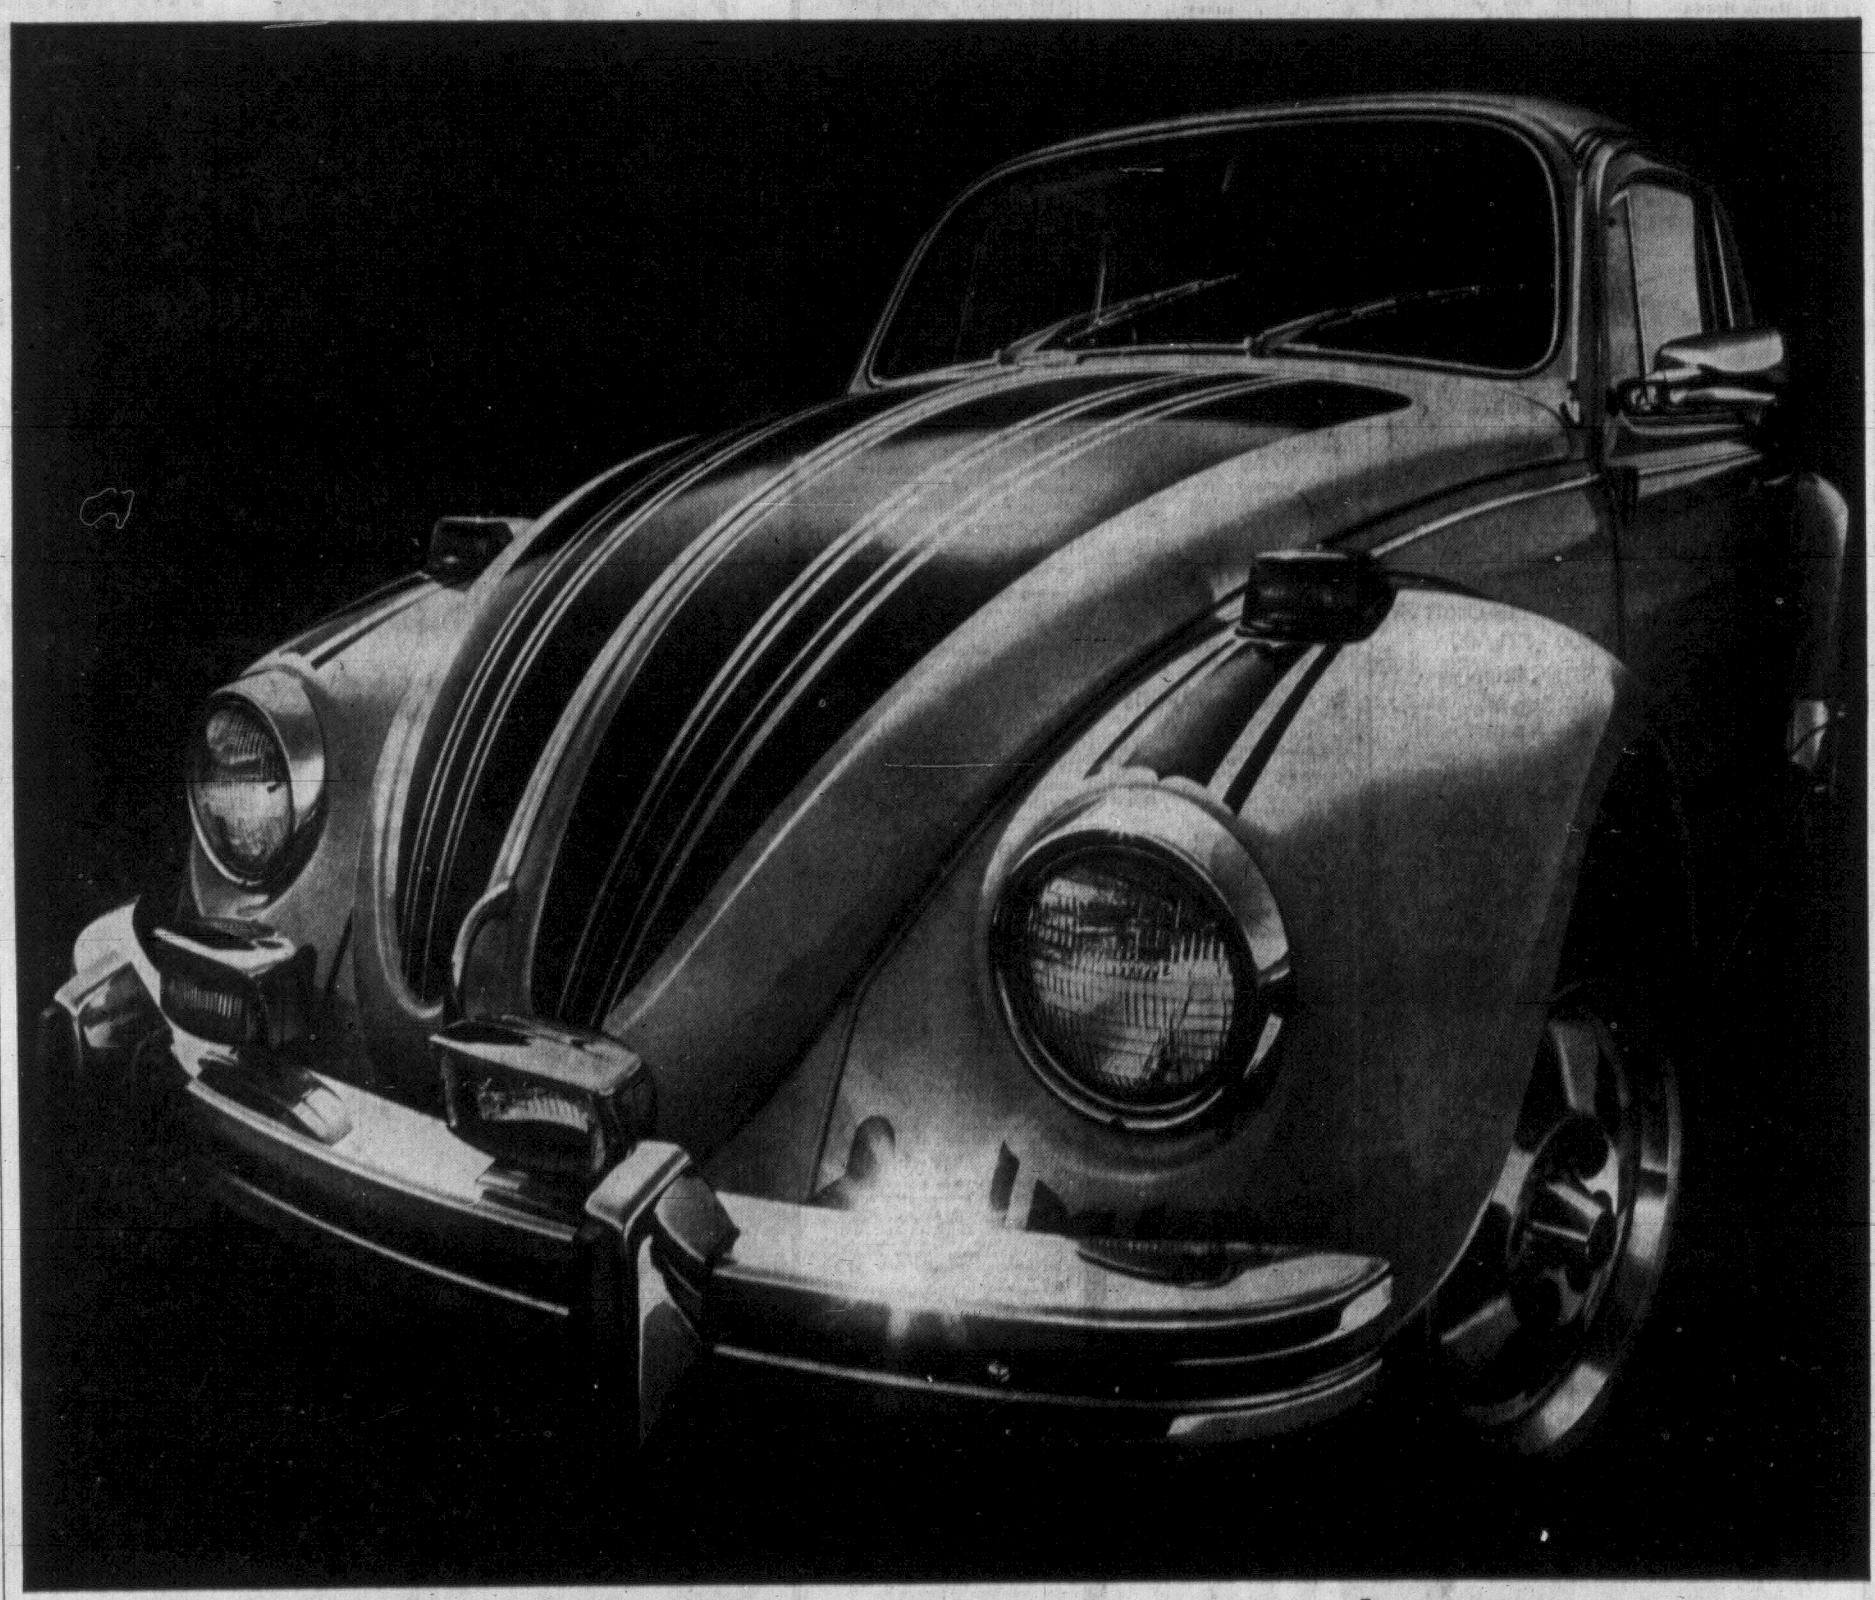
Returning Officer.



We've done our thing. Now you can do yours.

The funny thing is, we didn't even know that we had a "thing".

For the past 25 years, in our one track fashion, we've simply been doing our best to absolutely perfect the Beetle. To make it work even better, not necessarily look better.

And we haven't done badly at all, as evidenced by the '71 Super Beetle. It's faster, quieter, it carries twice as much luggage and is generally a lot different than the previous Beetle. All without looking much different.

But lately, we've noticed a lot of people have been taking our thing, and doing their own. (Like adding a cute flower here, or a kinky new paint job there.)

Frankly, we're flattered and delighted. And we put it all down to affection, pure and simple.

What's more, we'd even like to offer a few suggestions.

The bedazzled Bug in the picture, for example, is sporting some way out items that any VW dealer can supply you with: like nifty mag wheels and bumper overriders. Sexy driving lights. Crazy chrome stone-guards. And, wildest of all, the Glitterbug stripe kit.

The beauty of it all is, that now you can take an old Beetle and put it back in the groove, or do some far out things to a new one.

We've always built the Beetle to be tough enough to survive anything anybody or any place could dish out.

Now it looks like it'll even survive a whole new generation.

First Full-Time President Brings Smiles to Oil Company

By JOE WILL

CALGARY (CP) — If the directors of Panarctic Oils Ltd. seem to smile a lot these days, the reason is probably Charles R. Hetherington.

He is the company's first full-time president and brings an impressive set of credentials to the job.

Twenty-five years of oil industry experience have taken Mr. Hetherington throughout North America and Australia and into almost every phase of petroleum operations.

He has worked at exploring for, developing and financing oil and gas fields, been a consultant to governments and industry, dealt with regulatory bodies and built pipelines.

Mr. Hetherington will probably find use for all his expertise as he guides Panarctic's three-year-old northern exploration program and eventually, the company hopes, directs the sticky matter of bringing Arctic resources to southern markets.

CONVINCED HIMSELF

The 51-year-old president spent his boyhood in oil country—Norman, Okla.—but he became a Canadian citizen 12 years ago and has spent much of the last 20 years working on Canadian projects.

Many times his efforts were directed at goals set by Frank McMahon of Vancouver and for the last three years he was vice-president of Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd., a McMahon-controlled pipeline.

Mr. Hetherington said that when he first applied to Panarctic he did not give himself much chance of beating out the 100 petroleum executives bidding for the top job.

"But when I began looking at and writing up my qualifications, I began to convince myself."

His accomplishments obviously impressed the directors of the consortium which the federal government and 20 Canadian private petroleum companies formed in 1967 to share the cost of searching for Arctic oil.

There were many reasons behind the application, Mr. Hetherington said, but one of the chief ones was to get away from repetitive office routine and back to his love for exploration, discovery and development.

PROSPECTS THRILL

"I am much more thrilled by exploration prospects than I am by the day-to-day operations. . . .

"Panarctic is in a fantastic situation to say the least.

"Its land holdings are in an area which has all the prospects of the three major sedimentary basins in the world . . . the Middle East, Gulf Coast and Indonesia.

"The geological characteristics are very similar and the surface indications are that gas and oil are there."

He said he is confident that large reservoirs will be found, and sees no immediate end to the Panarctic drilling program which has kept two rigs operating for more than a year.

The lack of a gusher was due partly to the approach in selecting well sites.

"The company is drilling wells that it is obligated to under its farm-out agreements . . . and in addition has the right to drill wells to earn additional acreage.

"We are working on a long-range basis; hopefully the next (well) will be successful, but the prospects are so great efforts must be continued."

But the efforts will not be continued at the detriment of the northern people and their environment, Mr. Hetherington said.

USE NATIVE LABOR

All the company's drilling agreements require contractors to use "the maximum amount of native labor," and most drillers have placed between six and 12 northerners on their crews.

Panarctic, with 21 permanent employees in the North, has six natives on the job as mechanics, radio operators and general workers.

Mr. Hetherington said it is not possible to employ all-native labor because of a lack of training, but the number hired by the company is increasing as more graduate from the John Franklin vocational school at Yellowknife, N.W.T.

The school is sponsored by the federal government for the training of Indians and Eskimos from the territories.

Mr. Hetherington said the company's responsibility in the area of pollution control is probably the largest of any company in the Arctic because Panarctic is the largest developer.

"With my interjection into the company one of my objectives is going to be to see that we live up to all reasonable and desirable and sensible pollution objectives."

PLAYS PERCENTAGES

Mr. Hetherington, who moved into his new job during the summer, also plans to play the pollution percentages when the need arises to move crude oil out of the Arctic.

Pipelines will probably be the preferred method, although Panarctic has a major interest in the ice-breaking Alexbow vessel being tested in European and Canadian waters this winter.

"Historically the spills from pipelines are much less than those from ships," Mr. Hetherington said.

Mr. Hetherington cut his oil-industry teeth on pipelines in 1946 as an employee of Ford, Bacon and Davis, Inc., a New York consultant firm connected with construction of early long-distance oil and natural-gas pipelines.

In the late 1940s he began working for Mr. McMahon and between 1952 and 1959 was first vice-president and chief engineer of Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd.

During that time his doctorate degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in chemical engineering was useful as he presented technical data on gas export schemes to regulatory bodies in Canada and the United States.

STRUCK OUT ON OWN

In 1957 he became managing director of Pacific Petroleums Ltd., another McMahon-controlled company and was responsible for the development of the Fort St. John, B.C. gas field.

Mr. Hetherington struck out independently in 1960 as a consultant and also formed a private firm, Canerude Oil and Gas Co. Ltd., which discovered several small fields in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Three of his eight years as a consultant were spent advising Australian governments on the extent of energy resources and developing outlines for their orderly development.

He returned to McMahon in 1967 as director and vice-president of Westcoast Transmission and Westcoast Production Co., an inactive subsidiary of the pipeline.

One of his last tasks for Westcoast before joining Panarctic was to direct a $24 million common-share offering of Westcoast Production which brought the firm into an active exploration role.

Redevelopment To Cost $1 B

TORONTO (CP) — A $1 billion Metro Centre redevelopment plan for 187 acres of railway yard along the Toronto waterfront was endorsed Wednesday by the Metropolitan Toronto planning board.

The board asked Metro Council to support the residential-commercial project, a joint venture involving Canadian National Railways and Canadian Pacific Rail.

"If government makes unreasonable demands on these developers," board member David Mansur said, "we will be left with a big eyesore and CN and CP will take their development plans to Vancouver."

NEW LOWER PHOSPHATE
SURF
GETS THE BIG OK!

SURF HEAVY DUTY
OK
says Mrs. L. Logan of Pictou, Nova Scotia.
We gave Mrs. Logan an advanced pack of new lower phosphate SURF, reformulated with substitute materials. Here's what she had to say about it:
"SURF has always been a good buy. I have tried the new lower phosphate formula. It still gets my clothes really clean and I'm saving money too. So I will stay with SURF."
This is just the beginning. Lever research will continue to try to find ways to use substitute materials to lower phosphate levels while maintaining SURF's high quality performance.

Police Artist Gets His Man

TORONTO (CP) — Intricate pieces of driftwood, the faces of holdup men, missing persons, decomposed bodies — these aren't the ideal choice of subject for every painter. But they are just some of the things that Detective-Sgt. Jim Majury has had to cope with in his role as police department artist.

Sgt. Majury, who left a career in commercial art, did his first drawing for the force 10 years ago.

A series of robberies at Yonge Street theatres left police with no leads until Sgt. Majury decided to try his hand at piecing together the descriptions given by various witnesses into a portrait.

Within hours his sketches had been posted in local police stations and three days later a suspect was arrested and later convicted.

Since those early days Sgt. Majury, now in the department's homicide division, has completed an average of 40 drawings a year, mostly in connection with major crimes such as robbery, rape, murder and kidnapping.

He has also done a few sketches of stolen jewelry and in one case was called upon to draw a piece of driftwood as described by a proud owner who claimed his stolen object was worth $3,000.

Sgt. Majury's techniques have proved so useful that he has been loaned out to other police departments. About 10 out of every 100 drawings he does lead directly to an arrest or play a major part in arrests.

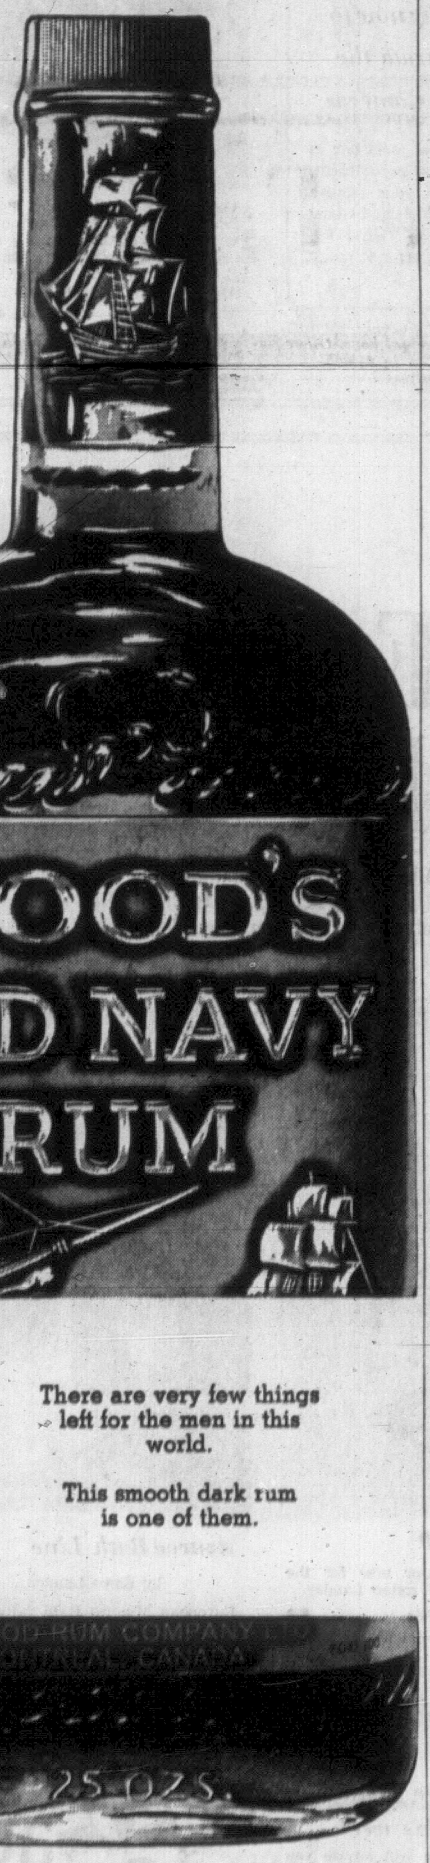
Witnesses are given a little help towards their descriptions of suspects. The detective shows them a series of photographs and gets them to pick out the features that seem the most appropriate to the suspect concerned.

Then he creates a basic drawing and works away at each feature until it is as perfect as possible to the witness's memory.

It takes about three hours normally to arrive at any acceptable end product. But it has taken as long as nine hours and as little as 15 minutes.

People are not as unobservant as is often supposed, Sgt. Majury believes. "The information is up there. It just has to be drawn out because people's minds are so complex and cluttered."

And according to him there is one thing a witness never forgets and that is the criminal's eyes — and sometimes the muzzle of his gun.



There are very few things left for the men in this world.

This smooth dark rum is one of them.

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1970—PAGE 13

IT'S TOO MUCH FOR 'B.C.'S ECONOMIC CRISIS'

Poor Humbly Ask Queen to Stay Home

The Victoria Low Income Group Wednesday asked Queen Elizabeth to postpone the Royal Family's centennial visit to British Columbia in 1971.

In a registered letter to the Queen, group president Walter Olszewski asked for the postponement until "such time as the province finds itself in a more favorable financial position."

The letter states in part:

"Along with our premier, W. A. C. Bennett, we are gravely concerned about the unemployment situation in British Columbia (and Canada) and the cost to the economy. Unemployment in Canada is the highest it has ever been since the Depression.

"Because of this, our provincial welfare minister, Philip A. Gaglardi, is concerned over the shocking increase in welfare costs and is doing all in his power to cut costs and get recipients off welfare.

"As a poor people's organization we naturally share his concern and realize that the Royal Family's entertainment may cost this government close to a quarter of a million dollars.

"It is our contention that the money saved from the entertainment costs of Her Majesty's visit could go towards easing the suffering of the poor. As the Queen of the Commonwealth and a mother who has raised children, we are sure that you will be deeply sympathetic to our appeal on behalf of the poor of this province during the present economic crisis."

The letter also states that civil service hiring restrictions and freezes on school and hospital construction demonstrate the economic crisis and the government's attempt to cut costs.

Olszewski said he does not think the Queen will ever see his letter or postpone the Royal Family's visit. He said he sent the letter to dramatize the plight of the province's poor.

Deputy provincial secretary L. J. Wallace said costs of the royal visit will be shared by the provincial and federal governments.

Because the itinerary has yet to be drawn up, he said, it is impossible to estimate the cost. But he said Olszewski's $250,000 figure should be considerably higher than the actual cost.

Big Area Bought For Park At Sooke

By ROGER STONEBANKS

The Capital Regional District today purchased 1,704 acres for a regional park at East Sooke for $520,000.

The acquisition is more than all the regional park purchases put together in the last four years.

The East Sooke park lies south of Sooke Basin, east of Sooke Harbor and west of Becher Bay. It has two miles of coastline.

Regional district planner Tony Roberts said the provincial government is holding in park reserve an adjoining area on either side of the new park and the acquisition will link them.

"Altogether, we will have 3,000 acres of reserved land and the acquisition, almost four miles of watertront," he said.

The land was purchased from Grouse Nest Resort, but does not include the resort itself which is further away. The regional district put down $175,000 and will pay $175,000 Dec. 1, 1971, and $170,000 Dec. 1, 1972. One-third of the cost will come from the provincial government via the regional parks legislation aid.

'Most Sensational Thing'

Regional district chairman, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, in formally announcing the acquisition, said it is "by far the most dramatic and sensational thing the Capital Regional District has done to date.

"In one purchase we have more than doubled our park holding and, far more important than that, have obtained for the people what could be the last few miles of wilderness waterfront on the southern end of Vancouver Island.

"I would be remiss if I did not congratulate the two regional district officials involved in working out the details of the purchase, A. H. (Tony) Roberts, planning director, and R. W. Long, executive director.

"The negotiations were complicated and at times difficult and I am more than happy that Mr. Long was able to bring them to a successful conclusion before he leaves the region for other fields. (Long is leaving the district for a new job with the Municipal Finance Authority of B.C.)

"Our regional parks acquisition program has been a tremendous success since its inception four years ago, but this is the greatest triumph of all."

The regional district, before the East Sooke purchase, had acquired 1,433 acres in various locations for $731,000. Biggest of these was Elk-Beaver Lake, 960 acres, formerly owned by Victoria city.

Bays, Beaches, Even Mountain

The district's parks program is financed by one-half mill annual contributions from participating municipalities and electoral areas plus the one-third provincial grant.

The East Sooke park features rocky, sloping land, bays, small beaches and open dry landscape. Although the coast is in places steep and rough, it is not so rugged that a good trail could not be cut which would provide water and viewpoint access, said Roberts.

The park has wild life and flora of special interest and is less than an hour's drive from Victoria. It includes Mount Maguire, 900 feet high.

The district's five-year park acquisition program ends next year and the regional board will have to decide:

1. Whether the district continues to just acquire land for the future;
2. Whether to continue a modified acquisition program while shifting part of its half-mill budget to development;
3. Whether to halt the acquisition program for a couple of years and use the half-mill money for a crash development program.

Resignation Submitted By Math Head at Uvic

The head of the University of Victoria mathematics department submitted his resignation last week, it was learned today.

Dr. Sudhish G. Ghurye became head of the department July 1.

"I can say this, my resignation has not yet been accepted," he said today, but declined to comment on the reasons for his decision.

Ghurye had not heard of a petition signed by a majority of mathematics faculty members which reportedly called on Uvic president Dr. Bruce Partridge not to accept the resignation.

'Can't Possibly Be That Many Grievances'

Victoria council's finance committee today showed little sympathy to requests for establishment of a rental grievance board and referred the matter to Intermunicipal Committee.

The committee had asked for a report from city manager Dennis Young but Young declined any definite recommendations.

Ald. Ove Witt said creation of a grievance board under the enabling laws of the province seems like "a lot of money for a few grievances."

He asked if there were any complaints from people "outside of this mouthy guy here," referring to Brian Jewitt, president of the Capital Region Tenants' Association.

Ald. Percy Frampton said "there can't possibly be that many" grievances that such a board is required.

AMPLE AREA

Ald. Tom Christie suggested turning the matter over to the Intermunicipal Committee because the tenants' association obviously took in a larger area than Victoria.

Young told the committee the city solicitor has pointed out there is ample recourse for grievances through the courts under B.C. landlord and tenant legislation.

But Young offered the example that the cost of recovering half a month's rent through the courts would amount to more than the recovery.

"It is frequently a costly procedure to haggle over half a month's rent," he said.

HIGH RENTS

City assessor Alf Joyce told the committee that most complaints his office receives from tenants are over allegedly too high rents. There are also complaints that people are forced out of apartments when they are suddenly given 30 days' notice, "but there's nothing we can do about it."

Young's report said Vancouver's year-old grievance board office receives about 50 complaints a day.

Decision to refer the question of a grievance board to the Intermunicipal Committee did not cancel plans for a tenant demonstration at city hall.

The demonstration was to have occurred at 3 p.m. today by members of the Capital Region Tenants' Association.

MAYOR 'EXTREMELY ENTHUSIASTIC'

Low-Rent Homes Soon Open

Two low-rental housing schemes in Saanich are nearing completion.

An 81-suite senior citizens apartment, at Hampton and Seaton opposite Hampton Park in the Tillicum district, is expected to be finished next month.

A 20-unit family housing scheme, comprising five quadruplexes on Scotia Street in the Cloverdale area, should be ready in January.

It has taken just over four years since Ald. Edith Gunning, then chairman of the health and welfare committee and now chairman of the municipal housing committee, provided the initial impetus for the municipally-initiated housing plans.

Both projects are financed by the federal and provincial governments.

The senior citizens apartment has drawn praise for its non-institutional appearance, in stark contrast to the usual box-like apartments in Greater Victoria.

"I am extremely enthusiastic," said Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis.

The two-storey lumber and stucco building, being built by Dawson Developments Ltd. of Vancouver for $633,785, has the appearance of townhouses with its shape and conscious attempt to not to provide a solid-wall view.

The site area is 1½ acres and is within a block or two of a lawn bowling club and the Saanich Senior Citizens Activity Centre.

The original architecture was created by Bernard Lam of the provincial public works department, working with F. B. Simpson, after Saanich council rejected three proposals by builders in 1969 because they were box-like buildings.

The building will provide 14 one-bedroom suites and 67 bachelor suites with a lounge, games room, social room, four laundry rooms, a nurse's room and four storage rooms.

Construction started last July. The land was made available by Saanich for $26,600.

Over at Scotia Street, contractor Frank Krieger is building 20 three-bedroom family units in five quadruplexes. The design is a variation of the townhouse scheme, with two floors and stucco and wood shingle on the outside.

Krieger said the unit price is $15,600, putting the total cost at $313,000.

Completion of the quadruplexes will bring to a close the Saanich family housing scheme, which started off as a unique dispersed project in which single-family houses were bought in different areas and rented to low-income families.

This ran into cost problems with a price peg of $14,000. It was possible to purchase only 15 houses.

Mrs. Gunning said much credit for the quadruplex development goes to the Victoria Home Builders' Association which ran a design competition.

She said rents have not been fixed for the senior citizens accommodation but she thought it would be in the $55 to $60 a month range.

The family housing would have rent scaled to income, from one-quarter to one-third, in much the same way as the Rose-Blanshard housing in Victoria.

Occupants will be chosen on the basis of need and date of application, she said.

Responsibility for the management and operation of both housing projects is that of the B.C. Housing-Management Commission.

Six Injured In Car Crash

A spectacular crash at the intersection of Cook and Yates at 12:47 a.m. today sent six people to St. Joseph's Hospital and caused a total of $2,000 damage to two cars.

Michael Lee, 20, of 534½ Pandora, was driving north on Cook and Robert McAvoy, 31, of 587 Forward in Colwood, was driving west on Yates when the collision occurred.

In satisfactory condition at St. Joseph's is Clifton Mak, 22, of 2596 Wesley Place, with severe cuts to his face and head.

Treated and released after the crash were Chester Chew, 18, face and knee cuts; Jim Lee Duo Shen, 19, hand and face cuts; Robbie Ping Song Chen, 20, arm and leg injuries. All were from 2596 Wesley Place.

The two drivers were also injured, McAvoy with face and eye cuts, Lee with a broken collar bone and head injuries.

Ice Arena Vote Decided

The unorganized areas of Colwood, Langford and Metchosin will vote separately but simultaneously Dec. 12 on an ice arena referendum.

The move follows a decision by J. D. Baird, inspector of municipalities at the municipal affairs department, who said he is not prepared to approve establishment of Langford, Colwood and Metchosin as a specified area for this purpose.

Under a specified area, the vote would be totalled and 60 per cent over-all would be necessary for passage. Under the new move, 60 per cent approval is needed in each of the three areas.

This means the vote will be on the same basis as the referendum in which the old Colwood racetrack was bought for a local park.

In that vote, Metchosin failed to register 60 per cent and Langford and Colwood went ahead on their own. Indications this time are that if any one area votes no, the whole measure will fail.

Directors of the Capital Regional District gave approval to the necessary bylaw Wednesday. Charges for the arena are a responsibility of the affected areas only.

The bylaw states that the arena must not cost more than $750,000 and borrowing must not be at an interest rate greater than 9 per cent.

Arthur Mayse . . .

LAST APRIL, I REported to you on a group of mothers whose common denominator is one of the strangest, saddest problems known to medicine. Each has an autistic child whom she and her husband hope to save from the fate that society routinely imposes on children so afflicted.

This is to be lumped with the retarded or the emotionally disturbed, and so deprived of the highly-specialized treatment their condition demands.

By way of a recap, autism is a turning-off by the child who enters life inadequately equipped to channel the stimuli of his senses. He escapes this intolerable bombardment by retreating inward, and resists every attempt to bring him out of his never-never world.

But what nature denied him, specialized training and teaching can in large measure supply.

The mothers, guided by Victoria psychiatrist Dr. Phillip Ney, were doing their best to bring their autistic children out of their never-never land. Something else was needed however—a special class for the school-age autistic in which the slow, patient, task of restoration could continue.

The next chapter was one of progress and of hope.

The parents concerned believed their chances of obtaining help for their children would be better if they set up an organization. With the help of a lawyer who was quick to volunteer his services, they formed Victoria Society for Autistic Children . . . Canada's first.

The mothers who had been meeting weekly with Dr. Ney at Eric Martin Institute were joined by others. Today, membership stands at 18.

A few weeks ago, Canada's first training centre for autistic children opened at Queen Alexandra Solarium.

It was, and is, little more than a beginning: a pilot project freighted with hope and functioning on much less than a shoestring.

Queen Alexandra Solarium provides a teaching area, rent-free, on a temporary basis.

Four autistic children — all the project can handle at the moment — are delivered and called for each school day.

A teacher has been serving without pay. She's being trained by Ney in the special techniques and methods required of those who would get through to the autistic. Other volunteers in training assist her.

But the key-word here is temporary. Unless this class can be brought into the public education system where it belongs, it is going to become a lost cause.

A permanent classroom is needed.

In spite of her will to help, the teacher cannot and shouldn't be expected to serve without salary.

Nor can the class function indefinitely without equipment designed to meet the needs of the autistic child.

The Society for Autistic Children is all too aware of these facts. It has no regular funds outside membership fees which represent no more than a drop in the bucket.

It has sought help from Greater Victoria School Board. The board had none to offer.

The Society appealed to the Community Chest, and received a sympathetic hearing. But the Red Feather budget had been made up for this year.

Clubs and organizations approached wished the project well, but are committed to other undertakings.

That is how matters stand today.

Our British Columbia education system provides for the retarded child. There are schools and classrooms. For the emotionally disturbed, the same. But for the autistic child, who is neither one nor the other, no provision whatever.

Apart from the four children in the pilot project, this city's school-age autistics are variously distributed in classrooms and institutions set up to cope with all problems save theirs. Their number is not large: an educated guess sets it at about 14.

Their tragedy is that they aren't receiving the handling which would recover most of them at least to the point where they'd eventually fit into standard school classes.

I think these children should have their chance. I think you should be aware that unless one public school classroom, one teacher's salary and a little equipment is provided from your school taxes, it's probable that they will remain condemned for life to the autist's shadow-world.

And if you feel that no child who can be saved should be so cut off, you may share my anger over a situation that cries out for remedy.

Riders Avoid Elimination With 11-3 Win

CALGARY (CP) — Tackle Ed McQuarters, who has performed such heroics before, intercepted a pass and ran 87 yards for a game-clinching touchdown Wednesday night as Saskatchewan Roughriders beat Calgary Stampeders 11-3 in the Western Football Conference final.

The victory before 23,616 fans evened the best-of-three final at one game each and sent the teams back to Regina for a deciding contest Sunday afternoon. Calgary won the opener 28-11 last Saturday in Regina.

McQuarters, three-time Canadian Football League all-star, stunned the Stampeders with less than 50 seconds remaining. He intercepted the ball from Calgary quarterback Jerry Keeling, who let it pop free as he was hit by a swarm of tacklers on the Saskatchewan 23.

"It took a couple of seconds to realize what happened, then I just took off," McQuarters said.

The 27-year-old tackle from the University of Oklahoma lumbered down the field protected by a horde of Saskatchewan blockers. Before the big break, the Roughriders led 4-3.

ABENDSCHAN ADDS POINT

Jack Abendschan, who also kicked a 22-yard field goal and a single, converted the touchdown. Larry Robinson accounted for Calgary's points with 28-yard field goal.

Saskatchewan coach Eagle Keys said the break that gave the Roughriders the touchdown was one of the few that come their way. Saskatchewan took all eight penalties, which resulted in 29 yards, although Calgary declined four of them.

The key play was nothing new for McQuarters, Canada's Lineman of the Year in 1967, who led the Roughriders to the 1966 Grey Cup with a 50-yard touchdown on a fumble recovery in the WFC final against Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

He recovered Kenny Ploen's fumble after the Winnipeg quarterback was hit by a wave of Saskatchewan tacklers. The six points helped Saskatchewan to win 21-19 and sweep the final in two games.

Wednesday's win was the fifth in succession for the Roughriders in Calgary's McMahon Stadium. The streak includes three victories this season and two last year, one a 36-13 decision in the second game of the 1969 WFC final which Saskatchewan won.

LOSE LANCASTER

Saskatchewan lost quarterback Ron Lancaster early in the third quarter of the hard-hitting contest with an injured back muscle after the eight-year veteran took a jarring tackle from Calgary end Dick Suderman. Extent of the injury was not known.

Nolan Bailey, Saskatchewan offensive end, suffered a knee injury in the first half and is expected to miss the final game. His place likely will be taken by handyman Al Ford.

Linebacker Chuck Kyle of Saskatchewan and defensive backs Gig Perez and Frank Andruski, both of Calgary, had to be helped off the field, but they all returned after a short rest.

Fullback George Reed, recovering from a leg injury which sidelined him for 30 days, was the offensive star for Saskatchewan with 109 yards rushing on 17 carries. McKinnis paced Calgary with 64 yards on 15 carries.

In passing, Keeling completed 13 of 28 attempts for 145 yards, including five receptions and 59 yards by Dave Cranmer.

Notes from an uncashed win ticket, or as an Irishman would appreciate having it put on the record: Barcaldine, the greatest horse ever to represent Ireland, was never beaten. Foaled in 1878, his super race was when he gave Hackness, winner of the famed Cambridgeshire, a 50-yard start, and beat him easily. In that race he carried 136 pounds, Hackness, 156. An ailing leg forced him into stud, for $40,000, a record for that era.

So be it, and aspiring jockeys can take heart in the fact that Eddie Arcaro, considered one of the most proficent of all hardboots, rode 250 losers before he won his first . . . On the same subject, jockey Sandy Hawley who is hot on the heels of Willie Shoemaker's 1953 record of 485, not only has an excellent chance to make it, being at 421, and going strong, but also has a couple of other firsts to his credit. When Shoemaker was the nation's leading apprentice in 1949, he rode 219 winners. Hawley last year had 230 winners in achieving the same honor. In his second year, Shoemaker had 388 winners, the same number as Joe Culmone. Hawley in his second season, already has surpassed that total . . . Incidentally, he will finish out the season in Florida, where the competition is tougher . . . But apparently he has the talent, because last year he was the leading rider at Hialeah, and also was leading at Gulfstream when he decided to return to ride in Canada . . . And so Canada will have the two leading reinsmen in the country . . . Gerve Filion of Quebec, has passed his former world record of 407 wins for harness race drivers, and is building up the total daily.

And here's an observation on Joe Kapp, the sometimes star quarterback of the Boston Patriots: Joe Kapp as a holdout was a somebody with nothing; now as a quarterback with Boston, he a nobody, with plenty . . . Which is all he wanted anyway wasn't it? . . . or then there was quote attributed to GM Bud Poile of the Vancouver Canucks after the Canucks had lost to Chicago Black Hawks the first time in Chicago: "I knew we were in trouble when before the game one of our rookies, Jim Hargreaves lined up to get Bobby Hull's autograph" . . . And if the Canucks aren't yet in the super-star class, as some would have us believe, at least they have one thing going for them. They are clearly the hockey champions of English-speaking Canada . . . The game score is three zip over the Leafs . . . Now, a word for the old timers . . . That fellow who is helping the Oakland Raiders so much in the NFL is George Blanda . . . the news services say he is 43 . . . The secret report is that he is 46 . . . and who won the recent world golf title? Another oldie, Roberto De Vicenzo . . . He's only 47 . . . and that fellow who is scoring all those points for the Red Wings . . . It's Gordie Howe, who else, and he's going on 43 . . . And wouldn't it be something if he could run away with the scoring spoon, again!

And if the's a case of sheer desperation in Detroit, it's probably because of the name . . . The Detroit Lions, until two weeks ago, were considered good enough to win their division in the NFL . . . Then came Tom Dempsey's 63-yard field goal, which beat them at New Orleans; and last Sunday, they lost in the last minute, a game they should have won, against the Minnesota Vikings, the team they must overcome . . . Wasn't it the B.C. Lions who did almost the same thing earlier, losing in the final seconds against Saskatchewan by a field goal, a game they seemingly had won, and then at Montreal, in a game they had no business losing, either? . . . It's the name LIONS that is in ferment . . . and parents thinking of getting their hockey playing sons a yule gift may be interested in this proposal . . . Ray Slayton of 778 Fort Street who has no interest in the publication business, is a personal friend of Jean Beliveau's, and if anyone would like to have the book "Strength Down the Middle" autographed by the Montreal centre, Ray says he will be only too pleased to have it done . . . Contact him early . . .

The death of George Chenier Canadian snooker champion, this week has stirred the memory of one city old-timer. Percy Fitzsimmons, 79, recalled the day when Chenier was operating the old billiard rooms above the meat market on the corner of Douglas and Johnson, and he, Fitzsimmons, who was considered fairly proficent with a cue, was invited to play. "I broke, and Chenier ran off 99 straight points," Fitzsimmons recalled. Chenier also operated the parlors in the basement of what now is the Olympic Hotel.

Nominations Being Asked For Year's Top Athletes

The awards which cover six categories — secondary school athlete-of-the-year, junior athlete-of-the-year, university athlete-of-the-year, team-of-the-year, and over-all athlete-of-the-year — will be presented at a banquet in Vancouver, Jan. 25.

Nominations are based on performances in 1970. A nominee and two seconders are required for the awards co-sponsored by the Sports Federation and the Vancouver Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Tickets for the banquet and further information are available through the B.C. Sports Federation, 1200 West Broadway, Vancouver 9, B.C.

Gage-Cole Victoria's Starter; Cuba Selection Sparks Furore

CARTENGA, Colombia (CP) — Venezuela downed The Netherlands by a lopsided 5-1 score in the opening game of the world amateur baseball championships here Wednesday, but the hottest action took place in a meeting of tournament officials.

Cuba, which meets Canada's entry, Victoria Centennials, Friday, was awarded the 1971 series in a vote by the 12 competing countries. The United States immediately announced it would not be able to compete for political reasons.

The U.S. action caused quite a furore according to informants, but further details were not available.

Meanwhile, the Centennials, Canada's national champions, continued to work out in preparation for their opening game against the Cubans.

Right fielder Gordie Strongman of Victoria, said following Wednesday's workout he expects the weather to be the biggest single factor in the Canadian performance.

"The big thing is humidity," he said. "The ball won't carry far in this weather. It's also tough getting the strength up to hit the ball out of the park."

Coach Bob Lumley said he expects to start Victoria right-hander Murray Gage-Cole against the Cubans.

Gage-Cole attends the University of Washington on a baseball scholarship.

Downed Foster counted out while jubilant Frazier dances in background.

BOSTON (AP) — A disturbance broke out at Boston Arena Wednesday night, with many fans throwing bottles and chairs at the screen, when the closed circuit television picture went dead during the second and final round of the Joe Frazier-Bob Foster heavyweight title fight.

The crowd of 4,000 fans had watched a live boxing program, the televised George Foreman-Boone Kirkman fight, and the first round of the Frazier-Foster bout when the picture went out.

The fans became unruly as they missed seeing Frazier knock out Foster in the second round, and extra police were summoned at the Arena as it appeared the trouble might get out of hand. The picture came back on, however, and the crowd quieted down as the knockout was replayed on the screen.

Frazier Good Puncher, Pretender But No King

By ED SCHUYLER JR.

DETROIT (AP) — Joe Frazier is a deadly puncher like great heavyweights of the past, but until he beats Muhammad Ali he will be a pretender rather than a king to boxing fans.

Frazier put his skills on display Wednesday night and was impressive as he knocked out light heavyweight champion Bob Foster in two rounds in his first title defence since he knocked out Jimmy Ellis last February.

A crowd of only 6,300—second to the Ali-Sonny Liston fight in Lewiston, Me. in 1965 as the smallest heavyweight title turnout in modern history—showed up at 12,500-seat Cobo Arena for the feature half of the closed-circuit television double-header. Unbeaten heavyweight George Foreman stopped Boone Kirkman in two rounds in the opener in New York's Madison Square Garden.

But the Frazier victory cleared another block to a fight with Ali.

LISTS POSSIBLE SITES

"I'm not talking about any fights for about three weeks," said Frazier's manager, Yank Durham, who then mentioned New York, Houston and Philadelphia as possible sites for a Frazier-Ali fight which could be in February.

"We will get together and talk," said Durham who added, "He might want more money than I want and then there wouldn't be any fight."

"I want Joe Frazier," Ali shouted after watching the bout on closed circuit television in Atlanta where he defeated Quarry last month in his first fight since he was stripped of his heavyweight title for refusing induction into the Army.

Promoters feel that a fight between the two would be the most lucrative in history—grossing up to $10 million.

BONAVENA FIGHT NEXT

Frazier's demolition job on Foster kept Foster from being the first light heavyweight champion to win the heavyweight crown. Seven previous light heavy champs tried unsuccessfully nine times for boxing's big prize.

"One thing I can say about him is he has a good left hook," said Foster.

It was three deadly hooks that smashed Foster senseless at 49 seconds of the second round.

"I slipped a jab and hit him with a left hook for the first knock down," said Frazier.

"The second time I doubled up with the left hook to the body and to the head."

Foster got up at the count of nine after the first knockdown and it was obvious he was in deep trouble.

"I don't think the referee should have let Bob come out after the first knockdown," said Frazier.

When Foster went down for the second time, referee Tom Brisco could have counted far past 10. In fact, Foster was still unsteady when his handlers helped him from the ring.

The 26-year-old Frazier packed 209 pounds on his 5-foot-11¼-inch frame as he scored his 23rd knockout in his unbeaten pro career of 26 fights.

For the 6-3½ Foster, who weighed 188, the heaviest of his career, it was his fifth loss in 46 fights and the fourth to a heavyweight.

The sparse turnout at Cobo Arena paid a gross of $147,000. Frazier was guaranteed $150,000 against 40 per cent of all receipts. The fight was seen on closed circuit television at 110 locations, with 500,000 sets, in 91 cities in the United States and Canada and also was beamed to 27 other countries.

Foster's end was 22½ per cent.

It was the second loss in a row for Cats and left the Victoria squad still one point ahead of Vancouver Centennials in the battle for the Coastal Division lead.

Royals moved within two points of Centennials and nine points ahead of cellar-dwelling Chilliwack Bruins with the win.

Lawrence Quechuk opened scoring for Royals on a power-play at 5:26 of the first period, four seconds after Tom Keep of Victoria received a minor penalty.

Royals' Jim Dalzell counted on a power-play in the second period to give his team a 3-2 edge after Scott Munro had evened the count earlier in the same frame.

Mayer proved to be the goat again in the third period when Ian McCracken finished off New Westminster scoring on another power-play.

Other New Westminster scorers were Grant Williams and Dale Craig while Mark Thomas counted for Victoria in the first period.

Terry Richardson in the Royals' net stopped 33 shots, including 17 in the second period when Cougars appeared to hold a slight edge in play.

FORSLUND BUSY

Ed Forslund was kept busy in front of the Cougars' goal, making 35 saves.

Cougars failed to come up with their usual close-checking and allowed the Royals plenty of skating room.

In the final analysis, although Cougars only took four of the 10 minor penalties in the game, three proved too many.

In the only other game of the evening, Kamloops Rockets moved into first place in the Okanagan Division with an 8-4 victory over visiting Kelowna Buckaroos.

Luzzi Entering Political Arena

CALGARY (CP) — Don Luzzi, for 12 years an outstanding lineman with Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football Conference, received the Social Credit nomination Tuesday to contest the Calgary-Buffalo constituency in the next provincial election.

But Luzzi has a problem — he is not a Canadian citizen.

He does have landed immigrant status and hopes to become a Canadian citizen soon.

Under the Election Act, candidates must be citizens by nomination day, which is set only after an election is called. The Social Credit government is not expected to call a general election before spring.

Foreman Scores Victory No. 24

NEW YORK (AP) — Unbeaten George Foreman belted Boone Kirkham unmercifully and beat the Seattle heavyweight Wednesday night when referee Arthur Mercante stopped the fight after 41 seconds of the second round.

Foreman, who won his 24th consecutive professional fight, rushed across the ring at the opening bell and pushed the surprised Kirkman flat on the seat of his pants. It was ruled as no knockdown.

Kirkman was up at three and took the mandatory eight count. Then Foreman resumed his barrage. When he tugged Kirkman down again, Mercante warned him about the tactics.

At the bell, Mercante took the round away from Foreman, who outweighed Kirkman 216 to 203, although he had a clear edge.

ELEVEN PUNCHES

In the second round, Foreman wasted no time, belting Kirkman almost at will. A barrage of 11 punches, most of them rights, sent Kirkman down again, this time on his face.

Kirkman got up again but was glassy-eyed and defenceless and Mercante stopped the fight.

It was the 21st knockout for Foreman, who won the Olympic heavyweight title in 1968. For Kirkman, it was only his second loss in 24 fights.

Ex-Browns' Backs Tackle Grand Jury

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Bernie Parrish, former defensive back with Cleveland Browns, was to testify again today before a special federal grand jury investigating possible anti-trust violations in operations of the National Football League.

Parrish was called before the jury Wednesday afternoon following testimony by Ross Fichtner, another former Browns defensive back.

Fichtner said some of the questions the jury asked him dealt with player-management relations and relations among players in the NFL.

He said the question of blackballing players came up, "but I wasn't able to give them much information."

Parrish was with the Browns from 1959 until after the first game of the 1966 season, when he asked for his release. He finished the season with Houston Oilers and then retired from football.

Fichtner, 32, said the Browns did not renew his contract after the 1967 season following a squabble over a celebrity golf tournament in which he had charge of inviting players. He was accused of not inviting Negro players.

MOUNT VIEW VS. COWICHAN

Island Title at Stake

Mount View Hornets and Cowichan battle Friday for the Times Trophy and the Vancouver Island high school boys' soccer championship at Royal Athletic Park.

Cowichan, first-place finishers in the mid-Island league, downed Powell River 7-3 to gain the other berth.

Both Mount View and Cowichan will advance to the B.C. high school soccer tournament scheduled for Nov. 26-28, also in Victoria.

In previous years the B.C. championship was decided between the Island titleholder and the Vancouver-area winners. This year, however, eight teams from throughout the province will struggle for the crown.

Four games are slated for Nov. 26, five for Nov. 27 and four for Nov. 28, including the 8 p.m. final at Royal Athletic Park. Preliminary matches will take place at Centennial Stadium and adjoining pitches.

Other teams entered in the provincial tourney are North Delta, Burnaby North, Kamloops, Winston Churchill of Vancouver, Castlegar and Abbotsford.

Game time on Friday is 8 p.m.

OUTDOOR SCENE

By Barry M. Thornton

Steelheaders anxious for an early start this season will find good November winter steelhead fishing in the Quinsam River. The Quinsam, a major tributary of the Campbell, has one of the most impressive Island runs of big winter steelhead. These early trophies move into the Quinsam during mid-November peaking with a second run in late November-early December.

Completing the deer season last November my partner and I took an exploratory trip to the Quinsam to break in our fishing tackle for the coming season. Our exploratory trip quickly took the form of a bonanza trip during the weekend as we struck into steelhead after steelhead.

On Saturday, in the Island pool alone, we hooked eight prime bright fish, loosing four to downstream rapids and snags and beaching four—all over eleven pounds. Sunday found us back at the river limiting on a pair of fifteens, an eight and an eleven.

Access to the lower Quinsam is readily available for the first mile of the river. Upstream, access becomes a long walk down the Quinsam benches at the power line, at the sand pit and at other secluded points. Occasional side bush roads lead to the top of these benches during the first five miles of the river but are nearly impossible to describe and must be discovered by each angler.

1. Quinsam pool on the Campbell River — Follow the Island Highway through Campbell River and Campbellton taking the Highway to Gold River. Approximately one mile past the Gold River — Kelsey Bay intersection the highway crosses the Quinsam River at its confluence with the Campbell. Park across the bridge. Follow the short fishermen's trails to the Quinsam Pool on the Campbell River above the confluence.

2. Quinsam Campsite pools — Immediately after crossing the Quinsam bridge turn left into the Government campsites. The individual campsites are situated right on the river bank and provide easy access to a number of pools and runs.

4. Power line pools and mid stream access — Follow the access road to the forestry bridge turning left at the top of the first hill. Stay on that road not the intersecting logging roads. Follow that road past the forestry experimental fields until you cross the power line. A long hike down the Quinsam benches leads to a point on the river about two miles above the forestry bridge. Excellent runs and pools are available upstream and downstream from this point.

Back at the car continue on that road exploring any side roads on your right for further access points. A few miles beyond the power line the road intersects the logging company road again. Turn right on the logging road to cross the river.

While one of the earliest rivers on the Island for winter steelhead, success is dependent almost entirely on water conditions. The heavy November rains keep the stream in a constant state of flood or near flood providing ideal conditions for these early maturing fish. However, heavy chocolate floods create near impossible conditions for the angler.

The run is a run of big fish with many reaching twenty pounds. Island steelhead average 5 to 10 pounds with large fish weighing over ten pounds. Any steelhead over fifteen is a trophy of trophies and well worth the gamble of water conditions.

A second major run of steelhead moves into the Quinsam during the Christmas season. Angling pressure is high at this time for the river is well populated with fish and up-Island anglers are aware of this. Runs continue in the Quinsam depending, naturally upon water conditions, well into April. At one time a very productive summer run entered the Quinsam but past logging operations and water diversion have all but decimated it.

The Quinsam is unlike most other Island streams. Heavy algae growth on the river rocks darkens the water a deep sea green, permitting low water passage by steelhead moving upstream. For the angler this means that almost every rock or log harbors a resting spot for the fish. Specific pools exist but are in an annual state of flux. Each year high water changes the river creating new lies and runs. Major pools move, disappear and reform up or down stream.

An anglers trail follows the river upstream from the forestry bridge past the power line. However, the river bottom is an alder swamp and difficult to move through.

The angler fishing the Quinsam is well advised to carry a wading staff and a pair of pruning shears. Steelhead hooked in the river are prone to run out of their lie, streaking downstream around the alder bends leaving the angler hooked on protruding snags. The staff is vital, not only for chasing these fighting fish downstream but for wading the greasy algae bottom of the stream. The pruning shears are necessary to clean the alder branches from your casting areas to permit a proper presentation of your tackle.

One angling restriction exists on the Quinsam. This closure, from the upper falls below Quinsam Lake 300 yards downstream to fishing boundary signs from December 15 to April 30th, is in effect to protect steelhead below these falls during low water when the falls are impassible.

Sabres Help Punch To Rousing Return

By The Canadian Press

Punch Imlach was a little apprehensive Wednesday night about his first visit to Maple Leaf Gardens since his dismissal by Toronto Maple Leafs after the 1968-69 season.

For 10 years, as general manager and coach, he had listened to exultant cheers when the team was riding a crest, and just as often bore the brunt of jeers when they were in a slump.

But Toronto fans were rewarded with four Stanley Cups in the Imlach era. Wednesday night they didn't forget.

And when it was all over, with the expansionist Sabres 7-2 victors over Toronto, those who remained until the bitter end cheered a triumphant return.

In other games, Boston Bruins and New York Rangers reclaimed a share of first place in the NHL's East Division, the Bruins by hammering Minnesota North Stars 8-4 and New York with a 5-3 win over Los Angeles Kings.

Tonight, Toronto is at Montreal, California Seals visit Philadelphia Flyers and St. Louis Blues play the Penguins at Pittsburgh.

Two former Leafs contributed most to the Buffalo offence. The first of Gerry Meehan's two goals gave the Sabres a 2-1 lead early in the second period then Larry Keenan's two scores broke a 2-2 tie as Buffalo built a 5-2 lead before the period ended.

Goyette, Marshall Provide Poise

But it was Roger Crozier, the little Bracebridge, Ont., goaltender Imlach took in the June draft from Detroit Red Wings, who provided the Sabres with their first road victory since they opened the season with a 2-1 win over Pittsburgh Penguins.

Crozier faced a barrage of 46 shots and was clearly the instrument of a Toronto defeat that sent the Leafs into the NHL's East Division basement, two points behind Buffalo.

The addition of veterans Don Marshall and Phil Goyette to the Buffalo lineup provided much of the poise missing from their early games. The two players, training camp holdouts, came to terms with the Sabres last Friday and Marshall responded in his first shift with a power-play goal in the first period to tie the score 1-1.

At Minnesota, the Bruins sharpshooters showed 15,190 North Stars fans why they are favored to retain the Stanley Cup they won for the first time in 29 years last spring.

Phil Esposito, Ken Hodge and Johnny Bucyk scored two goals each in the onslaught. Rookie goaltender Gilles Gilbert, who faced 47 Bruin shots while Boston goalie Ed Johnston handled only 20.

Esposito, with two assists, ran his individual scoring lead to 29 points.

The Bruins emerged from a rousing first period with a 3-2 lead as they capitalized on a double minor to former teammate Bill Goldsworthy.

Goldsworthy, responding to mistreatment of Minnesota centre Tom Williams by Boston defenceman Don Awrey, was sitting out the second of his two-minute penalties when Fred Stanfield notched the goal that put the Bruins ahead to stay.

The Rangers were down 3-1 half way through their game at Los Angeles before goals by Jean Ratelle, his first of two scores, and Dave Balon pulled them even before the second period ended.

Balon's, his second of the game, was of a somewhat dubious nature as Kings' goalie Dennis DeJordy accidentally flicked the puck into his own goal. Balon, the nearest Ranger at the time, was credited with the score.

Whites Retain Services' Lead

Undefeated CFB Whites retained a one-point margin atop the Armed Forces Hockey League by downing CFB Blues 6-3 Wednesday at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Island Combines, also unbeaten this season, kept pace in second spot after a 4-3 victory over HMC Ships.

Dino Donofrio paced Whites with two goals while singles were added by Ben Weber, Ron Cooke, Barry Vollette and John Bond. Larry Beauchamp, Gil Martel and Kirk Lund replied for Blues.

Island Combines	3	1	0	2	4
CFB Blues	3	0	1	2	2

Volleyball Title Meet

Victoria, Claremont and Reynolds will join 13 other teams from thoughout the province as play begins Friday in the B.C. high school girls' volleyball championship tournament in Vancouver.

The 16 squads will be divided into two sections for preliminary round-robin competition Friday with the top four teams from each division advancing to the double-loss elimination competition for the title on Saturday.

Sue Holland, captain of the Victoria team, has been invited to try out for the National team along with clubmates Leta Bishop and Renate Krueger and 32 other girls from across Canada.

In addition, several members of the Vancouver Island representative teams are being considered for the B.C. team in the 1971 Canada Games.

Players End Hockey Strike

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Striking members of Nashville Dixie Flyers of the Eastern Hockey League voted early Wednesday to end a walkout and return to the ice in Greensboro, N.C. tonight.

The game had been postponed by the Greensboro club after a contest scheduled in Charlotte, N.C. Tuesday night was cancelled because the players failed to show up.

The players' action brought an uneasy truce in a dispute which began Monday when players received pay cheques minus $70 fines imposed on all members of the team for poor performances in recent games.

Courcy Leads WHL Parade

Bob Courcy of the San Diego Gulls scored three goals and added three assists in four games last week and maintained his lead in the Western Hockey League's individual scoring race.

Defending scoring champion, Art Jones of Portland Buckaroos, fell to third place with 23 points. He picked up one assist before sidelined with an injury.

Jim Patterson of Phoenix Roadrunners was "player of the week" with five assists in two successive games.

Hoover has a way through washday.

A way to wash.

Hoover washes with an exclusive side-mounted pulsator that gently but thoroughly surges suds through all clothes. And now we've improved the washing action by adding a lint filter. It's very gentle because nothing touches your clothes but soap and water. You get a very clean wash very quickly—just four minutes for a full wash load.

A way to rinse.

While the pulsator is thoroughly washing one load of laundry, the spin dryer is thoroughly rinsing and spin-drying another load. Because it washes and spin dries at the same time, the Hoover rinse-o-matic can breeze through a family-size wash in about half an hour. And with the new automatic rinse cycle, the job is easier than ever.

A way to save.

Besides saving you time, the Hoover saves money. It needs no special plumbing or wiring. Needs less hot water and soap than the big automatics. You save space, too. The Hoover tucks away neatly in the corner when not in use, and has a serv-a-top lid that gives you extra counter space.

See the rinse-o-matic at your Hoover dealer's now.

Owning a color TV is great. But tuning a color TV can be a problem.

One touch locks in exclusive Electrolok Automatic Fine Tuning for the finest possible picture. Every time. There may be other automatic fine tuning controls, but there are none as foolproof or as accurate as Electrolok. That's why it's patented.

Total Touch Tuning proves its worth in these actual unretouched photographs.
Right: Another touch and Electrotint locks in exactly the color balance you prefer.

Another touch locks in all-new Electrotint* for exactly the color balance you prefer. You tell the set, and the set remembers. Every time. Scene to scene, channel to channel, color balance stays exactly as you prefer. (Best of all, set Electrolok and Electrotint* once, and you'll probably never have to set them again. Ever.)

You vary color intensity to your personal taste with another gentle touch. Adjust brightness the same way.

That's the exciting side of exclusive Electrohome Total Touch Tuning.

Now for the practical story.

With all its magic, Electrohome Total Touch Tuning is actually more reliable than ordinary color TV. Because Electrohome engineers have eliminated the mechanical gizmos that can cause trouble.

Electrohome Total Touch Tuning may very well revolutionize color TV. And it was engineered, developed and perfected right here in Canada.

*Patent pending.

Choose it because it's the most exciting thing that's happened to color TV in years.

SEWERS, POLLUTION, URBAN RENEWAL STILL PROBLEMS

Scenery Is One Thing Corner Brook Doesn't Lack

By ED WALTERS

CORNER BROOK, Nfld. (CP) — If scenery held the answer to some of its problems, this western Newfoundland city of 30,000 would have an untroubled future.

Invisible are the 29 outfalls pouring a stream of raw sewage into the arm, an inlet of the Bay of Islands that forms the harbor.

Exhaust from the smokestacks of the Bowaters Newfoundland Ltd. paper mill—the area's biggest single employer—often hangs like a yellow blot. But a new chemical process has removed much of a previously objectionable odor.

The hills and ridges on which the city is built make road upkeep and town planning expensive and difficult.

Mayor Noel Murphy says his aim is to try to improve services without increasing taxes and to "work for the people, not against them."

PUSHES FOR RENEWAL

To this end he has pushed an urban renewal scheme for the city's west side, due to begin in the spring, fought to ease the housing shortage and now is preparing for a battle to give the province's second city control over its fringe areas, probably by badgering the Newfoundland government into sharpening municipal powers.

A fouling of the city's environment seems at first glance to be the biggest problem, but it turns out to be less serious in the short term than lack of employment, housing and money for municipal services.

Dumping untreated sewage into the sea is against provincial law. But there's little Corner Brook can do at present to find a cure.

Dr. Murphy said in a recent interview that he wouldn't even take a wild guess at what it would cost to alter the sewer system.

Studies during the last two years have shown that nature was unexpectedly helpful. Strong tidal action in the Bay of Islands cleans Humber Arm.

"The water tastes good—good and salt," Dr. Murphy said in describing how he often tested the arm waters while swimming near his summer home a few miles from Corner Brook.

DOESN'T HURT FISH

The implication was that if it was drinkable by Dr. Murphy it wasn't hurting fish or other marine life.

A solution to sewage disposal problems might be found in pre-fabricated treatment facilities. Some ideas along this line are being studied by the city.

Pollution from the paper mill is being largely contained.

B. R. Pryde, Bowaters general manager in Newfoundland, said in an interview that the mill's operation now is cleaner.

A change to a sodium-based from a calcium process was aiding pollution control. Previously the mill used only 50 per cent of each log. The remainder was discharged as some form of waste, either into the bay or as gases through the smokestacks.

The new method turns 65 per cent of each log into paper.

Bowaters pumps $22 million annually in mill workers' and loggers' wages into western Newfoundland's economy. It buys about $8 million worth of goods and services every year.

The mill, in the centre of Corner Brook's downtown waterfront area, employs more than 1,100; another 1,200 work as loggers on its widespread timber limits.

USE SOME MACHINES

Mill production runs 1,073 tons daily, most of it newsprint for United States markets.

Mr. Pryde said the biggest change is occurring in the woods. He sees an eventual permanent logging force of 500, highly trained to operate modern equipment.

The company now is using some machines to harvest wood in many areas and is experimenting with others, some specially designed for Newfoundland.

Mr. Pryde said it was not just a matter of saving money through efficiency. Loggers were increasingly hard to find — even though fast workers could make $35 to $40 daily.

Bowaters had to abandon woods operations near the Labrador coastal community of Port Hope Simpson three years ago because it could not find enough men.

Mayor Murphy said there aren't enough new jobs being created to absorb each year's crop of young persons entering the work force.

Most of those graduating from high school had no choice but to enter university or vocational schools to qualify for what employment was available, with the exception of a few menial jobs.

FORCE IS REDUCED

Mr. Pryde said Bowaters has its own apprenticeship training plan. Workers displaced by technological advances were often given the chance to re-train. However, the mill's work force gradually was being reduced through attrition.

Although the mill, opened in 1925, remains Corner Brook's main economic bulwark, cement and gypsum plants and Lundrigan's Ltd., the province's largest road and concrete building contractor, contribute heavily to employment.

Three fish plants at Curling, the city's west end, pay out $400,000 annually in wages. They process mainly herring, which appear off southwestern Newfoundland in the fall and early winter. Skippers of herring seiners sometimes clear up to $40,000 a season. Deckhands earn up to $8,000 for three months' work, usually depending on whether a skipper has consistent good luck in finding the herring.

The city's west side, immediately east of Curling, is to receive a massive alteration during the next three years.

SCHEME TUCKED AWAY

The federal government recently approved a grant of $1,702,800 and a loan of $1,135,200 for $3.5 million project, 10 years in the planning. The remainder was provided by the province.

The project will create 145 new serviced building lots in an area covered now by decaying wooden buildings and sub-standard housing.

"It's the culmination of 10 years' hard work, of dreaming, planning, high hopes and flashing hopes," Dr. Murphy said in greeting the Ottawa announcement.

With the west side scheme tucked safely away, Mayor Murphy is concentrating on ways to clean up some of the city's fringe areas.

Council voted recently to ask the provincial government to set up a Corner Brook metropolitan board to govern areas adjacent to city boundaries.

In theory, the city controls the rural zones under provincial legislation.

In spite of this buildings—"and in too many cases, shacktowns"—have sprung up, Dr. Murphy said.

The city had been unable to prevent such developments because of weak laws.

Mayor Murphy said the government has the choice of "putting some teeth in the present laws" or setting up a metropolitan board.

It was a problem that could not go unsolved for long.

'Practice Murder' Admitted

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (Reuter) — A Chicago couple have been arrested for a "practtice murder" meant to test the husband's nerves for the planned killing of a wealthy relative, police said Wednesday night.

Police said Stuart Goldstein, 23, and his wife, Renee, 21, had been charged with homicide for allegedly killing a waitress Oct. 20.

They said Goldstein's wife had made a confession of the killing when she was picked up in Chicago Tuesday. They said she told police her husband had planned to use the money from the second murder to set up a sex ranch in Wyoming.

Police charged that Goldstein had often discussed with his wife setting up a Wyoming dude ranch which would be a haven for vacationing wife-swappers.

Police alleged the pair picked up waitress Alice Deeter, 31, after talking with her in the cocktail lounge and took her for a drive in their rented car. Miss Deeter's bullet-ridden body was found Tuesday in a gulch south of Las Vegas.

Part of the program shows the importance of the father, as well as the mother, in the first months of a child's life.

Don't miss this fascinating London Life TV Special:

"The Human Journey"

Part I—The early years

If you've a concern about children and the future, be sure to watch this thought-provoking TV program, commissioned by London Life, on the CTV Network this Sunday, November 22nd. Here are some interesting highlights and a free offer from London Life.

"The Human Journey" is a series of programs about major issues of the day. The first program, this Sunday, is called "The early years."

London Life asked the CTV Network to produce this series of specials because they believe it's a good idea for all of us to look ahead and examine the changes taking place in our country.

Naturally, London Life has a great concern about the future. It's only by looking ahead that the company can provide insurance with the flexibility to meet our changing needs.

Ideas discussed

The first special, "The early years," deals with the years from birth to starting school. Some points raised:

- Early environment can dictate whether a child fails or succeeds long before he goes to school.
- How five different types of mothers affect development of their children.
- Importance of the father in the first months of a child's life.
- How the development of a child can be improved in the first six months of life.

Some of us may not agree with all the ideas discussed in the program. However, London Life hopes you will agree that it's important to explore new ideas and concepts for raising our children.

New research

Part of the budget given to the CTV Network by London Life has been spent on investigating original research about child behaviour.

In this way, London Life hopes the program will add to current knowledge about the development of infants and children—and what they need from our society.

Authorities on human behaviour and child psychology in Canada and the U.S.A. have helped with the research and advised on the setting up and filming of special experiments for the program.

Russ Jackson

London Life has retained Russ Jackson as spokesman for the company during the three programs that make up "The Human Journey."

Russ has long been a London Life policyowner and has appeared in previous advertising talking about his views on life insurance and how he will "double his money" with his London Life policy.

In one of the only three breaks in "The early years" he will show how London Life puts money to work in the country for the benefit of Canada and London Life policyowners.

Russ Jackson will also be seen talking to the staff of one of the 4,000 Canadian companies that have group insurance with London Life. You'll also meet the Jackson family as Russ talks about the flexibility of his London Life insurance program.

Free offer

London Life has published a special booklet based on material gathered for "The early years."

Included with this offer is another London Life booklet called "Plain talk about life insurance." Many people have found this illustrated booklet helpful in understanding the flexibility available with London Life insurance programs. Both booklets are offered free to viewers of the program.

Write to: London Life Insurance Company, Box 3175, London 12, Ontario.

Be sure to watch "The Human Journey" this Sunday, November 22nd, on the CTV Network at 9 p.m. (Nova Scotia and New Brunswick at 10 p.m.)

Canadians in Hockey 'Stupid and Childish'

LONDON (CP) — John F. (Bunny) Ahearne, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation, said Wednesday: "Canada is not only stupid but childish."

Bunny, who has a transatlantic love-hate relationship with Canadian hockey, was talking in an interview about the chance of Canada getting back into international competition after pulling out of this year's IIHF series.

Bunny was particularly steamed up about a letter he said he received a few weeks ago from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association suggesting that the winners of next year's world title should play one series with Canada in Canada and one in Europe.

CAN'T SUPPORT

"Of course, I can't support this," said Bunny. "By implication, the Canadian team would be wholly or partly pro."

That's where this stupid and childish quote came in.

Canada quit the IIHF tournament last winter because of a squabble over its proposal to play several pros or reinstated pros in the national team, which has been getting kicked around in recent years in world competition.

Ahearne, not too well liked by Canadian amateur hockey officials, has said that he voted to let Canada use the pros. But Avery Brundage, head of the International Olympics Committee, let it be known that any country playing against Canada in the IIHF tourney would have trouble getting into the next Olympic Winter Games.

Ahearne said Wednesday that as of now Canada seems shut out of the 1971 IIHF hockey tournament in Switzerland, even though it might feel like dropping from its customary spot in A Group to the B or C category. He said the top slots are filled.

But Bunny said he likes the Canadians and will be prepared to support them—even with pros—at the 1972 IIHF tournament.

OLD QUESTION

"I stand by the Canadians using reinstated pros," he said.

However, he pointed out, this could bring up again the old question of the Canadians and teams playing against them being outlawed from the Olympics. Ahearne doesn't care to make a judgment on this so far ahead.

But so far as he's concerned for the 1972 IIHF games, "I'm prepared to leave the door open to the Canadians."

Much will depend on how long Avery Brundage, the iron-fisted American who heads the International Olympics Committee, hangs on. Millionaire Brundage is expected to retire in 1972.

That would clear the air for Canadian hockey.

BASEBALL MEETING

Connie Mack Baseball League will hold its annual general meeting at 2:30 p.m. Sunday in the MacPherson Lounge at Royal Athletic Park.

Russians Tackle Eastern League

NEW YORK (AP)—Russia's national hockey team will play six games against Eastern Hockey League teams in a tour of the United States next month.

The Russians have agreed to play professional rules familiar to EHL teams rather than the amateur rules they usually use.

Off-Track Bettors Favored by Ruling

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice Patrick Galligan of the Ontario Supreme Court Wednesday barred the Jockey Club Ltd. from interfering with off-track betting service messengers until trial or final disposition of the dispute between them.

The judge ordered continuation of an injunction guaranteeing the presence of Adrian Messenger Services and Enterprises Ltd. employees at five Jockey Club tracks in Ontario. Adrian operates seven off-track betting shops in Toronto and four outside the city under the name Metro Off-Track.

MONOPOLY CITED

Mr. Justice Galligan ruled the Jockey Club operates a virtual monopoly in southern Ontario and it has privileges in exemptions from Criminal Code gambling offences.

He said the Jockey Club owes a duty to the general members of the public. "That duty is to admit on to their premises, and to make available the use of their facilities, to those who lawfully seek the use of them, and who are willing to pay fair and reasonable charges."

Sir George His Old Self Once More

LONDON (AP) — Former foreign secretary George Brown, a newly named peer, created an uproar in the House of Lords with a fiery defence of Britain's post-war economic progress.

Lord Hailsham, a Conservative peer, made a speech Wednesday unfavorably comparing Britain's record with "that of our defeated enemies and recent allies."

Ignoring a chamber rule against interrupting speakers, Lord George-Brown, as he is now known, jumped to his feet amid cries of "Order!"

"I could never be shouted down in the other place," said his lordship, referring to the House of Commons where he previously served, "and I am not going to be shouted down here."

He then said Britain had handicapped itself after the Second World War to "help our allies and former enemies to get back on their feet."

Pulp Workers Get Back Pay

VANCOUVER (CP) — Agreements have been signed clearing the way for retroactive pay to more than 7,000 workers in the British Columbia pulp and paper industry.

A press release Wednesday from the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau said the retroactive increases average $200 or more.

Involved in the agreement in 10 B.C. mills are the United Papermakers and Paperworkers at Prince George Pulp and Paper Ltd. and the International Brotherhood of Pulp Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers at Northwood Pulp Ltd.

The bureau's statement addsed: "The industry reached agreement with the two unions Sept. 2 but, traditionally, contract provisions, including retroactive pay, are not put into effect until individual contracts have been signed with each union local."

Heat Goes On

EDMONTON (CP) — Cabinet ministers will sit on "hot benches" during the 36th annual convention of the Alberta Social Credit League, which starts today.

Orvis Kennedy, the league's executive director, said the modification of television's successful hot-seat idea is designed to make the Social Credit ministers "as uncomfortable as possible" when confronted on controversial topics by reporters.

Speculation Cited

CALGARY (CP) — Aircraft capable of carrying up to 1,000 passengers were described as "speculation and nothing more" by Transport Minister Donald Jamieson Wednesday.

He told delegates to the International Aviation Conference plans for such aircraft are on the drawing board but said this is not necessarily what the public wants.

'Backlash' Threat

EDMONTON (CP) — A public backlash stemming from generalizations about university students and their teachers poses a serious threat to educational institutions, the chairman of the Alberta Universities Commission said Wednesday.

Dr. L. A. Thorrsen told the Chamber of Commerce it is unfortunate that many people listen to the oratory of a university staff member or observe the behavior of a university student and conclude that they are representative of all students and their teachers.

"If the public at large adopts this view then, of course, our governments must respond to it," he said.

Man Kills Wife

EDMONTON (CP) — A 63-year-old man was sentenced Wednesday to 10 years in jail for killing the woman to whom he was married for 38 years.

A police constable who found the body of Mrs. Semaka identified a note, signed by Roger Semaka, that had been left on the kitchen table. It read:

"I Rog Semaka, have lived with this woman for approximately 38 years and have got tired of her cheating. I have not much longer to live and I don't see why she should."

Manitoba Liberals Press for Byelection

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Liberal Leader I. H. Asper has again called on Premier Ed Schreyer to call a byelection in the Ste. Rose constituency before the next session of the legislature.

In a speech to the Charleswood Liberal Association Wednesday Asper said both the Liberals and Conservatives have written to Schreyer urging the by-election be called.

NO RUSH

Schreyer has said previously he feels no rush to call the byelection, noting that he is not legally required to do so until next year. The Ste. Rose seat has been vacant since Liberal Gil Molgat was appointed to the Senate, Oct. 8.

Asper said if the New Democratic Party government does not call the by-election, it would "deny justice and fair play for an entire area of Manitoba through legalistic gimmickry, for the unworthy purpose of hanging on to power.

'CYNICAL PURPOSE'

The Liberal leader said in a letter to the premier 10 days ago he urged him to "reject the counsel of certain members of his government who reportedly were pressuring him to keep Ste. Rose seat vacant for the cynical purpose of preserving his government's threadbare majority in the house."

The St. Rose seat is the only vacancy in the 57-member legislature. The minority NDP has 28 seats, the Conservatives 22, the Liberals three, and there is one Social Crediter and two independents.

NEW LOWER PHOSPHATE
SURF
GETS THE BIG OK!

SURF HEAVY DUTY

OK

says Mrs. L. Logan of Pictou, Nova Scotia.

We gave Mrs. Logan an advanced pack of new lower phosphate SURF, reformulated with substitute materials. Here's what she had to say about it:

"SURF has always been a good buy. I have tried the new lower phosphate formula. It still gets my clothes really clean and I'm saving money too. So I will stay with SURF."

This is just the beginning. Lever research will continue to try to find ways to use substitute materials to lower phosphate levels while maintaining SURF's high quality performance.

A CHESS MATCH—LIVE was the description comedian Bob Hope gave royal benefit dinner for the World Wildlife Fund. FOR ANIMAL FUND BENEFIT

Royalty on Display

LONDON (AP) — More than 600 persons paid the equivalent of $60 to $1,200 Wednesday night to dine, drink and dance in the same night club with 18 leading members of Europe's diminishing stock of royalty.

The organizers hoped the gala benefit would raise at least £100,000 ($250,000) for four-footed members of other vanishing breeds. The beneficiary was the World Wildlife Fund, and the party was the concluding event of its annual congress.

The royal attractions were headed by two reigning queens whose husbands are leaders of the fund, Elizabeth of Britain and Juliana of The Netherlands.

Among others in the royal section of the Talk of the Town were King Constantine of Greece and Queen Anne-Marie, Grand Duke Jean of Luxembourg and his duchess, and four future monarchs: Crown Prince Harald of Norway, Crown Princess Beatrix of The Netherlands, Crown Princess Margrethe of Denmark, and Britain's Prince Charles.

"It looks like a chess match —live," said Bob Hope, star of the floorshow. He shared the stage with dancer Rudolf Nureyev, singers Petula Clark, Tom Jones and Engelbert Humperdinck, and master of ceremonies Rex Harrison.

Neil Armstrong, the first man on the moon, sat at Queen Elizabeth's table, while Queen Juliana got Cary Grant.

Princess Anne, in a Victorian hairdo and yellow silk dress, spent much of the evening laughing and talking with Roger Moore, television's Saint.

By KEVIN DOYLE

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield suggested Wednesday that the government wanted to take the country by the neck and shake the inflation out of it, but did not succeed.

Now, Prime Minister Trudeau and his cabinet are helpless in the face of threatening economic difficulties, Mr. Stanfield told the Commons in the first day of a two-day debate on a Conservative motion of non-confidence in the government.

"I have the feeling the prime minister wanted to take the country by the neck and shake the inflation out of it," Mr. Stanfield added.

The Conservative motion asks the Commons to condemn the government for what it says is official refusal to act against poverty and social injustice resulting from a badly-waged fight against inflation.

The government has increased regional inequalities through its opposition to full employment, the motion says.

An NDP amendment to the motion blasts the government for what it describes as unwillingness to assume responsibility for promoting health, welfare and education in Canada.

VOTE TAKEN TONIGHT

Both the main motion and the amendment will be voted on at the close of the debate tonight.

New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas, who moved his party's amendment, said every move by the government seems aimed at improving the lot of the wealthier provinces and damaging the poorer ones.

The government's policies for reducing regional disparities had been a colossal failure. The undesirable effects of the government's program of restraint had fallen heavily on the poorer regions.

The Commons turned to the debate on the economy following several days of clause-by-clause study of the government's bill to replace regulations under the War Measures Act. That debate was to resume Monday.

The Commons will not sit Friday so that MPs will have a chance to attend the funeral of Bernard Pilon, the chief government whip who died Tuesday.

Manpower Minister Otto Lang said Mr. Stanfield doesn't really understand Canada's economic situation or the financial structure of the country.

"He doesn't seem to realize the natural economic impacts of trying to get the economy under control."

POOR NEGLECTED

The economy was moving ahead. It was "basically sound and we are now beginning to succeed."

Rene Matte (Creditiste—Champlain) complained that the government is spending more to entice immigrants into Canada than it is for poor families in Canada.

Large families were an unfailing sign of poverty or near-poverty but the government continued to hold family allowances at "ridiculously low figures."

Prime Minister Trudeau should stop putting flowers in his hair and do something concrete to aid the poor.

George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) said there should be a 25-year tax holiday for manufacturing firms in depressed areas.

This would be in addition to incentives now paid under the regional economic expansion program, Mr. Hees said.

All federal, provincial and municipal taxes would be forgiven for new plants in underdeveloped areas for 10 years under the Hees proposal. Taxes would be on a graduated scale for the following 15 years.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) said the federal economic expansion program should concentrate on subsidizing industries which would not have otherwise moved to a poor area.

In the Senate Wednesday, Senator Ernest Manning (SC—Alberta) said the germs of violent dissent in Canada, not just the plague that they spread, must be attacked if the present Quebec terrorist crisis is to be controlled.

The former Alberta premier, named to the upper chamber Oct. 7, said that to meet the Quebec crisis effectively "we must go far beyond the steps we have taken to date."

He praised Prime Minister Trudeau for what he said was his firm and decisive action in invoking the War Measures Act Oct. 16. It was a "necessary, if distasteful decision."

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1970 —PAGE 29

Hollywood film costume designer Edith Head, seven times an Academy Award winner, chats with members of the international press in London, where she was a judge for a world-wide sewing contest. The 70-year-old designer turned a press conference into a two-way discussion.

Film Costume Designer Proves Short Women Can Wear Midis

By FORENCE DE SANTIS

LONDON — Edith Head, who has seven Academy Awards for movie costume designing and 30 Award nominations, is in London to judge the Singer World Stylemaker Contest, and she's full of both opinions and questions about fashion today.

Miss Head is about the only designer who can turn a press conference into a session where the questions flow both ways. She's as interested in what the fashion press thinks about current trends as they are in what she thinks. Miss Head's career goes back to the Thirties, but she's still eager to hear what other people think.

"Women are afraid nowadays of looking older, some men are against longer skirts, and there's the economic problem of a fashion change," she said, summing up the present controversy about skirt dropping.

She herself was a walking refutation of the idea that small women can't wear longer skirts. She was in a costume with a bolero jacket, a reflex-length skirt whose front invert pleat produced a perfectly calculated flare, and a plain bone-color bodice on which rested a large, antique gold abstract pendant on a necklace.

The costume was in an oversized herringbone jersey of beige and white, and it looked as perfect as Edith Head clothes have always looked on any star who ever wore them in movies.

"The problem right now is how to turn a poor sick mini into a healthy midi," she said cheerfully, using the word "midi" to include all longer lengths. Every month she holds a clinic at Universal Studios for young actresses who want to use their good clothes in the new trend.

"The trick is to change a mini into a midi without it's being obvious," said Miss Head, passing around some sketches. "On a coat, if you're a half-way good sewer, you can add a wide border of fake fur, but be sure to also add cuffs and collar, or your border will look like a make-shift."

Other suggestions included adding a poncho skirt to a mini, an overskirt of midi length, culotte legs or a lot of deep fringe.

Asked about fashion influences today, Miss Head replied, "London is way ahead. Mary Quant started the mini, and the first maxis, called 'granny' dresses, began here. 'Do your own thing' is fine for the individual, but I think it's had a bad effect on fashion."

It developed that what was troubling Miss Head is the current desire to return to costumes, ethnic or folkloric. She has always considered fashion as creative, forward-looking, and is somewhat at a loss to account for the rage to return to any period but now.

She asked the press present at her London conference to account for it, but she still doesn't believe in harking back to other times.

"No, I don't like boots with everything, but I know they're saving the new lengths. Ankle lengths? I don't see them for the kind of jobs women will be taking over if this Women's Lib thing really takes hold."

Miss Head went on wondering where fashion was in all the nostalgia. It seemed evident that she was looking for creative talent which just isn't evident today.

"One thing that all this sewing trend could restore is the respect for quality. When you've spent time constructing a garment, you're not going to discard it overnight. Studio work, such as I've always done, breeds a respect for quality which I can't get out of my bones."

Amid the applause of her audience, Miss Head accepted a sheaf of roses for her birthday.

I remembered how she had once been furious at her movie company when they failed to greet her in New York with flowers (movie companies were then in the first stages of their decline), and was happy for her that at least the new world of self-sewers knew how to recognize a great talent in fashion.

(A Fashion League Feature.)

Designer Edith Head sketched one of her ways for turning a "tired mini" into a "healthy midi." Striped fabric worked on a bias adds a poncho skirt to the mini dress, left, whose hem has been cut to match the poncho top and then seamed to it.

Rum Island for Sale With Strings Attached

RUM ISLAND, B.C. (CP) — Rum Island is for sale with its eight acres of arbutus and cedar; its wild inhabitants — mostly mink, otters, cormorants, loons and herons.

But only, says owner Mrs. Renee Nelson of White Rock, B.C., if it is kept for the enjoyment of Canadians.

Rum Island is one of the Gulf Islands between Vancouver Island and the British Columbia lower mainland, only half a mile from the United States border.

Mrs. Nelson is an American-born museum curator who came to Canada as a child in 1912 and bought the wilderness property in 1945.

Now she wants to sell it to the provincial government with the proviso that it be kept for Canadians.

"I've had two or three private offers but I said I wasn't really interested," says Mrs. Nelson. "I don't want it ever to be sold to Americans."

She adds: "God forbid that the Gulf Islands get any more commercial than they are . . . American ownership is mostly the result of apathy on the part of Canadians who didn't recognize a good thing.

"When they do, it's too late."

Mrs. Nelson says Rum Island would be an ideal addition to the marine park proposed by federal Fisheries Minister Jack Davis.

Actually Rum Island shows on the marine charts as Tom Point. It got its more common name from U.S. prohibition days, when rum-runners used the island as a liquor cash.

Blessed event!
This is the true story of a blessed event—and how the beautiful Spartan apple came to be.
Many years ago, the apple growers in British Columbia's sunny Okanagan Valley decided to cross the McIntosh Red apple with the green Newtown apple. The apple created by this union was totally unique. It was a beautiful, deep red. It had a distinctive, sweet flavour. It was equally good for cooking and eating. It had a snowy-white flesh, and an unusually small core. They called it the Spartan apple!
The new Spartan apple was so good that the growers planted more and more. Today, the Okanagan grows almost all the Spartan apples in the world! So you can be reasonably sure that any Spartan you buy is the real thing—nourished by the Okanagan's clear mountain streams and bright, warm sunshine!
Make a point of trying them next time you shop. Ask for B.C. Spartan apples.

IT'S ALL RIGHT, HE WON'T SCRATCH

The big stuffed cat at the right is larger than three-month-old Todd Pengelly, but three-year-old Yvonne Cownden holds his hand to make him feel safer. The outsize toy is one of many items to be sold when members of the Ladies Auxiliary to St. Joseph's Hospital hold their annual bazaar next Wednesday. Proceeds from the sale of gift items, and from lunch and tea, will go to the maternity ward where Todd was born, the third generation of his family to be born at St. Joseph's. The bazaar will open at 10 a.m. in the Nurses' residence, Collinson Street. Lunch will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., and tea will be served from 3 p.m. Bingo games will start at 7 p.m.

Personalized Gifts Take Time But Gain More Appreciation

By HILDA BEASTALL

Home crafted, personalized gifts take more time and thought than just running through a list of commercially prepared gifts. As advertising becomes increasingly sophisticated, so the home-created gift gains more appreciation.

Since sharing is the basic theme of gift giving, one's own recipe makes highly personalized gifts, especially if they are for good food concoctions you have served your friends during the year.

With some recipes, as for cakes, cookies, jams and other foods which will keep a while, samples gaily decorated and packaged could accompany the recipes.

Perhaps you have pickled walnuts, fresh horseradish (either grated or the frozen roots), rose hip sauce, Oregon grape sauce or loganberry jelly among the special delicacies you want to share with friends. Why not include the recipe with the gift?

Most recipe file boxes are standard sizes, so that file cards can be bought in packs, decorated according to your own artistic standards and very clearly printed.

Typing is preferable to handwriting, since figures of quantities must be easily seen and ingredients easily read while the dish is being prepared.

Another idea for home crafted gifts is the collecting of small or attractively shaped bottles and jars to contain dried herbs for cooking, and to hold dried scented leaves and petals for fragrant enjoyment.

Recipes with the dried herbs are helpful just in case the recipient hasn't a clue what to do with them. I once sent a collection of prepared dried herbs in packets, and enquired later how the family liked them when used.

"Well, do you know, none of them came up" came the reply. It had not occurred to me that non-gardeners would think the stuff was seeds to sow in the garden.

Baskets of almost any size are good to have ready for packing little collections of goodies as gifts. Nearer Christmas I have found it almost impossible to find baskets, yet at other times of the year both new and used turn up in the most unexpected places.

If they have been used, wash them in tepid water and pure soap; rinse in clear water and dry at room temperature.

Handcrafted pottery pieces filled with some delicacy you have made lifts something ordinary to the personal level.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Family affairs

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I lost my husband three years ago, and was left with three daughters who are now 13, 14, and 16.

I met a man who was in the same boat. His wife died and left him with three sons, ages 10, 16 and 17. We had so much in common, this man and I, that we started seeing each other, fell in love, and within six months we were married. We pooled our resources and live in a lovely old, but large home, and everything seemed perfect, but it was too good to be true.

I suppose you are ahead of the story because the inevitable happened. Our two eldest daughters and sons like each other too much. We don't dare leave them alone any more. I am going out of my mind with worry. I suppose if a genuine "love" developed between his sons and my daughters nothing would be wrong with it, but I'm afraid there has already been too much intimacy. Please suggest something.—Worried Mom

DEAR MOM: I presume the girls have been told the facts of life, and the boys, too. Under the circumstances, since you feel there is cause for concern, if possible send the girls or the boys to boarding school, relatives or friends. You can't keep them separated forever, of course, but the temptation will be reduced considerably, at least until they've had a chance to meet others and grow up.

DEAR ABBY: I have a serious problem. My husband and I have recently become quite friendly with some neighbors who are about our age—middle fifties.

While playing cards, the man started playing "footsies" with me. I moved my foot and pretended not to notice. Then he grew bolder and started "finding" my foot no matter where I moved it.

I finally told my husband, and instead of getting mad, he laughed and said, "It doesn't mean anything. Forget it."

Well, I can't forget it. I have already cooled off my friendship with the wife, but the awkward part of the situation is that my husband continues to be friendly with the husband, and he can't see why we all can't be friends.

Should I tell the man's wife why I cooled the friendship? Or should I insist that my husband tell the man off? Or should I resume friendship to please my husband?—In Doubt.

DEAR IN: Don't tell the wife anything. But do tell the man that because your husband wants to be friendly with them you will give him another chance. But one wrong move and that's it!

DEAR ABBY: I am a divorcee with two small children. My ex-husband pays me no alimony as he is broke. That's why I divorced him—no support.

Right now my husband is unemployed and he has no car so he thinks I should provide him with transportation every Sunday so he can see the children. I can't see spending my Sundays chauffering him back and forth. Am I selfish?—Griped

DEAR GRIPED: No. Feeling as you do, tell your husband that if he wants to see the children on Sundays he will have to provide his own means of transportation. If he wants to see them, he'll find a way.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ONLY A HOUSEWIFE: What do you mean, "ONLY?" As far as I'm concerned, the job of a housewife is an executive position. In your home you are the Director of Health, Education and Welfare, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Head of Entertainment and Public Relations, and Chairman of the House Rules Committee. And you'd have to be married to a millionaire to be paid what you're really worth.

UNICEF Calendar And Cards on Sale

UNICEF greeting cards are once more available in Victoria stores.

In 1969 proceeds from the sale of greeing cards provided about half the Canadian UNICEF Committee's total contribution of 1.5 million dollars to the United Nations Children's Fund.

Nineteen different cards, some of them featuring children's art as in the past, are available. Three slightly larger, more expensive cards are the work of artists Edvard Munch, Norway; Francois-Noel Levasseur, Canada and Abel Grimmer, Belgium.

A selection of the most popular cards designed for UNICEF during recent years is being featured.

The pictures are reproductions of eight by eight foot murals painted by children from all over the world in Mexico City for the 1968 Olympiad.

Cardinal Takes More Lenient View

LONDON (WP)—In sharp contrast to the outright condemnation of birth control Monday by Pope Paul VI, the Catholic primate of Britain took a reserved — almost neutral — position on the issue Tuesday.

In a speech to The London School of Economics, John Cardinal Heenan, Archbishop of Westminster, said the only observation he wished to make about artificial methods of birth control was that "sufficient throught has not yet been given to the implications of contraception as a way of life and love."

He added, however, "if it is an act of virtue for a mother to use contraceptives it is difficult to convince her unmarried daughter that their use is sinful. The policy of the Family Planning clinics to make no distinction is hard to fault."

His comments came in the course of an urbane lecture on "ethics 1970 style," the theme of which was that moral anarchy had been the accompaniment, if not the consequence, of modern flight from religion.

He argued that man cannot be his own lawmaker, even with the best of conscience, but must take his moral precepts from revealed religious teaching. Only an "informed" conscience — informaed by divine law — can prevent one's going astray.

He noted that both "the prevention of life and the destruction of life have been removed from the traditional moral prohibitions." His condemnation of abortion, as distinct from contraception was vehement.

Elsewhere in his speech, Cardinal Heenan observed that the greatest shock given to mankind in modern times was not the atomic bomb on Hiroshima but the Nazi extermination of the Jews during the last war.

"The realization that national leaders in the 20th century could plan the systematic destruction of a whole race put an end to the myth of human progress," he said.

He advocated showing the films taken on the Belsen concentration camp to young people every year, because "the best way of preventing barbarism is to put it on display."

The full horror of the Jewish persecution in Germany "is scarcely known to citizens under 40 years of age," he pointed out.

The British primate was emphatic in his condemation of pornography. Yet, he said, "all forms of censorship are abhorrent," and "if people want to wallow in filth that is their responsibility."

U.S. House Favors Protectionist Policy

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The House of Representatives was expected to approve today legislation curbing textile and shoe imports in a bitter battle over U.S. trade policy.

Protectionists were confident they could pass the bill and send it to the Senate after beating back an attempt by opponents Wednesday to hold up legislation to delete what they regarded as its most objectionable features. The vote was 203 to 186 in favor of accepting the bill as it stands.

Wilbur Mills (Dem.-Ark.), chairman of the House ways and means committee, threatened to withdraw the measure rather than see it exposed to hasty amendments.

Opponents called the bill's [illegible] and footwear a dangerous break from American traditional free trade policies, and one that could lead to a world trade war.

The bill goes further than President Nixon intended when he reluctantly supported textile quotas, and it provides machinery to protect other American industries if imports rise above a certain level.

COULD BE VETOED

If the bill passes the House and the Senate, as is expected, it could be vetoed by Nixon. But the Senate finance committee hopes to avoid this by attaching the trade bill to a popular measure to an increase in old-age pensions, and no president has ever vetoed a social security measure.

Critics called the import-curbing quotas a move to U.S. economic isolationism.

The textile quotas are aimed primarily at Japan, which is holding talks with the U.S. government on a voluntary agreement that would limit the flow of Japanese textiles to the U.S.

Mills also defended the bill's perpetuation of oil quotas, which opponents say adds $5,000 million to 7,000 million a year to the price of oil.

A less restrictive tariff system, Mills said, would automatically drive up oil prices.

'TOO DAMN POLITE FOR TOO DAMN LONG'

Retaliation Hinted If Bill Passes

LONDON (Reuter) — The top spokesman for Britain's export industries bluntly warned the United States today that if a protectionist trade bill is approved by Congress there will be a danger of retaliation by other nations.

"We have been too damn polite for too damn long," Peter Tennant, director-general of the government-sponsored British National Export Council, told the U.S. Chamber of Commerce here.

"People have come to believe that nothing much will happen if this bill goes through—provided they assure us that, of course, it is not aimed at us. This is nonsense.

"World trade is indivisible and whoever the bill may be designed not to hit, there is no doubt it will hit us all.

"It has been part of international good manners to avoid the word retaliation, but this does not mean retaliation will not happen if this bill goes through. Of course it will."

The bill, which would curb imports of shoes and textiles into the U.S., is scheduled for a vote in the U.S. House of Representatives today.

Tennant said: "The bill invites retaliation the moment it has the presidential assent and retaliation in a form which many congressmen and a great many American industrialists will regret. It has the seeds in it of a bitter trade war."

Atlantic Liners End Winter Trips

LONDON (CP) — For the first time since regular transatlantic services began in the 19th century, no passenger liners will be making winter crossings this year between European and North American ports.

The Daily Telegraph, reporting an announcement in New York by the Transatlantic Passenger Steamship Conference, says this applies to Mediterranean, British, Irish and North European ports as well as to Halifax, New York and Boston.

QUESTION OF MONEY

The first eastbound liner crossing in 1971 will be at the end of March by Cunard's Queen Elizabeth 2 after her Caribbean cruise season. Until then, ship-lovers will have to make the crossing by freighters carrying 12 passengers.

The service is being abandoned for economic reasons and all transatlantic liners now spend the winter cruising. Last winter only four large liners maintained the link—two from the Italian Line on the Mediterranean route and one each from North German Lloyd and the Greek Line.

The Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Canada will make her last crossing of the season to Quebec City and Montreal Nov. 23 before embarking on a cruise season out of New York.

The sailing had been threatened by strike action on the part of stewards who wanted a £25 ($62.50) cruise bonus. A spokesman for CP Ships said today agreement had been reached with the seamen's union for a bonus of £17 10s ($43.75), and the Empress now will sail as scheduled.

Youths Denied Customs Entry

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Canadian immigration authorities refused admission Wednesday night to 25 busloads of youths from the midwestern United States at the Windsor-Detroit Tunnel.

An immigration officer said the youths, in a convoy of buses "of all sorts, sizes and colors", were headed for a rock music festival in Vermont. They also had with them an assortment of potted plants.

The officer said the group had no money and could not meet Canadian immigration requirements.

"Even if they did, they could not pass through customs since the buses were also loaded with potted plants, which cannot be permitted into Canada except under special conditions."

The bus convoy jammed traffic in the tunnel for more than an hour.

The youths had apparently decided to travel through Ontario and Quebec to save toll charges on U.S. highways.

Site Protected

PARIS (AP) — The French ministry of culture has decreed Colombey-les-Deux-Eglises, where Charles de Gaulle lived, a protected site to preserve the village and its surroundings as de Gaulle knew them.

MAN NOT GUILTY OF MURDER ATTEMPT

NANAIMO (CP) — Wayne Allen Dick, 24, of Port Alberni, Wednesday was found guilty of causing bodily harm and not guilty of attempted murder in the Aug. 21 shooting of RCMP constable Paul Sommer.

He was sentenced to 18 months in jail by Mr. Justice Thomas Dohm.

The B.C. Supreme Court jury of 11 men and one woman took 2½ hours to reach its verdict.

Constable Sommer was hit by a bullet which struck his cap band below the badge when shots were fired at a house on an Indian reserve near Port Alberni. Police had gone to the house in response to a telephone call for help.

Police Handling Of Drug Laws Rapped

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democrat MP David Orlikow says police are actually making the law regarding marijuana although they are "the last people to have any scientific knowledge" about the drug.

"There is enough evidence to prove that marijuana is not an addictive drug," the MP for Winnipeg North said during a panel discussion at the University of Ottawa Wednesday night.

"I believe the ill effects of the drug are less than those from cigarettes or alcohol. I am not prepared to say that marijuana should be legalized but we should definitely make a division between marijuana and other stronger drugs."

Three other MPs were on the panel with Mr. Orlikow.

Roch Lasalle, Conservative member for the Quebec riding of Joliette, said he is against making marijuana use legal but the government should be thinking more about rehabilitation centres for drug users than about punishment for those caught with marijuana.

Lloyd Francis, Liberal MP for Ottawa West, said he would support making marijuana use legal as long as it was under strict control, similar to use of alcohol.

"I don't think marijuana will do the younger generation any more harm than alcohol and cigarettes did mine."

Dr. Paul Yewchuk, Conservative member for the Alberta riding of Athabasca, said more information is needed before the government makes a decision on easing the law regarding marijuana.

Problem Defined

WYNYARD, Sask. (CP) — Judge M. A. McPherson said Wednesday one of the greatest problems facing legal administrations in Saskatchewan is how to stop Indians from killing Indians. He made the remark in sentencing Charlie Stoney to five year in penitentiary on a reduced charge of manslaughter in the death of George Machiskinic, 16, of the Nut Lake Indian reserve.

Place 'n Press
We've eliminated the thing people hate most about tiling a floor. Spreading the messy "guck". Simply peel off the paper. Place tile in position. Press down. It sticks by itself. The adhesive is already on the back.
And Place 'n Press Excelon goes anywhere as long as the floor is flat. On top of old linoleum or tile. Even directly on most basement concrete. You can do a 9 x 12 foot floor in 1½ hours.
And it cuts with ordinary scissors. Use leftover tiles to cover tables, line cupboards, drawers or shelves.
Remember the name is what you do.

New Prison Boss Aims for 'Normal' Jails

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — John W. Braithwaite, 40, is a lean six-footer with gamblin' boat sideburns and that Johnny Cash look. As new boss of the federal prison system, his appearance shouldn't hurt him any.

Braithwaite, billed by Solicitor-General George McIlraith as an innovator and "one of North America's leading penologists," Wednesday was appointed associate deputy commissioner of penitentiaries.

He will be responsible for the prisoner programs in the 35 institutions in the federal system while Paul Faguy, the recently-appointed commissioner, will concentrate on administration matters.

Braithwaite said his job will be "re-integration" of the 7,000 federal offenders into society. He hopes to make the prisons more "normal," in the sense that they operate more like the everyday world, and establish more community involvement with offenders.

The Vancouver-born Braithwaite breaks a tradition of lawyers and colonels at the top of the prison system. He has a master's degree in social work from the University of British Columbia.

However, he isn't ivory tower. While at UBC, he worked evening shifts at the Oakalla prison farm in Burnaby.

At 28, he became the federal system's youngest warden, running the Haney Correctional Institution for young adult offenders.

While there, he developed a pilot program for young Indian offenders, a socialization program for narcotic addicts and a rehabilitation program for 200 young prisoners.

He set up honor camps as pre-release units and later helped to develop programs in which prisoners worked or studied in neighboring communities by day, while the community used the prison for classes at night.

Severely Disturbed Youth Just One of 'Hundreds'

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The parents of a 13-year-old Surrey boy who knifed his sister, beat his young brother until he was black and blue and held a rifle to his mother, say the boy is not getting psychiatric treatment because of a lack of facilities in British Columbia.

The parents, who asked that their name be withheld to protect their other children, said in a statement their son is a menace to society.

Unless he receives the extensive care he has needed since he was 10, he eventually may destroy himself or his family, they said.

"There are hundreds more like him . . . There is simply no place at all for our son, but what can we do?"

The couple made the statement after Dr. Pierre Flor-Henry, director of Simon Fraser Mental Health Centre, said citizens must take the lead in pressing for establishment of a proper treatment centre for children with severe problems.

Dr. Flor-Henry said there are only eight beds available on the Lower Mainland for in-patient care of severely disturbed children and adolescents.

The couple said their son spent 40 days in a hospital designed for adults when he was 10 years old after he "blew up," slashing his baby sister with a knife, beating up a younger brother and threatening his mother with a rifle.

Abhorred by the sight of their child being detained in an adult institution, the parents brought him home.

After four psychiatrists recommended extensive psychiatric treatment, the boy was placed in a health centre for children, but was there only three days when his parents were asked to take him back because he had attacked three nurses.

Later, the couple appealed to the courts, charging him with incorrigibility and surrendering him temporarily to the care of the superintendent of child welfare.

The judge ordered extensive psychiatric treatment and placed him in a group home in the country, where he has been for the last year and a half. The parents said they have learned the boy has been seen by a psychiatrist for 30 minutes in that period.

Indians to Battle For Rights to Game

OTTAWA (CP) — Erik Nielsen (PC-Yukon) says Indians in the Old Crow area of the Yukon are ready to go to court to protect their traditional hunting and fishing economy from damage by oil and gas exploration companies.

Nielsen, a Whitehorse lawyer, said in an interview that the Indians want written assurances from the government and the companies that the main source of their income won't disappear because of the exploration work in the area.

Without these written assurances, Nielsen said, a declaration will be sought from the courts that the Indians hold aboriginal rights over the land.

The Old Crow dispute is similar to the one that erupted earlier this year on Banks Island in the Northwest Territories. When two companies announced they planned seismic work there, Eskimo trappers feared the work would scare off the white fox which is the main cash source for Sachs Harbour residents.

The Banks Island issue was taken up by the Committee for Original People's Entitlement, an organization of Eskimo, Indians and Metis whose aim is to gain aboriginal rights for their members in the N.W.T.

Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien met the trappers and a lawyer acting for COPE. They reluctantly accepted his verbal assurances he would go so far as to stop exploration work if it proved harmful to the trapping industry.

But COPE did authorize its lawyer to take part in an upcoming Supreme Court of Canada appeal in which the Nishga Indians of British Columbia are seeking aboriginal title over more than 1,000 square miles of land in northwestern B.C.

Japan Worries About Deluge Of Vehicles

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese automobile salesman looked bewildered, disbelieving and resigned.

He had just been told by his boss to take it easy on the old sales pitch. The reason: Rising public sentiment in regard to cars, air pollution and traffic deaths.

The situation represented another paradox in booming Japan, where the auto has become a status symbol but where serious questions are being asked about a deluge of vehicles and the problems created.

The government already has banned automobiles from a number of shopping and entertainment districts in major Japanese cities at certain periods to decrease air pollution. New orders have gone out to police to crack down on careless and reckless driving habits.

A record 16,258 persons were killed in traffic accidents in Japan in 1969.

One Car for Every 12 Persons

In addition, high annual automobile taxes, a new purchase tax of $55, high gasoline prices, insufficient parking space and road congestion have made the automobile lose some of its attractions.

But officials say the fact that there is today one auto to every 12 Japanese as against one to 30 five years ago indicates that the automobile "boom" is still on because "people still have the itch to drive."

At the last count there were more than 17 million automobiles in use in Japan, about 70 per cent owned by private individuals.

What Japanese automakers are worried about is the lessening of the desire to drive, as the number of automobiles in use in the country reaches a saturation point.

Nissan Motor Co. officials predict the point will be reached in five years if taxes and gasoline prices continue to be increased, road conditions are not improved, more roads not constructed and air pollution not controlled.

Electric Cars Experimented

Automobile makers say they are not in a position to decide tax, road and gasoline price matters. They say, nevertheless, they are doing the best they can to help the country fight against air pollution.

Major makers like Toyota, Nissan and Mitsubishi already are experimenting with electrically-driven automobiles. Manufacturers also have turned to the gasoline-burning rotary engine as a means to help decrease the share of air pollution attributable to the automobile.

Manufacturers say their efforts in helping combat air pollution are "very costly," and to cover the expenses incurred it is "only natural" that more automobiles be produced and sold.

Japan produced 4,670,000 automobiles in 1969 to rank second only to the United States in automobile production. Of the total, 858,068 automobiles were exported.

Nissan officials say that when the saturation point of automobiles in use in Japan is reached, manufacturers may try for gradual increases in exports to counterbalance drops in domestic sales.

They say, and other makers agree with them, that toward the end of the 1970s Japan may well be the major supplier of automobiles to the world, outstripping even the United States.

UNMENTIONABLES POSE PROBLEM FOR POLICE

PENZANCE, England (UPI) — Police have hired a church hall to put up a display of women's underwear.

The garments were stolen from clothes lines. Police recovered the items and arrested a suspect but their owners have been too embarrassed to claim them.

"We thought of displaying them at the local police station," a police spokesman said. "But there wasn't enough room — we couldn't festoon the booking office with lines of frillies."

SURF

GETS THE BIG OK!

OK

says Mrs. L. Logan of Pictou, Nova Scotia.

We gave Mrs. Logan an advanced pack of new lower phosphate SURF, reformulated with substitute materials. Here's what she had to say about it:

"SURF has always been a good buy. I have tried the new lower phosphate formula. It still gets my clothes really clean and I'm saving money too. So I will stay with SURF."

This is just the beginning. Lever research will continue to try to find ways to use substitute materials to lower phosphate levels while maintaining SURF's high quality performance.

Royal Adoption Queried

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — A storm has blown up around Margaret, Duchess of Argyll since the 56-year-old millionairess announced she had officially adopted two young schoolboys as her "sons and heirs."

Questions about the legality of her unorthodox adoption, which has not yet gone through the courts, have been raised in Parliament and in the national press. Now the duchess, whose divorce from the 11th Duke of Argyll in 1963 is still recalled here as a sensational case, faces the prospect of being thrown off the board of governors at the school her new proteges will attend.

Worcestershire County Council also took the unusual step Wednesday of ordering inquiries into the adoption "in the national interest." The boys, Richard and Jamie Gardner, aged nine and seven, are the sons of a retired Worcestershire sales manager who described the duchess as a "fairy godmother" and a school teacher who said she had signed away her rights as a mother.

COURTS MUST APPROVE

Adoption societies said Wednesday that unless an adoption has been approved by law through the courts it is not legally an adoption.

Solicitor Patrick Wheeler, chairman of the governors of the private school in Warwickshire where the boys' mother teaches and where the Duchess of Argyll proposes to send them as pupils, said this was not a legal adoption.

He added that if the governors had known the duchess was planning to make such a claim, they would never have allowed her to hold a news conference at the school. Unless the mystery of the adoption process was cleared up, they might have to drop her from the board to which she was appointed two weeks ago.

Meanwhile, Brian Sweeney, 31-year-old stockbroker son of the duchess by her first marriage, said his mother did not understand what all the fuss was about.

"She merely wants to help a couple of young children. Why should the governors object?"

ANGLO-CANADIANS IN BETTER POSITION - EDUCATORS

'Privileges' Blamed for Rise of Terrorism

MONTREAL (CP)—French Canada's frustration and despair in the face of the eternally "privileged" position of the English-speaking minority is blamed by three political scientists for the explosion of terrorism in Quebec.

This viewpoint from Jacques Benjamin, Guy Bouthillier and Maurice Torrelli of the University of Montreal is part of a study of the whole anatomy of terrorism, published in the current issue of the magazine Actualite.

And they warn that if governments allow this chronic social injustice to continue instead of rooting out its causes, then the establishment itself is simply sowing the seeds of future violence.

MUST MAKE ANALYSIS

In a special 27-page section coinciding with the 10th anniversary of the 104,000-circulation French-language monthly, nine separate facets of Quebec terrorism are discussed, including its relationship to education, labor, the arts, the church and the family.

The professors suggest that someday an analysis will have to be made of the weight of history, which seems to press heavily on the present crisis.

"It is not, in effect, just because the French-Canadian . . . has been held back by the English . . . on such and such an occasion that violence is generated," they said.

"It is the fact, that, under the present system, French-Canadians are doomed to a status of eternal minority in Canada and that today, like yesterday and tomorrow, their collective will can very easily be thwarted by the English majority.

"Nor does violence spring from the mere fact that Quebec has five, seven or 10 per cent unemployment, but from the fact that it has been this way for so long and no end to it can be foreseen."

Among the root causes of Quebec violence over the last weeks, the professors say, are the following:

—The authorities are trying to create a Canadian nationalism, while condemning Quebec nationalism as racist.

—The police can go unpunished after an illegal strike, but workers who do the same are fined millions of dollars.

—Immigrants from Germany or Russia enjoy a social position superior to that of French-Canadians.

—The English language is guaranteed safeguards, while it is the French which is threatened.

—The political system is based on the right to opposition, but the mayor will not tolerate the least disagreement.

—When it suits its purpose, English Canada is prepared to see a single-party system in Quebec.

RUSSIANS BLAME U.K. FOR SHIP COLLISION

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The Soviet defence ministry daily Red Star blamed the captain of the British aircraft carrier Ark Royal today for the collision with a Russian destroyer in the Mediterranean 10 days ago.

"One would not like to think that the collision was the result of deliberate actions by the commander of the Ark Royal," the newspaper added.

Giving the Soviet version of the incident, Red Star said the two vessels were sailing parallel courses about 110 miles west of Crete Nov. 9. The Ark Royal was moving at 14 to 15 knots and the two craft were about three miles apart.

"During this period none of the usual signs of preparation for the takeoff of aircraft were visibly observed. Furthermore it did not carry extra light, signalling aircraft taking off," demanded by the international regulations for avoiding collisions at sea, the newspaper said.

Britain has blamed the collision on the captain of the Soviet Kotlin-class destroyer 365, declaring that the 43,000-ton Ark Royal's manoeuvrability was hampered by planes taking off.

The Red Star report revealed the accident to Russian readers for the first time, also mentioning that two Soviet sailors were killed.

Smallwood Sees Jobs For Province

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Joseph Smallwood says if planned negotiations with Japanese industries are successful, between 1,500 and 1,800 new jobs will be created in Newfoundland.

Mr. Smallwood said in an interview today the negotiations would be carried out during his two-week visit to Japan.

The premier and John C. Doyle, whose Canadian Javelin subsidiaries are involved in various industrial developments in Newfoundland, are scheduled to leave here Tuesday.

Mr. Smallwood said the negotiations would not involve any financial guarantees by the provincial government.

Sihanouk On Tour Of China

SIHANOUK
. . . vacationing

TOKYO (AP) — In mid-August he promised to return to Cambodia "in the near future." Now, eight months after his overthrow, Prince Norodom Sihanouk is on the tourist trail in China.

The Chinese news agency says Sihanouk and his family arrived this week in Sian, northwest China, as part of a trip to Yenan "and other places."

The party seeing him off at Peking airport was impressive. It included Premier Chou En-lai; the army's general staff chief, Hunag Yung-sheng, and Li Hsien-nien, who doubles as vice-premier and foreign minister.

Chiefs of state who are preparing to leave generally take the grand tour of China first. That includes Yenan, the cave-capital from which Mao Tse-tung and his comrades surged to the conquest of China.

Another Nader Is on the Way

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dr. Adolph S. Butkys, a crippled Villanova University professor, wants to use consumer protection "to make this world of ours a better if not groovier place to live in."

Severely handicapped and confined to a wheelchair since a childhood accident, Butkys —who teaches business—is called by his friends "a happy, garrulous guy who has a super brain."

He hopes to use his thinking powers to help the poor, the exploited and the uneducated to budget their money and get better buys—and perhaps out-Nader Ralph Nader, his idol and inspiration.

Butkys, 35, thinks his dream is close to reality, and that it can take off from the college campus.

That's why Butkys organized the National Student Consumer Protection Council, which moves into high gear at Villanova Friday when some 3,000 students from colleges and universities across the U.S. get campus charters.

Specifically, the idea is to have students go into the slums and help families design a weekly budget by setting up a single bookkeeping system. Or help them choose the TV set, furniture, even groceries which are the best deal for their money.

Butkys calls this "consumerism," and defines it broadly as "any legal but effective activity carried out by all who oppose and object to any and all business operations which profit the businessman at the undeniable expense of their respective customers regardless of the political, social, or economic powers of the customers."

Club Robbed for FLQ—Student

MONTREAL (CP) — Ottawa student Andre Lavoie was convicted Wednesday of conspiracy to rob an east-end nightclub, a holdup he said was carried out to finance the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Lavoie, 22, a sociology student arrested in the editorial offices of Ottawa Le Droit where he was employed temporarily, is to be sentenced Nov. 26 by Mr. Justice Albert Leblanc, who presided over the jury trial.

Lavoie said he was invited to join the clandestine movement early this year when he met here with Marc-Andre Gagne, 25, and Robert Hudon, 26.

They decided to hold up Le Patriote, a well-known east-end nightclub.

Hudon was sentenced Oct. 30 to 20 years in penitentiary after admitting that he took part in 13 robberies to finance the FLQ. Gagne, who confessed to 19 holdups, is serving a 25-year term.

Both Hudon and Gagne are among the so-called "political prisoners" whose release has been demanded by the FLQ cells responsible for last month's two political kidnappings.

PRINCE CHARLES is doing his Christmas shopping like the cautious fellow the most eligible man in the world has to be. Last year he sent 20 girls identical beaded evening purses. The married couples in his set are getting prints of Welsh beauty spots with his own Prince of Wales crest of three feathers in the corner this year. But court circles say he is still looking around for gifts for the young lovelies who go with him to theatres and concerts and who meet him at parties at the home of mutual friends. He has given no clue as to his choice. Except that all 20 or so will be exactly the same.

Decision was reserved today on an appeal by former Secretary of State Judy LaMarsh against a libel damage award to a radio reporter, Thomas Edward Murphy, former Ottawa reporter who now is moderator of an open-line radio show for station CKWX in Vancouver, was awarded damages of $2,500 last Feb. 9 because of remarks in Miss LaMarsh's book, Memoirs Of A Bird In A Gilded Cage, published in 1968. She said Murphy was "heartily detested" by most MPs and members of the Ottawa parliamentary press gallery. The B.C. Court of Appeals was told Tuesday by lawyer D. K. Laidlaw, for Miss LaMarsh, that the statement was the author's own opinion and nothing more, and as such could not be libelous.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson Wednesday was called the Charlie McCarthy of the chartered banks by George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) after the Conservative member asked the minister to urge the banks to lower interest rates. Hees said that a lower prime interest rate is "not only justified but very necessarry" before the end of this year. Pointing to the minister, Hees said: "When will he begin acting as a financial leader rather than the Charlie McCarthy of the chartered banks?" Charlie McCarthy is the famous top-hatted dummy of ventrioquist Edgar Bergen.

The Canadian Council of Cuhurches was told Wednesday that $110,000 is being spent in Canada this year by church groups to aid an estimated 50,000 American "draft-age immigrants." Rev. Maurce Wilkinson, associate secretary of the 11-denomination council, released the figures at the annual meeting of the council's central committee at Hamilton. "Draft-age immigrants" is the blanket term the council uses to describe draft dodgers, military deserters and American men aged 19 to 26 in Canada on visitors' permits. Canon Wilkinson said the council itself is distributing $26,009 of the money, but most of that comes from churches in the U.S. He noted that the federal immigration department last summer identified only 25,000 such immigrants in the last four or five years, but said they are believed to number 50,000.

RESISTANCE IS EMOTIONAL

Water Export to U.S. Long Way Off

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Canadian water some day will flow to arid regions of the United States, a Canadian water expert and a U.S. resources official agree, but they say that day is a long way off.

"Most Canadians are opposed to any discussion of water export at this time," said Cleo M. Mowers, vice-president of the Canadian Water Resources Association. "Their resistance is emotional. They are hung up on it."

The association is a private one and does not necessarily represent government opinion.

The head of the U.S. interior department's bureau of reclamation, Commissioner Ellis Armstrong, said Americans eventually will have to go outside the United States for water, and Canada is the natural place to look.

"But we are going to have to convince them it is a good idea," Armstrong said. "It is going to be a time coming."

BLOCKED BY DISTRUST

Mowers and Armstrong were in Las Vegas Wednesday at the annual meeting of the National Water Resources Association. Mowers addressed the meeting. Armstrong's remarks were made in an interview.

Mowers said Canadian distrust of the U.S. is the most substantial block halting the flow of water across the border.

"We are madly suspicious of you," he said.

"Our problem is that we want the benefits of your capital without paying for it," he said. "But the great debate in Canadian politics is whether we have already sold our country to you."

Most discussion of moving Canadian water to the United States calls for its transfer via canal through Montana and Nevada into the Colorado River, from which it could be moved to the Southwest and Southern California.

The drawback to that or any other plan, both men said, is the expense.

Steelworkers Unveil Demands

PITTSBURGH (AP) — United Steelworkers President I. W. Abel has taken the wraps off major 1971 contract demands and left little doubt his 1.2 million-member union will strike if necessary to back them up.

Although a "substantial wage increase" will be a major issue in the bargaining, Abel said, priority goes to a cost-of-living escalator clause in the new contract.

"We waived this in 1959, and as a result the membership has suffered ever since," he said.

Abel spoke Wednesday at a news conference where a 14-page list of union demands was unveiled.

Cost-of-living wage escalators usually provide for automatic wage increases if government surveys indicate price increases.

Other demands disclosed by Abel include cutting the five-day, eight-hour work week to four days and improved pension-health benefits.

The average steelworker's earnings, including overtime and other extra compensation, the labor department says, is $4.32 an hour. With the implementation of the third and last phase of the steelworkers' three-year contract with the industry, the average worker now earns a basic $3.39½ an hour. The scale ranges from a minimum of $2.88½ to a maximum of $5.52 an hour.

Woman Confined

EDMONTON (CP) — A tuberculosis carrier has been ordered confined to hospital after magistrate's court was told she had not co-operated with health authorities for treatment. Two doctors testified that the 30-year-old woman had an open tuberculosis that was infectious and that she had not attended clinic regularly since she was diagnosed as a TB victim in 1965.

Up 'til now, the hardest thing to get used to about Contact Lenses was the price.

Now, instead of $150 or more, you can get prescription-perfect contact lenses for $49.50 at London Drugs Optical Dept., with no extra charges.

That $49.50 price includes as many return visits as may be necessary to ensure wearing comfort. And no sacrifice in quality has been made to achieve this low price; London Drugs Optical Dept. contact lenses are made to the most exacting tolerances, with quality checks at every step.

Success with contact lenses depends to a high degree upon the desire of the wearer. It'll take you a certain length of time to get used to wearing contacts. We can't change that.

But we've made it a lot easier to get used to paying for them.

HARDING

Hardy Climbers Claim Victory

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK (AP) — The heroes of El Capitan celebrated their 27-day climb up the sheer side of the 3,000-foot granite monolith and began casting glances today at new peaks to conquer.

Warren Harding and Dean Caldwell sipped champagne and munched fried chicken—their first hot food since Oct. 23—and said their first ascent of El Capitan's Wall of the Morning Light would be their last.

"I feel great, " said Harding, 46, of West Sacramento, Calif., as he arrived on the El Capitan crest just before noon Wednesday, smiling broadly through a heavy beard.

But when a reporter asked Harding, the dean of Yosemite climbers, whether he'd repeat the ascent, he said, "No way, man!"

PLAN NEW EXPEDITION

Caldwell, 27, of Portland, Ore., commented: "I don't think I want to do the same one again. But I'll do others like it."

They have their sights on a climbing expedition to South America.

The climbers said they hope to form an expedition next June to attempt a new ascent route on a 20,000-foot ice peak in the Peruvian Andes called Jirishanca. Then they want to try the unclimbed rock wall along the Angel Falls in Venezuela.

Their first reaction on reaching El Capitan's summit was astonishment at the size of the welcoming crowd, about 75 fellow climbers and reporters who reached a the top the easy way —by a trail on the opposite side.

"God, I don't believe it!" said Caldwell as he arrived on top first at 11:34 a.m. Wednesday. He turned away and calmly resumed the chore of hauling up the 400 pounds of gear the men had carried 3,000 vertical feet and bringing up Harding on the climbing rope at 11:53 a.m. Then their girl-friends hugged and kissed them.

The reunion of the climbers and the girls began a celebration that lasted into the night and delayed their return to the flat-rock-bound valley until well after dark.

125 Energy Experts Launch Wide Study

NEW YORK (AP) — A group of 125 experts in all forms of energy has launched an 18-month study that could have a major impact on future United States government policies.

In addition to projecting the long-range requirements and sources of supply of the U.S. the National Petroleum Council's Committee on U.S. Energy Outlook also is to study government programs and policies affecting any phase of energy supply and demand.

The committee was organized formally Monday and Hollis Dole, assistant secretary of interior for mineral resources, said its findings "should get us back on track as to energy and determine how we should go forward in the future."

"This is the largest group of energy experts ever assembled for such a project," Dole said.

EXPLORATIONS LAG

Greater U.S. demand for energy at a time of lagging explorations for new oil and gas reserves prompted the interior department to ask the Petroleum Council, its industry advisory body, to undertake the study to project demand-supply trends for the balance of the century.

The committee headed by John G. McLean of New York City, president of Continental Oil Co., held its first meeting Monday in conjunction with the opening of the annual meeting of U.S. oil's largest trade group, the American Petroleum Institute.

In addition to oil and gas, the committee includes experts on coal, hydro-power, nuclear energy, synthetic oils and gas from shale, oil sands and coal, and on such unconventional supply sources as solar energy, fuel cells and magneto-hydro-dynamics.

Rare Kangaroos

NEW YORK (Reuter) — The Bronx Zoo has acquired a pair of rare full-grown tree kangaroos, together with a baby kangaroo still in the mother's pouch, it was announced. They belong to the Matschies species, one of nine known species. Only about a dozen such kangaroos are listed in zoos outside Australia.

WIND AND TIDE took just 16 days to carry casual scientific inquiry by bottle about 60 miles from Tacoma, Wash., to the beach at Esquimalt. Cindy Leishman, 12, of 484 Sturdee, took a soaking Monday to recover the bottle as it bobbed near the beach at the foot of her street. Message inside is from Thomas Jefferson of Tacoma, who wants to know where and when the bottle arrived. His purpose: to examine tidal currents in the Puget Sound and related areas. Cindy had to break the bottle to get at the note. (Bill Halkett photo.)

SOVIET VEHICLE KEEPS UP LUNAR TRIP

Moon Buggy Sends Pictures to Earth

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Russia's bathtub-like lunar buggy went into its third day trundling over the moon today showing no sign of ending its trips in the barren Sea of Rains.

Tass said Lunokhod I, the first land vehicle to move on the moon, was continuing its program of scientific and technical research. The Soviet news agency does not usually predict Russian space efforts in any detail although observers presumed the space car would not return to earth.

The eight-wheeled pioneer vehicle, basically a bath-shaped metal tank packed with instruments, rolled down a ramp off the top of its Luna 17 ferry ship Tuesday, pulling off another surprise first in moon exploration for its Soviet builders.

Since then it has taken sharp-focus television pictures while prowling around the flat plain of lunar lava. Some pictures relayed back to earth and shown on television in Moscow Wednesday night revealed how its spoked bicycle-type wheels sank deeper in some places than others.

Lunokhod's equipment includes a French-made reflector for bouncing back laser beams to observatories in the Soviet Union and France to measure radio interference.

DETERMINES DISTANCE

A Soviet space scientist, academician Boris Petrov, said the reflector could determine to within several yards the exact distance between earth and moon.

The government newspaper Izvestia reported that the vehicle could keep moving on as few as two wheels if necessary. All its eight wheels are independently driven by electric power.

If one wheel got stuck in a rift, information would be signalled to earth, Izvestia said. A remote-controlled charge would then break a shaft in the drive and the wheel would be without power while the others pulled the buggy out of difficulties.

Petrov told Izvestia that self-propelled vehicles were indispensable for thorough study of a specific area of the moon.

Another scientist, academician Nikolai Barabashov, told Tass the moon's exploration would be followed by similar experiments with Mars, where it would be much easier for a self-propelled vehicle to move.

Meeting of Poor Has Own Ideas

By KEN KELLY
Canadian Press Science Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Position and cash mean nothing when it comes to invitations to the poor peoples' conference in January.

Even Health Minister John Munro may yearn in vain for one although he authorized the $50,000 grant that is making the Toronto conference possible.

Planning is entirely in the hands of poor peoples' organizations. They have already made it plain publicly that they intend to run the meetings along their own lines.

Mr. Munro has acknowledged in an interview that he would like to be there.

"I'm hoping to be there—that's on the assumption that I might be invited," he told reporters. "And I may not be."

"But in any case I'm certainly going to watch their deliberations."

PROGRAM NOT DECIDED

Conference sources say Mr. Munro's assumption may be premature. The program will not be decided until mid-December.

But planning committee chairman Peter Robinson of Toronto has already made it plain that the format "will allow only members of poor people's organizations to participate."

Informants said the idea is to keep the conference entirely in poor people's hands and beyond the influence of the "system."

They regard it as a "system" approach to use part of the Jan. 8-9 conference to discuss Mr. Munro's welfare administration problems or those of the provincial welfare ministers for that matter.

There have been some hints thrown out that the provincial ministers might also like invitations.

Whatever the planners decide about ministerial attendance or non-attendance, the deliberations will loom large at the federal-provincial conference of welfare ministers here a week or two later.

In fact, one reason for postponing the ministerial conference from October was to see what the welfare recipients produced at the Toronto meetings.

Workers Sound Off

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — More than 500 employees of Malaysia-Singapore Airlines have been wearing noisy, wooden-soled sandals to work since Oct. 19 to protest alleged delays by the airline in settling wage disputes. This week, the workers put their leather soles on again. Their union president said acting Labor Minister Lee San Choon told them they were giving Malaysia a bad image in the eyes of tourists. He also said he would try to speed up wage settlements.

'Activist Journalists Don't Use Objectivity'

HONOLULU (AP) — The director of the American Press Institute says many young reporters believe their news stories "should take a point of view with no pretence to impartiality."

Malcolm Mallette told the Associated Press Managing Editors Wednesday the philosophy of activist journalism "has sprouted and spread swiftly into many newsrooms."

"The new activists contend that objectivity in the news columns should often be cast aside as unequal to the problems of society," Mallette told the more than 400 representatives of AP member newspapers.

Mallette quoted one 24-year-old reporter as saying: "There is too much wrong to allow the traditional constraints of objectivity to get in the way."

"I keep seeing reporters who try to call their moral cowardice distance or objectivity," the reporter had replied in an API survey. "If I can't work for social change through journalism, I'll get out of journalism."

EDITORS OPPOSED

However, Mallette said the AP survey found editors in almost unanimous agreement that involvement diminishes a reporter's ability to cover a story fairly.

Wes Gallagher, general manager of The Associated Press, told the news executives that a reporter should not decide "which side is right and then become the advocate of that side."

"There are enough strident, partisan, intolerant voices today without adding that of the journalist," Gallagher said. "His should be a clear voice of fact—not rhetoric, the voice of fairness—not partisanship, the voice of reason in an irrational world.

"Yet the very basis of journalism—objective news reporting—has come under increasing attack, in some journalism schools, by politicians and, regrettably, within our profession itself."

Gallagher said there are many who question that the journalist can be objective.

"It makes just as much sense to say a journalist cannot put aside his own feelings as to contend a lawyer can't give a client a sound defence because he finds him personally obnoxious," Gallagher added.

Levesque Snipes at Governments

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP) — Rene Levesque, leader of the Parti Quebecois, said Wednesday night that "if the Parti Quebecois did not exist, there would be 10 times more members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec."

Mr. Levesque, here to prepare for the party's regional convention Nov. 27-29, said during a news conference the Parti Quebecois did not believe in violence as a means to speed up Quebec's independence.

By wishing to give Quebecers their freedom by democratic means, the Parti Quebecois was acting as a conductor for those who no longer saw violence as the only course of action, he said.

In the current crisis the Parti Quebecois "continues to fight both Ottawa and Quebec governments."

Mr. Levesque described as "inhuman, dishonest and anti-democratic the Trudeau, Marchand, Drapeau and Bourassa governments."

The Goo of Fellini's Unconscious: It's Becoming a Bore

By PETER McNELLY

When Fellini's Satyricon ended, someone in the row behind us said, "If you ever talk me into going to another movie like this I'm going to kick you in the head."

Whether that statement typifies Victoria's response to genius is impossible to know. However, Satyricon clearly flopped here.

No wonder. It is a bizarre film, perhaps impenetrably personal. The flamboyant subterranean vision of an image-drunk director possessed by his dreams.

I didn't like the movie. But that's no reason to discard it like a scenic postcard from a travelling aunt.

Fellini has made several lovely, sad and subtle films. That Satyricon is so different from these is no reason to say the Italian master has disappeared in the goo of his unconscious.

Satyricon is a series of sketches on imaginatively reconstructed pagan Rome. Because Fellini uses the same characters in different roles, and because it is at first difficult to tell where one episode begins and another ends, the movie is confusing.

Satyricon is also confusing because Fellini never gives his audience time to become adjusted to the grotesque faces and behavior of his characters.

They jump into action without explanation, and we are left alone to start sorting out the meanings of each scene.

Satyricon is confusing for still other reasons. Nothing adds up. The ending is as arbitrary as the beginning, casually inconsequential.

The setting is unfamiliar, not because we cannot reconstruct a vision of ancient Rome — Charlton Heston fixed that for us — but because Fellini's vision is unique.

And the film is confusing because it seems, superficially at least, to assault conventional morality with impunity.

I think Fellini deliberately made a confusing film. I think he wanted to shock his audiences out of the Twentieth Century and into total submission to his imagery.

Only then, he has suggested in the quote which accompanied Satyricon's advertising, will we see what he offers with innocent eyes. Of course, it is too much to ask that everyone drop his ordinary moral code and ordinary expectations.

So Fellini simplified matters by shocking these into the background. To show us what? His attempt to escape a peculiar kind of terror.

Fellini's last two films, 8½ and Juliet of the Spirits, studied psychological and spiritual aridity against a background of sex and pleasure.

Fellini is haunted by a powerfully sensual soul, which, godless, seems to veer blindly toward extravagant gratification of any kind. He hates the Roman Catholic Church for its arrogance, cruelty and power over the body.

But having rejected the church, he cannot jettison the residues of fear it inspired. Fear of damnation, eternal suffering.

With Satyricon, he seems to have dropped his recent preoccupation with God, despair and sensuality and plunged deep into his unconscious desires.

How else to explain Satyricon's amorality, its total acceptance of anything that happens, its wild lust, its freakish beauty?

But Satyricon is not an allegory of contemporary decadence.

Fellini is challenging our conscious values and ideas of human dignity by refusing to judge the behavior of his characters.

On his own terms, Satyricon suggests a life of absolute tolerance and absolute death. Though much of the film is mocking, the laughter is directed more at life's foolishness than at fools.

The main character, Encolpius, is a wanderer who gets nowhere and discovers nothing. Life in Satyricon is short, meaningless and sensual. Only a Christian, it seems, could find it disgusting.

But disgusting it is. If he only intended a simple portrait of paganism, Fellini would not have distorted so much. He asks us to see with innocent eyes, then mocks our naivete with ugliness.

Unable to accept paganism's licence, Fellini ruins its face. He cannot escape the claws of God.

The result is a nihilistic statement demeaning man. Perhaps Italian audiences will find Fellini's conspicuous Godlessness more sympathetic to their own experiences with the church.

I am beginning to find it boring.

Spirit Not So Blithe

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Noel Coward's play, Blithe Spirit, is one of those long-term fail-safe comedies that bloom periodically. They're usually a flash-in-the-pan like Charley's Aunt or Harvey, or cream of a big crop like Neil Simons' The Odd Couple.

Certainly Coward never wrote wittier lines, dreamed up a more laughable situation nor delineated a more memorable character than his medium, Madam Arcati.

The Bastion Theatre production currently at McPherson Playhouse proves the indestructibility of some of these things, for the audiences are laughing as heartily as ever at lines and situation created 25 years ago.

And this despite the fact that Director Edwin Stephenson's production is not well conceived.

In general terms, as seen Wednesday night, it lacks the light, buoyant touch, the air of elegance, the crispness of a sparkling tempo.

As a matter of fact, I feel that the set is to blame for a lot of the problems.

I cannot escape the conviction that at least some of the cast and direction might have been far more effective against a different set.

What we had was garish color in a solid middle class 1930s stuffiness. Try being a blithe spirit in that environment and dicsover what it means to be earth-bound.

There also appeared to be a total lack of co-ordination between costume department and set design. How otherwise could Pat Barlow have been put into a long-blindingly-blue velvet skirt that focused one's vision and hampered her performance throughout the first act.

Pat Barlow, and to a slightly lesser extent, Ann Purdon, are capable actresses who could easily have been excellent. Miss Barlow has vitality, the power of conviction and of getting well inside the skin of her character.

But the director allowed her to use too much of the top range of her voice and apparently had failed to notice that when the two actresses were on stage together they shared e,actly the same tonal level and rhythm.

What I really find it hard to forgive however, is the burlesque made of that wonderful character, Madam Arcati.

The medium is kooky — quaint — bizarre. But not ridiculous.

Hilary Young's Arcati is a parody. The costuming initiates it and her unrelated gesticulation, her obviously phoney walk, poses, blurted articulation are good for laughs but not for a well developed from-within-out characterization — and not for Coward.

As Charles Condimine, the man at the centre of all the comedy, Stuart Kent is adequate but stilted.

Loan Fund for Uvic Students Set Up by Library Employees

A fund is being set up to help deserving students at the University of Victoria by employees of the Greater Victoria Public Library.

They've named it the J. C. Lort Student Loan Fund for their former chief librarian who was forced to resign by the library board Nov. 1.

More than 60 employees and former department heads attended a reception for Lort and his wife Wednesday.

In announcing the establishment of the new fund, Jim Simpson, vice-president of the Victoria Public Library Staff Association, said the fund had been established because of the "respect, admiration and affection" which every staff member held for Lort.

Simpson added that although the fund is in its infancy $185 had already been collected.

He said Lort had approached association president Laura Quance when he realized his enforced resignation was imminent and asked that instead of giving him a farewell gift, if this was what they planned, the money collected be given to Uvic's student loan fund.

Wednesday Lort was also presented with two Eskimo soapstone carvings.

Two former chief librarians were among those who honored Lort Wednesday. They were Miss Margaret Clay, librarian from 1924 to 1952, and Mrs. F. J. Shenstone, the former Miss Theresa Pollock, who served as librarian from 1952 to 1954.

Lort told his former staff that they could look forward to a golden future. "It can't be anything else than better."

FORMER EXECUTIVE OFFICER of HMCS Malahat, Capt. D. R. Leroyd, now commanding officer of HMCS Discovery, will be promoted to commodore Jan. 4, 1971, and appointed senior naval reserve adviser. Working out of Vancouver, Learoyd will visit the other 15 naval reserve units in Canada, coordinating reserve activities with officials in Ottawa, Halifax, Calgary and Esquimalt.

OAK BAY WOMAN IN RACE FOR ALDERMANIC SEAT

Mrs. Shirley Dowell, 3270 Upper Terrace, today filed nomination papers as an aldermanic candidate for Oak Bay.

A former income tax assessor, Mrs. Dowell, 43, is residential chairman for Oak Bay-Victoria's United Appeal-Red Cross campaign.

A strong advocate of having the Victoria Riding Academy property rezoned from high-rise development to either single-family or parkland, Mrs. Dowell is also opposed to spot zoning.

She is secretary-treasurer of the University Ratepayers Association, a board member of the YM-YWCA, and a member of the Association of Women Electors.

Oak Bay alderman Ian Horne announced Wednesday he will not seek re-election on Dec. 12.

He said he had reached the decision "with considerable reluctance" but added "I cannot see myself being able in future to devote the time that would be required."

Laywer John Goult, 40, of 1605 York, has already filed nomination papers and three other sets of nomination papers have been taken out by would-be candidates.

Peking Names New Envoy To Moscow

MOSCOW (WP) — Tass confirmed Wednesday that Peking has appointed a new Chinese ambassador to Moscow — Liu Hsin-Chuan, a former deputy foreign minister.

Tass reported that Liu was among those present at a meeting between Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai and Vasily Tolstikov, the new soviet ambassador in Peking. Observers saw the meeting as another step in the slow normalization of interstate relations between the quarreling Communist giants.

Uvic Team Wins Rounds In TV Quiz

A University of Victoria team has defeated McGill University and the University of Waterloo, in two consecutive rounds of a national television quiz show.

The team gets $1,000 for student scholarships with each victory.

The Uvic-McGill test will be televised on the CTV network Sunday, Jan. 3. A week later the Uvic-Waterloo quiz will be shown.

Top Prices Paid For Art Works

NEW YORK (AP) — The highest auction prices in history for a single painting and a single painting and a single sculpture by living U.S. artists were paid Wednesday night for works by "pop" masters Roy Lichtenstein and Claes Oldenburg.

Lichtenstein's Big Painting No. 6 sold for $75,000 and Stove, an Oldenburg sculpture, for $45,000. The buyer in each instance was Rufolf Zirner, a West German dealer.

Fifty contemporary pop paintings and sculptures brought bids totalling $1,179,450 at the auction at Parke-Bernet Galleries, held in conjunction with Sotheby, the London dealer.

The previous high auction price for a contemporary American work was $60,000 for Andy Warhol's painting of a Campbell's soup can, the galleries said.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

The gratitude in our hearts can never be fully expressed, but we want our friends, relatives, neighbors, and hospital staff to know how much their kind words and expressions of sympathy have meant to us during our recent time of sorrow in the sad loss of our husband and father, Mr. Wilfred Graham. — Beatrice and children.

9 IN MEMORIAM

COWARD — In loving memory of Robert Coward, who passed away Nov. 18, 1964.
Dear Father, you are not forgotten
Though on earth you are no more,
Still in memory you are with us
As you always were before.
—Remembered by your loving son, Rod, and wife, Helen.

COWARD — In loving memory of Robert Coward, who passed away Nov. 18, 1964.
Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear;
Fond memories linger every day,
Remembrance keeps him near.
—Always remembered by his daughter Eleanor, Ken and family.

COWARD — In loving memory of Robert Coward, who passed away Nov. 19, 1964.
I have lost my soul's companion,
A life linked with my own;
And day by day I miss him more
As I walk through life alone.
—Always remembered by his loving wife, Helen.

HOLMES—In loving memory of my beloved husband, dad, grandpa and great-grandad, Joseph E., who passed away on Nov. 19, 1969.
"Treasured memories."
—The Family.

PATTERSON—In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Clement R. Patterson, who passed away Nov. 19, 1968.
The garment of his soul has passed away,
The shining spirit and the love-light may,
The echo of his voice, his eyes, his smile,
Just as they were, are with us all the while.
—Deeply missed by your wife, Mary, and family; brother Jim and Evelyn, Tom and Dorothy.

SMITH — In treasured memory of my dear husband, James Campbell, who passed away suddenly Nov. 19, 1965.
To hide my tears when I speak your name,
No goodbye, but a broken heart.
Sometimes in the busy hours,
Or in a crowded place,
There comes a fleeting vision
Of a dear remembered face.
A pleasant word may strike a chord.
So cruel can life be.
You lose all hope, all joy is gone,
The way you cannot see.
But if you grope through tragic night,
There breaks at last, the morning light.
—Ever remembered and sadly missed by his loving wife, Madelaine.

FAMILY AFFAIR. 7 p.m., Channel 8; 7:30, Channel 7. Uncle Bill falls victim to one of the most popular problems of comic strip fathers and one which has had its share of television exposure. Clint Howard and John Lawrence are featured.

THE FLIP WILSON SHOW. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. Arte Johnson guests along with Moms Mabley and Cajun singer Doug Kershaw. The evening's feature had Flip as "Geraldine Jones" accompanying Moms Mabley to a beauty parlor presisided over by Monsieure Rene (Arte). Arte also plays an apprentice holdupman practicing on Flip. An added guest is Marcel Marceau, performing his famed pantomime, "The Mask Makers," and joining Flip in a pantomine duet.

ODD COUPLE. 7:30 p.m., Channel 2. Oscar is a slob . . . and little boys often prefer the company of slobs to that of more meticulous men. Oscar doesn't appreciate this, however. He refuses to give up his Saturdays to act as a big brother to a young fellow who has no father, leaving the situation in poor square Felix' lap.

THE INTERNS. 8 p.m., Channel 2 and 6. Act of God. Intern Greg Pettit picks up four hitchhikers who are seriously injured in an accident. His problem then becomes how to give them medical care and at the same time find help. The show was filmed in California's Bronson Canyon.

THE DEAN MARTIN SHOW 8:30 p.m., Channel 8; 10, Ch. 5. There's nothing spectaculer about this Martin presentation, but there's nothing wrong with it either. Vikki Carr, the Temptations and Charles Nelson Reilly are the guests with Reilly again breaking Dean up as a frustrated jolly green giant. Miss Carr's feature is a well-belted "Lucky Old Sun" while the Temptations star with "Cloud Nine" and "My Girl."

IRONSIDE. 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. "The Man on the Inside" / Don Galloway as Detective Ed Brown puts his arm on Raymond Burr as Chief Ironside and not so calmly tells his boss he's under arrest. An elaborate frameup begins with information from junkies that it was Ironside who tipped off several dope pushers that a raid was planned against them. A subsequent investigation by Sergeant Brown turns up such damning evidence that the department is forced to jail their "untouchable" man.

★ ★ ★

THE THURSDAY NIGHT MOVIE 9 p.m., Channel 7. "A Place in the Sun" starring Elizabeth Taylor, Montgomery Clift and Shelley Winters. This adaptation of Theodore Dreiser's best-selling "An American Tregedy" is one of those rare cinematic instances of the film being as good or better than the book. Clift plays a poor mill worker who gets romantically involved with a dumpy blonde co-worker, Miss Winters. A short time later, he meets the lovely daughter of a millionaire and two fall deeply in love. His dreams of a wealthy and happy future are shattered with the news of the other girl's pregnancy. Now he is faced with an agonizing decision. Raymond Burr, Anne Revere and Fred Clark are featured.

YACHT BROKER

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

I occasionally see articles by psychiatrists who write that they feel people who develop high blood pressure are of a certain personality type which is the cause of their disease. One article described the person who develops high blood pressure (we doctors call it hypertension) as having personality problems such as "exaggerated dependent strivings, submissiveness coupled with stubbornness, feelings of weakness and defenselessnes, suppression of hostility, fear of injury, and emotional detachment."

This type of theoretical writing is much in contrast to my experience with many hypertensive patients. I have known a number of two-fisted, hard-driving business executives and self-made millionaires who were anything but fearful, repressed, or inhibited. One of these patients dominated one of the toughest unions on the San Francisco waterfront for years, and another fought his way up from being a stevedore to being the owner of a large shipping line. This last man had a sudden big rise in his blood pressure whenever he lost his very violent temper. I was able to convince him that in order to save himself from having a stroke when he exploded at a customer or discovered someone was trying to cheat him, he had to keep from letting his temper get out of hand.

There is no doubt that at times, and in some cases, mental strain and strong emotion have something to do with high blood pressure. I have had patients with hypertension whose pressure shot up 50 millimeters (mm.) or so when they got angry. I remember a widow whose pressure used to shoot up from about 160 mm. (a fairly normal blood pressure) to 240 mm. whenever she had a stormy interview with her good-for-nothing son, who was always trying to break the trust fund which his father had set up for him.

My impression is, however, that the most important factor in producing high blood pressure is a hereditary predisposition to the disease. Without this, a man can live a very strenuous life with plenty of worry and resentment and emotional upset without ever developing high blood pressure. A person needs to watch out for high blood pressure when he knows that someone in his family — perhaps his father or uncle — got into trouble because of hypertension. With a certain inborn predisposition, a person under a lot of emotional strain can develop various types of nervously connected diseases, such as a peptic ulcer, severe migraine, asthma, or giant hives.

6,000 FLQ Leads Checked by Police

MONTREAL (CP) — Maurice St. Pierre, director of Quebec Provincial Police, said Wednesday that some 6,000 leads have had to be checked out so far in the search for the abductors of James (Jasper) Cross and the abductors and murderers of Pierre Laporte.

Mr. Cross, a 49-year-old British trade commissioner, was abducted from his home Oct. 5 by the Front de Liberation du Quebec terrorists. Mr. Laporte, former Quebec labor minister was kidnapped five days later by the FLQ and his body was discovered in the trunk of a car Oct. 18.

Mr. St. Pierre denied that information was being withheld from the RCMP, outlining how the workload in the kidnapping investigation is being handled.

"When the work to be done is within Montreal, Montreal handles it. When it's not in Montreal, we take it over.

"This is the understanding . . . it's very plain."

Asked the RCMP's role, Mr. St. Pierre said:

"They are working with us on both cases. If we need their help, they come in. It all depends on what it is."

He said he did not know of any communications gap among the Montreal, Quebec and RCMP forces.

Meanwhile, the Gazette says Mr. Cross may have been held for a while in the apartment where accused terrorist Bernard Lortie was arrested Nov. 6 and where three other kidnap suspects hid in a false wall to successfully avoid capture.

An unnamed police officer is quoted as saying the hidden compartment in an apartment closet was "big enough to hold more than three persons."

History Society Backs Save-the-Birds Effort

The Victoria Natural History Society Wednesday supported efforts by the Fish and Game Wildlife Branch to preserve habitats for wild birds.

In a brief presented to the Capital Regional District's planning committee, the society added that it does not condone hunting on the Saanich Peninsula.

This possibility has been raised by studies now under way. Present municipal regulations on the peninsula prohibit discharge of firearms.

The society said the number of birds quoted in a recent report are incorrect. An estimate of 1 million ducks is "altogether impossible," it said.

"In spite of these strictures, we support and welcome the basic endeavor of the branch to secure habitat preservation," the society said.

"We believe, however, that in such a densely-populated area as the Saanich Peninsula this might be achieved more satisfactorily if areas were set aside for breeding and wintering waterfowl rather than their shooting.

"If hunting is nevertheless to be permitted, our society, while not condoning hunting, would urge that it be permitted in certain restricted and well-marked areas only."

It said that one of the "most severe difficulties" is that with notable exceptions "many hunters have a very poor knowledge of bird identification and there could easily be irreparable damage done to the populations of some of the uncommon species."

Condominium Plan Eyed

A group of Victoria's senior citizens plans to build and buy apartments in an 11-unit condominium on Jackson Street if city council approves necessary zoning changes.

Architect Kaj Pederson designed the project, to be considered by the Victoria advisory planning commission today.

Saanich Silver Threads member Winnifred Nielsen said planning has been under way since March.

"It's the answer for older people in the moderate income bracket who cannot or do not wish to remain in the family home," she said.

Plans call for eight two-bedroom suites and three one-bedroom suites. Each will have its own fireplace, laundry facilities and sun deck.

Apartments will be soundproofed. They will be located next door to a park in the middle of a single-family dwelling area.

Those involved in the project will either buy their apartments outright, or finance them at monthly payments of $104.

What to Do With House Plants

By HILDA BEASTALL

House plants are popular gifts to take one's hostess during November, but too frequently she doesn't have a clue what to do with them when the flowers are over. A few of these are normally grown outdoors, others are of tropical origin, others bloom indoors and then must go into dormancy.

Hilda

Which are which? And what to do with them?

One of the hardiest we see as a house plant at almost any season is the chrysanthemum. Since it blooms normally outdoors in fall, it likes the coolest place we can find for it though it needs also to have strong light. After flowering has finished, it may be planted from the pot into the garden.

There it will grow again in the spring and bloom at the normal fall season. Before moving outdoors, cut the plant down to about an inch above the pot and keep in a place cooler than house temperature for a week or two just to acclimatize it a bit.

Hibiscus plants are to be seen now in some stores, with their five-inch flowers spread wide and the long stamens united into a column.

These hibiscus have a woody stem about three feet tall with the lovely flowers on short side branches. In a sunroom, glassed-in porch or conservatory-type room as part of the house, such a plant will continue blooming for several winter weeks.

A temperature between 60 to 75 degrees F. on sunny days is helpful if full daylight and a few hours sunshine are possible. Under these conditions give water only when the top soil is dry. Fill the pot slowly with tepid water, let it run out the bottom into the dish and soak up what it can in a half hour. Then empty any which remains.

Hibiscus blossoms fold up and drop after a full day, but more develop. When no more come, cut down watering and keep the plant in a cooler place for a rest.

About late April or early May, shorten all the stems, repot into fresh compost and sand. Hibiscus may be stood outdoors in a sunny warm corner when the nights get warm — usually well into June here. The plant will flower outdoors in July and August.

Cyclamens grown in pots as house plants do not go outdoors at all. In bloom now from greenhouses, they often will continue flowering until March or April if in not too warm a room nor overwatered.

As the leaves begin to look withered and no new ones are forthcoming, the soil is allowed to become gradually dry. The tuber from which the plant grows remains in the pot of dry soil indoors until late August. Then by repotting into fresh soil and watering a little, it will start into growth again for another winter of flowers.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

Generally speaking most deceptive tactics employed in the play are put to use by declarer. The reason is that declarer does not have to worry about deceiving his partner, since the latter, as the dummy, has no role in the play. But when a defender attempts to deceive a declarer, the former runs the grave risk of also deceiving his partner—and this can be ruinous to the defensive side.

But defensive deceptive plays do have their little niche. Here is an example that achieved the desired effect. The deal arose in the Life Masters Pairs Event, which was played at the recent Summer National Championships held in Boston.

Neither side vulnerable. West deals.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	1 NT
Pass	3 NT	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♡.

Had declarer had the courage (or the clairvoyancy) to play a low heart from dummy on west's opening lead of the heart five, this story might have been over before it started. Declarer would now have five heart tricks, and assuming that he finessed East for the queen of spades, nine tricks would then be there for the taking. But declarer, unfortunately, could see only two hands, and it just didn't seem right to play a low heart from dummy at trick one.

And so the opening heart lead was won by dummy's queen, after which the 10 of diamonds was led. When East put up the queen, declarer, allowed the queen to win (after all, East had bid diamonds, and he figured to have both the queen and king, expecially when West had failed to lead a diamond originally).

After a few moments of relection, East found the "killing" lead—he plunked down the king of clubs! With the king winning, he then continued with the seven of clubs. Declarer now paused to indulge in some agonizing thought.

From South's point of view, East, who had opened the bidding, really figured to have the ace and king of clubs. Otherwise why would he have played the club king at trick three. So, on the second club lead, South put up the club queen.

Upon taking the queen with the ace, West returned a club. When play had ended, declarer had gone down a trick, losing four clubs and a diamond.

STOP MIDI PROMOTER RETURNS TO STOCKS

CHICAGO (UPI) — Edward A. Toppel, who gave his all for the miniskirt, says he is going back to stockbroking.

When the midiskirt first appeared, Toppel, 29, quit his job as a stockbroker and began selling "stop the midi" buttons in eight cities across the nation.

Toppel said button sales are down lately, but claimed to have sold 75,000 at 50 cents each, clearing $5,000.

"It is the end of an era," he said. "I think the campaign was a success. It gave men a chance to protest against fashions."

SOLUTION FRIDAY

Giant Bulldozer Didn't Scare Her

LONDON (AP) — Terence Round, 27-year-old laborer, brooded when his wife, Hilda, went home to mother, but then sprung into action.

He swiped a bulldozer and aimed it in the general direction of his mother-in-law's house.

Before he got there, however, he knocked down two highway engineers' sheds, several lamp posts, schoolyard railings and traffic signs. The 42-ton machine also tore up pavements and lawns. By this time it was clear what he was up to.

Hilda tore out of her mother's house and planted herself directly in front of the bulldozer.

Terence stopped. He told the police later and this came out in the court case Monday: "This is the most courageous thing I've seen in life, a woman standing in front of a 42-ton bulldozer and refusing to move."

He pleaded guilty to the theft as well as causing about $3,000 worth of damage. The sentence: 2½ years in jail.

Study Suggests Maritime Union

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says a 2½-year study to be released Nov. 27 recommends the creation of a joint secretariat to co-ordinate major policy and administrative functions of Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick.

The study was sponsored by the three provincial governments, with 50 per cent of the financing coming from the federal government, the newspaper says.

It says the report and 15 accompanying papers are expected to identify a number of areas in which economies can be achieved and efficiency improved through administrative integration or policy-co-ordination.

The story says such areas likely will include medical care insurance, health and welfare, education, highways, labor-management relations, economic intelligence, pollution control, tourism, industrial development, sales tax collection and control and land title administration.

The newspaper says formation of such a secretariat could constitute the first step to the eventual creation of a single Maritimes administration.

It says a co-ordinated computer data-processing system would be an essential prerequisite for such increased regional administration, and an assessment of computer capability will be recommended in the report.

The story also says that initially the three provinces would maintain distinctive individual identities and would probably have the right of veto over crucial matters of special local interest dealt with by the secretariat.

Indians Want Compensation

VANCOUVER (CP)—With a former federal justice minister as their legal scout and lookout, Indians in British Columbia are going after Ottawa for compensation for lands lost and for guarantees of hunting and fishing rights wihtin their lost domain.

He was instructed by the chiefs Wednesday, at their annual conference, to prepare a brief in support of their land claims plus a demand for the return of aboriginal hunting and fishing rights.

Mr. Fulton, now in private law practice in Vancouver, said in an interview that it is expected the brief will take up to six months to prepare. The land-and-hunting question involves an Indian population of approximately 47,000.

Trapper Portrays Grizzly Country

Grizzly County, a film that took three years to shoot in northern Canada, will be seen at the McPherson Playhouse Dec. 3, 4 and 5, with each performance beginning at 8:30 p.m.

It will be narrated by its maker, Andy Russell, author of a book of the same name, who now lives in Hawk's Nest near Waterton Lakes Park in the extreme southwest corner of Alberta.

Russell has spent 27 years as a professional guide, trapper and student of nature.

His film follows the life style of the grizzly bear and other species, with some of the shots taken only a few feet from the animals.

Grizzly territory retraced in film by trapper-guide Russell.

Police Court

A 21-year-old man who told court here the doctor who saw him couldn't possibly know whether he was mentally ill was remanded to Riverview Hospital for psychiatric observation.

Kevin MacDonald, of 2646 Victor, had appeared Tuesday before Judge William Ostler on a charge of causing a disturbance and was remanded to Wednesday so a doctor could observe his mental condition.

A doctor appointed by the court gave evidence that "I believe this man would benefit from at least 30 days psychiatric observation at Riverview."

MacDonald objected.

"Why would he say that?" he burst out in a loud voice.

"He only saw me just a second. All he did was ask me my name and that."

"Have you any doubt that he is mentally ill?" Ostler asked. The doctor replied he had no doubt.

"How can he say something like that when he doesn't even know me," asked MacDonald. "I'm not that ill."

Court was told the man had recently been a voluntary patient at the Eric Martin Institute for treatment of a problem involving glue-sniffing.

He said he had been under the influence of glue when charged with causing a distrubance by shouting.

MacDonald said he had sniffed glue and liked "the smell of it", but "I can quit any time I want."

He said at the Eric Martin Institute "they took more tests than they can handle and they couldn't find a darn thing wrong with me."

"It's the boy's future I'm interested in," Ostler said, and remanded MacDonald to Riverview until Dec. 16.

Gerard Langis, 40, of Vancouver, who pleaded guilty to theft under $50, was sentenced to four months in prison.

Langis was charged with shoplifting merchandise from the Bay.

Ostler was told he had an extensive criminal record and had only recently been released from prison.

Howard Abercrombie, 35, of 1218 Hillside, was fined $400 when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving Wednesday.

Richard and Kelly Bell, charged with possession of marijuana for trafficking Oct. 13, had a new information read before the court and changed their election to trial by higher court judge without jury.

They waived preliminary hearing and were committed for trial.

Bell and his wife are currently free on $6,000 cash bail, which was ordered to continue at $3,000 each for the new charge.

Jack Cressman, no fixed address, was found guilty on a charge of fraudulently obtaining food from Paul's Restaurant and fined $35.

"You look like a decent fellow who's being ruined by alcohol," Ostler said.

Bruce Radford, 23, of 1825 Fairfield, one of the 113 suspected drug-traffickers rounded up throughout the province by RCMP, pleaded not guilty to a charge of trafficking in LSD Aug. 24 and elected trial by magistrate.

He was remanded to Nov. 26.

Bail was fixed at $3,500, sureties only, after the Crown alleged "an extensive previous history including escaping lawful custody."

A man who said he considered two men in wetsuits as adequate life-saving gear for a third man in a boat was fined $10 for not having the required life-jackets.

David Dormer of 352 Gorge Road told court that while there were no life-jackets in his boat the wetsuits worn by two men were "better than DOT approved."

Of the third man Dormer said:

"He had two moveable life-jackets, if you want to put it that way, sir."

Soldier Didn't See Calley

FORT BENNING, Ga. (AP) — Frank Beardslee, a former U.S. soldier, has testified that he saw 15 to 20 dead Vietnamese women and children at My Lai. But he said that he did not see Lieut. William Calley on the day of the assault on the hamlet.

Beardslee, 23, of Lathrop, Mich., corroborated the earlier testimony of a former army combat photographer who said he witnessed the multiple killings of Vietnamese civilians at May Lai and also took pictures of the slayings.

Both Beardslee and a Los Angeles free lance photographer, Ronald Haeberle, 28, testified they never saw Calley at My Lai March 16, 1968.

The court martial of Calley, 27, enters its third day today. He is charged with murder of 102 unarmed Vietnamese civilians. If convicted, he could face the death penalty or life in prison.

$17,500 SOUGHT

Track Campaign Launched

Students and teachers at Claremont Senior Secondary School launched a campaign Wednesday to raise $17,500 to help finance an all-weather running track, the third in the area.

The ambitious scheme involves selling raffle tickets at a dollar a ticket with the prize to be a new car, the draw being at the end of January next year.

The $17,500 figure represents one-third of the cost of the international-size track. Some of the money is intended to assist the school choir on a trip to the United Kingdom at Easter.

School officials have been negotiating with the municipality of Saanich and the Saanich Peninsula school board for the remaining two-thirds of the track cost.

Organizers hope the track will be a reality for the 1971 spring track and field season.

The only operating all-weather track at the moment is at the University of Victoria's Centennial Stadium. The second, at Esquimalt Senior Secondary School, is near completion.

Claremont student council president Jim Grant could foresee no difficulty in plans to raise the funds.

Teacher Gerry Montgomery pointed out advantages of the track, which could be available to both elementary and secondary schools in the district.

"You just can't get the Uvic track—it's in use all the time from 10 a.m. on," he said.

He said within two years of its construction a program for its full use could be developed.

It shouldn't need repairs for 10 years and would eliminate the raking, rolling and lining that is necessary with conventional cinder tracks, he said.

The track could be built in a month.

Pollution Permits In Doubt

The provincial government can't find out from Ottawa what status provincial pollution control permits will have if they conflict with federal permits under the Canada Water Act.

"At the moment, nobody knows," said Resources Minister Ray Williston following a meeting Wednesday with J. J. Greene, federal minister of energy, mines and resources.

The Canada Water Act could involve the federal government in regulation of pollution discharges into waterways with shared jurisdiction.

Williston, who has been critical of some aspects of the federal water act in the past, said discussions with Greene were "inhibited" by the fact that responsibility for the water act will pass from Greene to Fisheries Minister Jack Davis, who will co-ordinate Ottawa's anti-pollution efforts.

The meeting was held to review federal-provincial responsibilities under the Columbia River Treaty. Such meetings must be held annually under terms of the treaty.

Greene said the meeting was of an "administrative" nature.

'MY PEOPLE ARE COSSACKS'

Man, 65, Guilty in Machete Attack

Sixty-five-year-old Stephen Trach was found guilty Wednesday of a machete attack that blinded University of Victoria student Jack Whitlock in his right eye.

Trach, a tall, grey-haired man who wears thick glasses, was expressionless in the prisoner's box when Judge William Ostler found him guilty of assault causing bodily harm at the conclusion of a provincial court trial that took two days.

Ostler remanded Trach to Dec. 3 for preparation of a presentence report, and in view of the man's age ordered him released on $500 bail.

Court was told during the trial that Trach had assaulted Whitlock with the heavy bush knife following a drinking bout and argument Sept. 29.

The judge said it was clear Trach had wielded the machete, which has an 18-inch steel blade, and struck Whitlock's eye causing a "grievous wound."

"I am satisfied he was assaulted by this man with this machete," Ostler said, and added that even if Whitlock has been trespassing at the time of the incident the attack would constitute "a great deal more force than necessary."

Court has been told during a defence by lawyer Edward Pollard that Trach had asked Whitlock to leave his premises three times and that Whitlock had refused.

He argued that Trach was entitled to use force to evict him.

The judge, however, said the evidence indicated that Trach had asked Whitlock to leave and then poured another beer.

MOTION DENIED

He said evidence by Trach was "fanciful" and "transparent" and that he believed the testimony of Whitlock.

Trach took the stand as a witness in his own defence after a motion for dismissal by Pollard at the conclusion of the crown's case was denied by Ostler.

The accused said in his evidence he was first attacked by Whitlock, who was a guest at his home at 439 Atkins Avenue in Langford.

He claimed the dispute began when the student began taking pills while drinking.

Court had learned earlier the pills were a medical prescription and that when Whitlock went to take one Trach's wife seized them.

Whitlock's wife asked that he be stopped from taking the pills because "when he takes those pills he goes wild," Trach said.

"He took one every time he would pour himself some rum, and he was drinking two to my one." Trach claimed he was afraid because "I've seen addicts before."

When Whitlock started "getting awful wild" he asked him to leave and got a refusal.

"The next thing you know, crash, he hit me. Bing, bam he hit me twice in the chest."

"When I stood up he hit me twice below the belt and then he kicked me twice in the groin."

Trach said he lost three quarts of blood as a result of the blows.

"He went and picked up a chair and was advancing on us and in one hand he had a knife." Trach said he faced up to the attack, then "I went to the bedroom and I got a machete what I kept for that special occasion."

He said he was hit in the shins with the chair and dropped the machete on the floor before pushing Whitlock out the door.

When Anderson read from a statement given to Colwood RCMP after the incident by Trach, the accused said it was not accurate. He said police had not been interested in listening to what he wanted to say about the matter and tried to get him to sign a confession.

Parts of the statement read by Anderson included answers by Trach to questions in which he referred to himself as "drunk as a skunk."

When asked if he would describe the machete as a "sabre," police recorded Trach as replying:

"My people are Cossacks. To us a sabre is a sacred thing. I would feel sorry for that guy if I had a sabre. I was a champion bayonet man in the army."

In his argument, Pollard pointed out that Whitlock's wound was caused by an upward jab and that Trach had been jabbing at the ceiling to ward off the complainant's chair.

He said it was merely a case of self-defence in "a drunken brawl."

Ostler noted in his judgment Trach's reference to the Cossacks and Whitlock's evidence that his assailant had yelled something similar.

He also rapped the "completely unwarranted attack on the integrity and impartiality of police officers" during Trach's evidence.

Increase Protested

PARIS (REUTER) — Thousands of Parisians marched in pouring rain to protest planned increases in subway and eus fares and congestion of suburban transportation. The demonstration, called by left-wing parties and labor unions, also was called to back a claim that employers pay for the transportation of their workers to and from work.

New Tory Backs Stanfield Policy

A former Liberal MP lashed out at his former leader, Prime Minister Trudeau, Wednesday and offered full support for the policies of Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield.

Perry Ryan, member of Parliament for Toronto-Spadina, left the Liberal party last December to sit as an independent. In September he joined the Progressive Conservatives.

He spoke Wednesday to the Esquimalt-Saanich and Victoria PC Association, and he devoted most of his speech to criticism of the Trudeau government, which he called the "awkward squad."

Since leaving the Liberals he has adopted Tory views on national issues. For example:

He thinks Canada's recognition of the People's Republic of Red China was a bad move;

He's opposed to changes in the drug laws;

He's against changes in parliamentary procedure designed to speed up debate;

And he thinks the white paper on tax reform will retard the country's development.

He was asked at a press conference Wednesday if he thinks the Tories have much chance of winning the next federal election in view of strong support for the Trudeau government during the Quebec crisis.

"Temporarily Mr. Trudeau may have made some yards, especially in Quebec," Ryan said.

"But I think in the long run the Progressive Conservative party will be glad it did not have to make the decision to bring in the War Measures Act."

He said Trudeau acted with courage in dealing with the FLQ, but insisted there was no need to invole the WMA.

"In the States they've had assassinations of presidents, Martin Luther King, Bobby Kennedy, but they've never had to bring in anything like the War Measures Act."

Study Sought on Septic Disposal Issue

The Capital Regional District board will be asked to undertake a feasibility study of the disposal of septic tank effluent.

The move came after long debate by the district's public works committee Wednesday, which ended with a deletion from a motion of words that sanitary sewer systems not be used.

Opponents of the first motion argued that all alternatives should be looked at, while supporters said district engineer Bill Gerry has recommended against the new Macaulay Point system being used for septic tank effluent.

In a report, Gerry said septic tank effluent picked up by pumping and trucking companies is highly offensive sludge also containing inorganic materials such as gravel and sand.

In addition, the same companies pick up for disposal other types of effluent such as industrial wastes and fuel oils.

If these kinds of materials were to be dumped into the Macaulay Point system, due to go into service early next year, there is "very little doubt" that immediate treatment would be required.

The present provincial permit for Macaulay Point allows raw sewage disposal more than a mile out to sea, on a trial basis to see if treatment is necessary.

In addition, if industrial wastes or hydrocarbons were put into the system "they could literally wipe out the plant (biologic) activity and render it useless for a number of weeks."

The more practical approach, he said, is to set aside under controlled authority, isolated areas where holding lagoons are built and operated for the sole purpose of retaining and disposing of septic tank effluent.

A Langford resident, Robert Scafe, 2009 Millstream, plans to apply for a provincial permit for using land for this purpose which now is being watched by the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

Satellite Complex Confirmed

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Construction of an approximately $4 million transmitting and receiving satellite communications complex likely will be under way at Lake Cowichan by late summer.

The station will have a 97-foot-high semi-steerable antenna and a 2,000-square-foot building to house the equipment and operators, a Telesat Canada official said here today.

It will be the main station in B.C. and serve as the western anchor of a national network of up to 35 ground stations, most of them small and unmanned.

One or two remote substations will be built in central or northern B.C., depending on the proposals of tenders for the national contract to be opened Jan. 5. Remote stations are expected to cost about $200,000.

DOZEN ON STAFF

Roughly one-third of Telesat Canada's $90 million program will go into the ground facilities, which are to have a 60 per cent Canadian construction and equipment content.

The Lake Cowichan complex will be manned on a round-the-clock basis by a staff of about a dozen operators. It will provide two-way transmission to other Canadian points in varying configurations, such as two telecasts and up to 80,000 telephone and broadband messages simultaneously.

Besides tranmissions, it will have a limited tracking capacity so it can serve as a partial back-up to the network's main control station near Toronto.

Located alongside the existing Canadian Overseas Telecommunications Corporation installation in Lake Cowichan, it also will provide an interconnection with the International Network of Communications Satellites.

IN TIME FOR LAUNCH

It will be completed in time for the late 1972 launch of Anik 1, the $31 million satellite to be built for Telesat by the Hughes Aircraft Corporation of California with at least 20 per cent content.

The communications department is about to sign a contract with NASA to launch in the mid-1970s an experimental satellite to be built by the federal communications research centre near here.

It will be a high-powered prototype for the second Anik generation of satellites, operating on a super high-frequency range of 12 million cycles per second, which offers the promise of sending TV signals to simpler ground stations costing only about $10,000 for unmanned remotes.

Ottawa 'Cool' To Joint Brief On Harbor Future

Lack of Details Hit By Federal Officials

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — It probably will be several months before Victoria and Esquimalt learn whether their harbor commission ship will come in.

A joint brief by the two councils to the department of transport — virtually repeating one presented last summer by a special delegation sent here — is under lukewarm study, it was indicated today.

The Victoria-Esquimalt briefs have been criticized here as being "too thin and insufficiently detailed" with a particularly large gap left in the presentation because the tangled problem of the Ogden Point grain elevator was not dealt with.

The department currently is engaged in a total review of the National Harbors Board to produce a new policy on harbor jurisdiction and apparently is not deeply impressed with the Victoria-Esquimalt bid for separate and immediate consideration.

There also is a hint that their bid may be considered immature as well as premature.

'Wait for New Guidelines'

"Their request is being considered now but it will likely be suggested to the city that they await the formulation of new national guidelines," a senior DOT official told the Times.

"It will only be a matter of months, not years."

The new policy criteria for transferring some harbor jurisdictions to local commissions is expected early in the new year but, the official indicated, it won't necessarily mean that the Victoria-Esquimalt bid will be granted automatically.

"We are considering numerous suggestions from various cities on what the guidelines should be but once the criteria are set up, each request for a commission will have to be considered on its own merits," he said.

The briefs stressed that lumber shipments through the outer wharves have doubled in the past decade and could be doubled again to about 400 million board feet within three years if a vigorous harbor promotion was undertaken by a local commission.

It added that it would be easy to expand storage area and facilities to stockpile 1 billion board feet to help lumber shipments and further initiatives should be able to add a pulp and paper shipping capacity.

These developments could augment current revenues of about $450,000 realized by the CNR from the lumber trade if a local harbor commission took over but, apparently, the brief makes no mention of taking on the grain elevator operation which currently loses more than $300,000 a year.

"It can't be a very realistic brief if it implies that it should take the profitable operation away from the CNR and leave the losing one in the railway's hands," one critic observed.

"Yet this whole question,

Island A-Power In Works?

B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum was host at a luncheon meeting in Victoria today which included Dr. Lorne Gray, president of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., and representatives from the Duncan - Cowichan Bay area.

The combination led Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife to speculate this morning that Hydro may be contemplating some move on a suggested nuclear generator on Cowichan Bay.

Quaife said he was "in the dark" on the purpose of the luncheon but hoped Hydro would be announcing something about the proposed $150 million nuclear generator for lower Vancouver Island which was in the news earlier this year.

The meeting was not open to reporters and Dr. Shrum could not be reached for comment.

One source suggested the meeting was called because Dr. Gray was passing through Vancouver en route home from Australia and Shrum saw it as an opportunity for him to meet local officials.

AID SLOW FOR TIDAL WAVE SURVIVORS

Death Estimates Soar

By HOWARD WHITTEN

DACCA (Reuter) — Six days after a tidal wave which local reports say may have killed two million people in East Pakistan, blankets today were stripped from prisoners to warm survivors facing death from exposure, hunger, thirst and disease.

Officials in the devastated islands in the Bay of Bengal, still covered in ankle-deep mud and debris, started going through jails gathering up blankets as an urgent relief measure.

Word of the action by harassed officials came here amid unofficial estimates of a final death toll from last Friday's cyclone and tidal wave of around two million, ninety per cent of the whole population of the area.

The official's desperate attempt to at least keep survivors warm pointed up the major problem of getting aid to the isolated low-lying disaster zone in the Ganges Estuary in East Pakistan.

SUPPLIES PILING UP

Relief supplies from abroad were steadily piling up in Dacca but there was only one helicopter in East Pakistan available to transfer them.

News reports here now predict astronomical death tolls. The English-language daily Dawn forecast 1.5 million, the Bengali daily Songgram had a figure of two million.

Two leading Bengali newspaper chiefs said they were convinced a concentrated effort was being made to inflate the figures so the government will postpone elections due in December. Campaigning has been muted but not halted by the disaster.

Relief Commissioner A. M. Anisuzzaman told a news conference Wednesday that many thousands of survivors are still in grave danger because they have not received help. He said there are still "very inaccessible places with which we have not yet had contact."

Anisuzzaman said the official death toll now stands at 39,800, with 3,136 missing, but this "may shoot up like

Jordanian Troops, Guerrillas Battle

By United Press International

Palestinian guerrillas and Jordanian army troops battled for 13 hours in Amman today with mortars, machine guns and grenades before an uneasy peace was restored at nightfall. The guerrillas said they also shelled an Israeli border settlement with mortars for 90 minutes.

Jordan's tough new prime minister, Wasfi Tel, met face to face later with the Palestinian guerrilla leaders following the heaviest fighting since the September civil war. Arab truce officials arranged the meeting to prevent another outbreak that could lead to another civil war.

It was the first time Tel and Palestinian chiefs had met in direct talks. The guerrillas have attacked him for his loyalty to King Hussein, and Palestinian Al Fatah chief Yasser Arafat was reported to have said in an African interview he would not return home as long as Tel is premier.

Committee Backs Tax Review Board

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons justice committee today approved a bill to create a tax review board.

An amendment by Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) requires that the government must go to parliament to remove any board member "for cause." The bill presented to the committee would have allowed the cabinet alone to make the removal.

The Lambert amendment was carried unanimously after Justice Minister John Turner agreed to it.

The review board would replace the present tax appeal board. Proceedings before the review board would be less formal than those required now before the appeal board, which conducts itself under the rules set for courts.

Taxpayers would appear before the review board without legal counsel. Most cases before the appeal board are argued by counsel.

The bill now goes back to the Commons for final consideration.

Indochina Clash Sparked by Nixon

WASHINGTON (Reuter)—A move by President Nixon linking a bid for substantial military and economic aid to Cambodia with weapons assistance for Israel threatened today to erupt into a new political clash over Indochina.

The president, in submitting his aid requests Wednesday, asked Congress to vote on the entire package and not piecemeal.

Observers saw this as Nixon's attempt to help the controversial Cambodian aid program by binding it to the politically-acceptable program for Israel.

The way Nixon submitted the request to Congress for $1,035 million for a number of countries in the Middle East and Asia also worried Israeli diplomats who believe it could slow down the flow of arms to their government.

The aid package included a request for $500 million to finance credit sales of aircraft and other weapons to Israel and $155 million in military and economic aid to Cambodia.

Congressional sources said pro-Israeli congressmen appeared to have the votes and were prepared to use them to break up the package and vote funds for Israel if a lengthy debate on Cambodia appeared likely.

Blunt Davis Talk Scolds Americans

By STEPHEN SCOTT

NEW YORK (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis bluntly told Americans Wednesday:

"We (Canada) would have preferred to have a smaller neighbor with a smaller appetite for raw materials and a smaller output of industrial and other pollutants along and across our international boundary line."

Davis was making a call at a Canadian-American symposium for the United States to keep its pollution on its own side of the border.

He called for recycling of pollutants and asked when the U.S. is going to catch up with Canadian anti-pollution programs.

Davis's tough talk was made at the 12th annual seminar on Canadian-American relations sponsored by the University of Windsor, Ont., and Columbia University here.

In other talks:

—Allistair Gillespie, parliamentary secretary to the president of the Canadian Treasury Board, said it is a "shocking fact of life" that 95 per cent of all text books used in Canada are or shortly will be published by firms controlled by non-Canadians.

—David Lewis, deputy leader of the New Democratic Party, said every aspect of Canadian life—economic, cultural and recreational—is invaded by foreign domination.

'WE NEED FACTS ON GOVERNMENT DECISIONS'

Stanfield Seeks Probe of Quebec Terrorism

TORONTO (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield called Wednesday night for an independent commission of inquiry headed by a justice of the Supreme Court of Canada to investigate Quebec terrorism and federal promulgation of the War Measures Act.

Mr. Stanfield, speaking to the Lawyers' Club at Osgoode Hall, said the commission's report should be made public to make Canadians aware of the facts before any permanent legislation is introduced to deal with political terrorism by the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

"We owe it to ourselves as Canadians to get the facts on the extent of the terrorism and the effectiveness of the measures that have been taken against it," he said.

"We need facts on the reasons for the decisions made by the government and on the treatment of those who have been detained."

Mr. Stanfield said his party will vote for passage of the proposed Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970, to replace regulations now in effect under the War Measures Act.

Although he was "by no means happy" with the proposed legislation, he would support it because it is temporary and would avoid some of the harsher provisions of the War Measures Act with "its truly awesome powers."

But he urged calm deliberation before approving permanent legislation that would impinge on the rights of individuals.

"It is vital to know what the pattern is before we make up our minds as to the future between social order and traditional liberty that defies our political democracy."

The Opposition leader said the rule of law has been "temporarily and partially suspended."

"Before we decide definitely what we should do in the present and in the future, I think we have to be satisfied in our minds to what extent that suspension was justified because if we don't we are liable to make hasty and bad decisions today and tomorrow on what may be a questionable precedent."

Mr. Stanfield said he was worried about the apparent lack of knowledge and preparation by police even though the terrorists had been active for seven years.

He said the police in Quebec had apprehended a few hundred people and most of them subsequently had been released with no charges being laid.

"Either the police work was woefully inadequate, even under the huge powers the authorities had at their disposal under the Act, or the power and influence of the FLQ at the time had been considerably exaggerated.

"And so, the basic question remains: Was the imposition of the War Measures Act necessary?

"I admit at once that I do not have the answer. What worries me is that I am not sure that the government has one either."

Shadow Mischief

Moonlighting Policy Asked From Ottawa

Victoria Labor Council will write Defence Minister Donald Macdonald asking for clarification on the government's policy toward Canadian Forces personnel holding down an extra job.

The move came at a Labor Council meeting Wednesday as a result of comments made Saturday by Rear-Admiral Richard Leir who said there is nothing wrong with servicemen moonlighting to earn extra income.

Most of the union delegates did not support Leir's remarks, but there was some criticism of moonlighting by members of local trade unions.

"I don't see where we should come out against the servicemen before we clean up our unions," said Art Berry of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

Boilermakers business agent Neil Hindle did not agree. He said organized labor is quite explicit in opposing moonlighting, even if it is condoned by certain individuals.

"A rearadmiral has made a statement which citizens in this town have interpreted as government policy," Hindle said. "So we should ask the government for clarification."

"I think Rear-Admiral Leir will have to make a retraction of his remarks."

Copies of the letter to the defence minister will be sent to Prime Minister Trudeau, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and New Democratic Party leader Tom Douglas.

The Times contacted the admiral's office today but the admiral had no statement to make at this time.

at Cowichan Bay produced an outcry last spring.

Ecologists argued the plant's cooling system would involve discharging huge volumes of hot water into the bay, raising the bay's water temperature and harming marine life. There was also concern over the possibility of pollution from radioactive material.

COOL TO IDEA

Premier Bennett in statements last June indicated a coolness to the idea of nuclear generator on Vancouver Island and a concern for the pollution threat it might pose.

He said the Hydro proposal for a generating station with nuclear power near Duncan hadn't been abandoned but it had some great drawbacks, to be avoided if possible.

Last spring the cabinet instructed the B.C. Energy Board to determine the best use of public and private energy sources in the province up to 1985 but the terms of reference for the study made no mention of nuclear power.

Since then Bennett has described his long-range view of Vancouver Island as a pollution-free haven, free of heavy industrial development.

which has to be dealt with, has not even been mentioned and there's more than one person here wondering how such an unbusinesslike brief could be submitted."

Another criticism expressed was the apparent assumption that the government would hand over free to a civic commission assets which, based on capitalization of revenue potential, would be worth at least $15 million.

The harbor commission promoters also appear to have created an additional problem for themselves by a cavalier treatment of local MPs.

In asking for help to present the first brief, delivered by former Esquimalt Reeve Ray Bryant and City Solicitor T. P. O'Grady, both David Groos (L—Victoria) and David Anderson (L—Esquimalt-Saanich) were told to make appointments but stay out of the meetings themselves.

"Well that hardly seemed hospitable but we did so", Anderson commented recently. "But even worse, neither we nor the ratepayers who paid for that presentation, have been told what happened at those meetings with federal officials."

He said he was disturbed by the unfolding indications that the drive for a harbor commission is intended more to assist commercial shipping interests than give local control of the waterfront so that beautification, citizen and tourist interests could be promoted.

Anderson said he was willing to be a go-between with the department for the civic authorities but personally could not support any commission proposal which was not firmly tied in with the area's regional planning. Groos, attending a NATO Conference in Europe, was not available for comment.

Parents Oppose Stop-Gap Centre

The Oak Bay Recreation Commission Wednesday abandoned its proposal for a $200,000 stop-gap sports centre at Henderson Park and instead urged council to build a full-scale recreation complex to serve all age groups in Oak Bay.

The decision was reached after a group of citizens, most of them parents of small children, attended the commission's regular meeting to oppose the building of a minicentre.

One person said, "It's been six years since the referendum for a recreation centre was turned down and in that time the number of young people who have moved into Oak Bay is enormous."

Another said, "At this time we need a recreation centre, period . . . and we should go to the taxpayers for the whole lot."

Council had proposed building a centre, containing an ice rink, swumming pool, meeting rooms and other facilities, using the proceeds of the sale of the Victoria Riding Academy site —minimum of $1.3 million to defray capital costs.

Failure of a competition designed to sell the property has dictated the postponement of such a complex.

The group attending Wednesday's meeting insisted that building an interim centre that would not fit into the major complex would be a waste of money.

GROUP PRAISED

Council delegate Ald. Brian Smith warned: "If you put it to the electorate as an expensive package, it may go down and you'll be put back several years." He suggested that time should be given to see if the riding academy could be sold in the near future.

Chairman Krull Symones commended the group for appearing at the meeting after hearing about proposed plans for the substitute centre at Henderson Park.

"I hope that you will remain an action group and keep in touch with us."

Smith will present the commission's findings at Monday's council meeting.

Many of those attending Wednesday's meeting plan to attend to discuss what steps might be taken regarding recreation facilities in the municipality.

anything." The government announced several days ago an official figure of 55,000 dead and other unofficial estimates range from 300,000 to 650,000.

RELIEF WORK LAGGING

The relief operation is lagging badly because of the absence of Pakistani Air Force helicopters.

The Pakistani Air Force has some helicopters, but most are in West Pakistan and would have to cross 1,000 miles of India. During the news conference Anisuzzaman refused to answer questions about the failure of the military to provide more aircraft.

Other relief officials said there had been a delay in the arrival of U.S. helicopters because the Pakistani government tried to specify that its pilots fly them. When the United States refused, the Pakistanis backed down.

Two American helicopters were due today from Nepal. Four others expected tonight will not be ready to fly again before Saturday. Britain also is sending two helicopters.

Otherwise, aircraft now available consists of a military C-130 Hercules freighter, which was to start drops today; one military helicopter which had to be grounded for maintenance after 14 hours aloft; one short-takeoff-and-landing plane, and the only seaplane in East Pakistan.

AREAS STILL FLOODED

The air is the only feasible avenue for delivery of supplies to many of the stricken areas of the Bay of Bengal coast and the islands at the mouth of the Ganges River because all normal transport facilities were swept away by the winds and waves. Helicopters are particularly needed because many sections are still flooded, and drops from fixed-wing planes probably would miss the dry spots and be lost in the water.

Thirteen shallow army boats are also being sent by Britain from Singapore. Each will be able to take 15 passengers.

Three West German planes landed 39½ tons of supplies Wednesday, while two Iranian air freighters brought tents, blankets and medical supplies. A medical team arrived from Kuwait.

Reports from the area still speak of bodies and carcasses strewn all over the place, bloated after days in the water and tropical heat and giving off a stench.

The rotting bodies and carcasses have endangered water supplies and raised the spectre of a widescale outbreak of such diseases as cholera and typhoid.

A number of cholera cases were reported earlier this week on Hatia, one of the islands worst hit by the tidal wave. Unconfirmed reports say cholera has also broken out on three other islands.

Construction Talks Set This Week

VANCOUVER (CP) — Contract talks between construction industry negotiators and about 5,000 members of the Laborers' Union and the Heat and Frost Insulators' Union are expected to start again later this week, Ray Haynes, secretary of the British Columbia Federation of Labor, said Wednesday.

"There seems to be some slight glimmer of hope," he said following a construction inter-union meeting held by the federation and the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council.

"Some meetings are being lined up for both unions. As long as they are talking there is some hope," he said.

Talks broke off Monday following a heated meeting attended by Construction Labor Relations Association negotiators, Heat and Frost and Laborers' Union negotiators, plus top officers of both the trades council and the federation.

Crash Victim Named

RCMP have released the name of a North Saanich woman killed Wednesday morning in a Sidney crash.

She was Mrs. Phyllis Margaret Kask, 10185 West Saanich Road. Driver of the other car was Mrs. Lacone Landie, 3950 Carey Road.

PLANNERS TO STUDY BICYCLE PATH SYSTEM

The planning department of the Capital Regional District will study a report by the Youth Commission of Oak Bay recommending bicycle paths in the area.

This was agreed to Wednesday by the planning committee of the district.

Mayor Frances Elford told committee members she hopes consideration will be given "with ultimate approval" to the recommendations.

The youth commission report recommended a network of bicycle paths linking downtown Victoria with the university, out Lochside Drive to Swartz Bay and out Interurban Road with links to Thetis Lake Park and Elk Lake.

It said many Victoria roads are hazardous to bicyclists who are "plagued by thieves and insulted by bullying motorists. It is not uncommon for cyclists to be forced off the road or into ditches by disrespectful motorists."

According to an American agency, there should be nearly 100 miles of bicycle paths on southern Vancouver Island but all that is offered is "a host of No Bicycling signs."

IT'S TOO MUCH FOR 'B.C.'S ECONOMIC CRISIS'

Poor Humbly Ask Queen to Stay Home

The Victoria Low Income Group Wednesday asked Queen Elizabeth to postpone the Royal Family's centennial visit to British Columbia in 1971.

•

In a registered letter to the Queen, group president Walter Olszewski asked for the postponement until "such time as the province finds itself in a more favorable financial position."

The letter states in part:

"Along with our premier, W. A. C. Bennett, we are gravely concerned about the unemployment situation in British Columbia (and Canada) and the cost to the economy. Unemployed in Canada is the highest it has ever been since the Depression.

"Because of this, our provincial welfare minister, Philip A. Gaglardi, is concerned over the shocking increase in welfare costs and is doing all in his power to cut costs and get recipients off welfare.

"As a poor people's organization we naturally share his concern and realize that the Royal Family's entertainment may cost this government close to a quarter of a million dollars.

"It is our contention that the money saved from the entertainment costs of Her Majesty's visit could go towards easing the suffering of the poor. As the Queen of the Commonwealth and a mother who has raised children, we are sure that you will be deeply sympathetic to our appeal on behalf of the poor of this province during the present economic crisis."

The letter also states that civil service hiring restrictions and freezes on school and hospital construction demonstrate the economic crisis and the government's attempt to cut costs.

Olszewski said he does not think the Queen will ever see his letter or postpone the Royal Family's visit. He said he sent the letter to dramatize the plight of the province's poor.

Deputy provincial secretary L. J. Wallace said costs of the royal visit will be shared by the provincial and federal governments.

Because the itinerary has yet to be drawn up, he said, it is impossible to estimate the cost. But he said Olszewski's $250,000 figure should be considerably higher than the actual cost.

Big Area Bought For Park At Sooke

By ROGER STONEBANKS

The Capital Regional District today purchased 1,704 acres for a regional park at East Sooke for $520,000.

The acquisition is more than all the regional park purchases put together in the last four years.

In size, the new park is 11 times bigger than Beacon Hill Park in Victoria.

The East Sooke park lies south of Sooke Basin, east of Sooke Harbor and west of Becher Bay. It has two miles of coastline.

Regional district planner Tony Roberts said the provincial government is holding in park reserve an adjoining area on either side of the new park and the acquisition will link them.

"Altogether, we will have 3,000 acres of reserved land and the acquisition, almost four miles of waterfront," he said.

The land was purchased from Grouse Nest Resort, but does not include the resort itself which is further away. The regional district put down $175,000 and will pay $175,000 Dec. 1, 1971, and $170,000 Dec. 1, 1972. One-third of the cost will come from the provincial government via the regional parks legislation aid.

'Most Sensational Thing'

Regional district chairman, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, in formally announcing the acquisition, said it is "by far the most dramatic and sensational thing the Capital Regional District has done to date.

"In one purchase we have more than doubled our park holding and, far more important than that, have obtained for the people what could be the last few miles of wilderness waterfront on the southern end of Vancouver Island.

"I would be remiss if I did not congratulate the two regional district officials involved in working out the details of the purchase, A. H. (Tony) Roberts, planning director, and R. W. Long, executive director.

"The negotiations were complicated and at times difficult and I am more than happy that Mr. Long was able to bring them to a successful conclusion before he leaves the region for other fields. (Long is leaving the district for a new job with the Municipal Finance Authority of B.C.)

"Our regional parks acquisition program has been a tremendous success since its inception four years ago, but this is the greatest triumph of all."

The regional district, before the East Sooke purchase, had acquired 1,433 acres in various locations for $731,000. Biggest of these was Elk-Beaver Lake, 960 acres, formerly owned by Victoria city.

Bays, Beaches, Even Mountain

The district's parks program is financed by one-half mill annual contributions from participating municipalities and electoral areas plus the one-third provincial grant.

The East Sooke park features rocky, sloping land, bays, small beaches and open dry landscape. Although the coast is in places steep and rough, it is not so rugged that a good trail could not be cut which would provide water and viewpoint access, said Roberts.

The park has wild life and flora of special interest and is less than an hour's drive from Victoria. It includes Mount Maguire, 900 feet high.

The district's five-year park acquisition program ends next year and the regional board will have to decide:

1. Whether the district continues to just acquire land for the future;
2. Whether to continue a modified acquisition program while shifting part of its half-mill budget to development;
3. Whether to halt the acquisition program for a couple of years and use the half-mill money for a crash development program

Resignation Submitted By Math Head at Uvic

The head of the University of Victoria mathematics department submitted his resignation last week, it was learned today.

Dr. Sudhish G. Ghurye became head of the department July 1.

"I can say this, my resignation has not yet been accepted," he said today, but declined to comment on the reasons for his decision.

Ghurye had not heard of a petition signed by a majority of mathematics faculty members which reportedly called on Uvic president Dr. Bruce Partridge not to accept the resignation.

'Can't Possibly Be That Many Grievances'

Victoria council's finance committee today showed little sympathy to requests for establishment of a rental grievance board and referred the matter to Intermunicipal Committee.

The committee had asked for a report from city manager Dennis Young but Young declined any definite recommendations.

Ald. Ove Witt said creation of a grievance board under the enabling laws of the province seems like "a lot of money for a few grievances."

He asked if there were any complaints from people "outside of this mouthy guy here," referring to Brian Jewitt, president of the Capital Region Tenants' Association.

Ald. Percy Frampton said "there can't possibly be that many" grievances that such a board is required.

AMPLE AREA

Ald. Tom Christie suggested turning the matter over to the Intermunicipal Committee because the tenants' association obviously took in a larger area than Victoria.

Young told the committee the city solicitor has pointed out there is ample recourse for grievances through the courts under B.C. landlord and tenant legislation.

But Young offered the example that the cost of recovering half a month's rent through the courts would amount to more than the recovery.

"It is frequently a costly procedure to haggle over half a month's rent," he said.

HIGH RENTS

City assessor Alf Joyce told the committee that most complaints his office receives from tenants are over allegedly too high rents. There are also complaints that people are forced out of apartments when they are suddenly given 30 days' notice, "but there's nothing we can do about it."

Young's report said Vancouver's year-old grievance board office receives about 50 complaints a day.

Decision to refer the question of a grievance board to the Intermunicipal Committee did not cancel plans for a tenant demonstration at city hall.

The demonstration was to have occurred at 3 p.m. today by members of the Capital Region Tenants' Association.

MAYOR 'EXTREMELY ENTHUSIASTIC'

Low-Rent Schemes Soon Open

Two low-rental housing schemes in Saanich are nearing completion.

An 81-suite senior citizens apartment, at Hampton and Seaton opposite Hampton Park in the Tillicum district, is expected to be finished next month.

A 20-unit family housing scheme, comprising five quadruplexes on Scotia Street in the Cloverdale area, should be ready in January.

It has taken just over four years since Ald. Edith Gunning, then chairman of the health and welfare committee and now chairman of the municipal housing committee, provided the initial impetus for the municipally-initiated housing plans.

Both projects are financed by the federal and provincial governments.

The senior citizens apartment has drawn praise for its non-institutional appearance, in stark contrast to the usual box-like apartments in Greater Victoria.

"I am extremely enthusiastic," said Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis.

The two-storey lumber and stucco building, being built by Dawson Developments Ltd. of Vancouver for $633,785, has the appearance of townhouses with its shape and conscious attempt to not to provide a solid-wall view.

The site area is 1½ acres and is within a block or two of a lawn bowling club and the Saanich Senior Citizens Activity Centre.

The original architecture was created by Bernard Lam of the provincial public works department, working with F. B. Simpson, after Saanich council rejected three proposals by builders in 1969 because they were box-like buildings.

The building will provide 14 one-bedroom suites and 67 bachelor suites with a lounge, games room, social room, four laundry rooms, a nurse's room and four storage rooms.

Construction started last July. The land was made available by Saanich for $26,600.

Over at Scotia Street, contractor Frank Krieger is building 20 three-bedroom family units in five quadruplexes. The design is a variation of the townhouse scheme, with two floors and stucco and wood shingle on the outside.

Krieger said the unit price is $15,600, putting the total cost at $313,000.

Completion of the quadruplexes will bring to a close the Saanich family housing scheme, which started off as a unique dispersed project in which single-family houses were bought in different areas and rented to low-income families.

This ran into cost problems with a price peg of $14,000. It was possible to purchase only 15 houses.

Mrs. Gunning said much credit for the quadruplex development goes to the Victoria Home Builders' Association which ran a design competition.

She said rents have not been fixed for the senior citizens accommodation but she thought it would be in the $55 to $60 a month range.

The family housing would have rent scaled to income, from one-quarter to one-third, in much the same way as the Rose-Blanshard housing in Victoria.

Occupants will be chosen on the basis of need and date of application, she said.

Responsibility for the management and operation of both housing projects is that of the B.C. Housing Management Commission.

Six Injured In Car Crash

A spectacular crash at the intersection of Cook and Yates at 12:47 a.m. today sent six people to St. Joseph's Hospital and caused a total of $2,000 damage to two cars.

Michael Lee, 20, of 534½ Pandora, was driving north on Cook and Robert McAvoy, 31, of 587 Forward in Colwood, was driving west on Yates when the collision occurred.

In satisfactory condition at St. Joseph's is Clifton Mak, 22, of 2596 Wesley Place, with severe cuts to his face and head.

Treated and released after the crash were Chester Chew, 18, face and knee cuts; Jim Lee Duo Shen, 19, hand and face cuts; Robbie Ping Song Chen, 20, arm and leg injuries. All were from 2596 Wesley Place.

The two drivers were also injured, McAvoy with face and eye cuts, Lee with a broken collar bone and head injuries.

Ice Arena Vote Decided

The unorganized areas of Colwood, Langford and Metchosin will vote separately but simultaneously Dec. 12 on an ice arena referendum.

The move follows a decision by J. D. Baird, inspector of municipalities at the municipal affairs department, who said he is not prepared to approve establishment of Langford, Colwood and Metchosin as a specified area for this purpose.

Under a specified area, the vote would be totalled and 60 per cent over-all would be necessary for passage. Under the new move, 60 per cent approval is needed in each of the three areas.

This means the vote will be on the same basis as the referendum in which the old Colwood racetrack was bought for a local park.

In that vote, Metchosin failed to register 60 per cent and Langford and Colwood went ahead on their own. Indications this time are that if any one area votes no, the whole measure will fail.

Directors of the Capital Regional District gave approval to the necessary bylaw Wednesday. Charges for the arena are a responsibility of the affected areas only.

The bylaw states that the arena must not cost more than $750,000 and borrowing must not be at an interest rate greater than 9 per cent.

Arthur Mayse . . .

LAST APRIL, I REported to you on a group of mothers whose common denominator is one of the strangest, saddest problems known to medicine. Each has an autistic child whom she and her husband hope to save from the fate that society routinely imposes on children so afflicted.

This is to be lumped with the retarded or the emotionally disturbed, and so deprived of the highly-specialized treatment their condition demands.

By way of a recap, autism is a turning-off by the child who enters life inadequately equipped to channel the stimuli of his senses. He escapes this intolerable bombardment by retreating inward, and resists every attempt to bring him out of his never-never world.

But what nature denied him, specialized training and teaching can in large measure supply.

The mothers, guided by Victoria psychiatrist Dr. Phillip Ney, were doing their best to bring their autistic children out of their never-never land. Something else was needed however: a special class for the school-age autistic in which the slow, patient, task of restoration could continue.

The next chapter was one of progress and of hope.

The parents concerned believed their chances of obtaining help for their children would be better if they set up an organization. With the help of a lawyer who was quick to volunteer his services, they formed Victoria Society for Autistic Children . . . Canada's first.

The mothers who had been meeting weekly with Dr. Ney at Eric Martin Institute were joined by others. Today, membership stands at 18.

A few weeks ago, Canada's first training centre for autistic children opened at Queen Alexandra Solarium.

It was, and is, little more than a beginning; a pilot project freighted with hope and functioning on much less than a shoestring.

Queen Alexandra Solarium provides a teaching area, rent-free, on a temporary basis.

Four autistic children — all the project can handle at the moment — are delivered and called for each school day.

A teacher has been serving without pay. She's being trained by Ney in the special techniques and methods required of those who would get through to the autistic. Other volunteers in training assist her.

But the key-word here is temporary. Unless this class can be brought into the public education system where it belongs, it is going to become a lost cause.

A permanent classroom is needed.

In spite of her will to help, the teacher cannot and shouldn't be expected to serve without salary.

Nor can the class function indefinitely without equipment designed to meet the needs of the autistic child.

The Society for Autistic Children is all too aware of these facts. It has no regular funds outside membership fees which represent no more than a drop in the bucket.

It has sought help from Greater Victoria School Board. The board had none to offer.

The Society appealed to the Community Chest, and received a sympathetic hearing. But the Red Feather budget had been made up for this year.

Clubs and organizations approached wished the project well, but are committed to other undertakings.

That is how matters stand today.

Our British Columbia education system provides for the retarded child. There are schools and classrooms. For the emotionally disturbed, the same. But for the autistic child, who is neither one nor the other, no provision whatever.

Apart from the four children in the pilot project, this city's school-age autistics are variously distributed in classrooms and institutions set up to cope with all problems save theirs. Their number is not large; an educated guess sets it at about 14.

Their tragedy is that they aren't receiving the handling which would recover most of them at least to the point where they'd eventually fit into standard school classes.

I think these children should have their chance. I think you should be aware that unless one public school classroom, one teacher's salary and a little equipment is provided from your school taxes, it's probable that they will remain condemned for life to the autist's shadow-world.

And if you feel that no child who can be saved should be so cut off, you may share my anger over a situation that cries out for remedy.

Satellite Complex Confirmed

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Construction of an approximately $4 million transmitting and receiving satellite communications complex likely will be under way at Lake Cowichan by late summer.

The station will have a 97-foot-high semi-steerable antenna and a 2,000-square-foot building to house the equipment and operators, a Telesat Canada official said here today.

It will be the main station in B.C. and serve as the western anchor of a national network of up to 35 ground stations, most of them small and unmanned.

One or two remote substations will be built in central or northern B.C., depending on the proposals of tenders for the national contract to be opened Jan. 5. Remote stations are expected to cost about $200,000.

DOZEN ON STAFF

Roughly one-third of Telesat Canada's $90 million program will go into the ground facilities, which are to have a 60 per cent Canadian construction and equipment content.

The Lake Cowichan complex will be manned on a round-the-clock basis by a staff of about a dozen operators. It will provide two-way transmission to other Canadian points in varying configurations, such as two telecasts and up to 80,000 telephone and broadband messages simultaneously.

Besides tranmissions, it will have a limited tracking capacity so it can serve as a partial back-up to the network's main control station near Toronto.

Located alongside the existing Canadian Overseas Telecommunications Corporation installation in Lake Cowichan, it also will provide an interconnection with the International Network of Communications Satellites.

IN TIME FOR LAUNCH

It will be completed in time for the late 1972 launch of Anik 1, the $31 million satellite to be built for Telesat by the Hughes Aircraft Corporation of California with at least 20 per cent content.

The communications department is about to sign a contract with NASA to launch in the mid-1970s an experimental satellite to be built by the federal communications research centre near here.

It will be a high-powered prototype for the second Anik generation of satellites, operating on a super high-frequency range of 12 million cycles per second, which offers the promise of sending TV signals to simpler ground stations costing only about $10,000 for unmanned remotes.

At least 30 persons were killed, hundreds more were injured and thousands were flooded out of their homes in the Filipino capital of 3,000,000 citizens. AID SLOW FOR TIDAL WAVE SURVIVORS

Death Estimates Soar

By HOWARD WHITTEN

DACCA (Reuter) — Six days after a tidal wave which local reports say may have killed two million people in East Pakistan, blankets today were stripped from prisoners to warm survivors facing death from exposure, hunger, thirst and disease.

Officials in the devastated islands in the Bay of Bengal, still covered in ankle-deep mud and debris, started going through jails gathering up blankets as an urgent relief measure.

Word of the action by harassed officials came here amid unofficial estimates of a final death toll from last Friday's cyclone and tidal wave of around two million, ninety per cent of the whole population of the area.

The officials' desperate attempt to at least keep survivors warm pointed up the major problem of getting aid to the isolated low-lying disaster zone in the Ganges Estuary in East Pakistan.

SUPPLIES PILING UP

Relief supplies from abroad were steadily piling up in Dacca but there was only one helicopter in East Pakistan available to transfer them.

News reports here now predict astronomical death tolls. The English-language daily Dawn forecast 1.5 million, the Bengali daily Songgram had a figure of two million.

Two leading Bengali newspaper chiefs said they were convinced a concentrated effort was being made to inflate the figures so the government will postpone elections due in December. Campaigning has been muted but not halted by the disaster.

Relief Commissioner A. M. Anisuzzaman told a news conference Wednesday that many thousands of survivors are still in grave danger because they have not received help. He said there are still "very inaccessible places with which we have not yet had contact."

Anisuzzaman said the official death toll now stands at 39,800, with 3,136 missing, but this "may shoot up like

Jordanian Troops, Guerrillas Battle

By United Press International

Palestinian guerrillas and Jordanian army troops battled for 13 hours in Amman today with mortars, machine guns and grenades before an uneasy peace was restored at nightfall. The guerrillas said they also shelled an Israeli border settlement with mortars for 90 minutes.

Jordan's tough new prime minister, Wasfi Tel, met face to face later with the Palestinian guerrilla leaders following the heaviest fighting since the September civil war. Arab truce officials arranged the meeting to prevent another outbreak that could lead to another civil war.

It was the first time Tel and Palestinian chiefs had met in direct talks. The guerrillas have attacked him for his loyalty to King Hussein, and Palestinian Al Fatah chief Yasser Arafat was reported to have said in an African interview he would not return home as long as Tel is premier.

Ottawa 'Cool' To Joint Brief On Harbor Future

Lack of Details Hit By Federal Officials

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — It probably will be several months before Victoria and Esquimalt learn whether their harbor commission ship will come in.

A joint brief by the two councils to the department of transport — virtually repeating one presented last summer by a special delegation sent here — is under lukewarm study, it was indicated today.

The Victoria-Esquimalt briefs have been criticized here as being "too thin and insufficiently detailed" with a particularly large gap left in the presentation because the tangled problem of the Ogden Point grain elevator was not dealt with.

The department currently is engaged in a total review of the National Harbors Board to produce a new policy on harbor jurisdiction and apparently is not deeply impressed with the Victoria-Esquimalt bid for separate and immediate consideration.

There also is a hint that their bid may be considered immature as well as premature.

'Wait for New Guidelines'

"Their request is being considered now but it will likely be suggested to the city that they await the formulation of new national guidelines," a senior DOT official told the Times.

"It will only be a matter of months, not years."

The new policy criteria for transferring some harbor jurisdictions to local commissions are expected early in the new year but, the official indicated, it won't necessarily mean that the Victoria-Esquimalt bid will be granted automatically.

"We are considering numerous suggestions from various cities on what the guidelines should be but once the criteria are set up, each request for a commission will have to be considered on its own merits," he said.

The briefs stressed that lumber shipments through the outer wharves have doubled in the past decade and could be doubled again to about 400 million board feet within three years if a vigorous harbor promotion was undertaken by a local commission.

It added that it would be easy to expand storage area and facilities to stockpile 1 billion board feet to help lumber shipments and further initiatives should be able to add a pulp and paper shipping capacity.

These developments could augment current revenues of about $450,000 realized by the CNR from the lumber trade if a local harbor commission took over but, apparently, the brief makes no mention of taking on the grain elevator operation which currently loses more than $300,000 a year.

"It can't be a very realistic brief if it implies that it should take the profitable operation away from the CNR and leave the losing one in the railway's hands," one critic observed.

"Yet this whole question,

B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum was host at a luncheon meeting in Victoria today which included Dr. Lorne Gray, president of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., and representatives from the Duncan - Cowichan Bay area.

The combination led Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife to speculate this morning that Hydro may be contemplating some move on a suggested nuclear generator on Cowichan Bay.

Quaife said he was "in the dark" on the purpose of the luncheon but hoped Hydro would be announcing something about the proposed $150 million nuclear generator for lower Vancouver Island which was in the news earlier this year.

The meeting was not open to reporters and Shrum could not be reached for comment.

One source suggested the meeting was called because Gray was passing through Vancouver en route home from Australia and Shrum saw it as an opportunity for him to meet local officials.

Committee Backs Tax Review Board

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons justice committee today approved a bill to create a tax review board.

An amendment by Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) requires that the government must go to parliament to remove any board member "for cause." The bill presented to the committee would have allowed the cabinet alone to make the removal.

The Lambert amendment was carried unanimously after Justice Minister John Turner agreed to it.

The review board would replace the present tax appeal board. Proceedings before the review board would be less formal than those required now before the appeal board, which conducts itself under the rules set for courts.

Taxpayers would appear before the review board without legal counsel. Most cases before the appeal board are argued by counsel.

The bill now goes back to the Commons for final consideration.

Loffmark Hopeful On Hospital Land

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark may persuade the Sisters of St. Ann to sell about two acres of their land alongside St. Joseph's Hospital.

But if he does, it will have to be for a proven need, likely a 150-bed unit for extended care or chronic patients.

Sister Kathleen Moroney, the order's provincial superior, reiterated today the sisters' stand taken a week ago: they will not sell all their 7.1 acres alongside the hospital, and their high school will continue.

At the same time she repeated the sisters' willingness to negotiate on part of the land if there is a proven need for it to expand the hospital, which they founded and now are in the process of turning over to a public society.

Loffmark said today he is "very optimistic" that the sale of land by the sisters can be "revived," but declined to disclose what new terms may be involved.

He said he had just sent a letter to the solicitor for the sisters and that it was written following conversations with the solicitor.

"I've never felt more optimistic than now . . ." he said.

Blunt Davis Talk Scolds Americans

By STEPHEN SCOTT

NEW YORK (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis bluntly told Americans Wednesday:

"We (Canada) would have preferred to have a smaller neighbor with a smaller appetite for raw materials and a smaller output of industrial and other pollutants along and across our international boundary line."

Davis was making a call at a Canadian-American symposium for the United States to keep its pollution on its own side of the border.

He called for recycling of pollutants and asked when the U.S. is going to catch up with Canadian anti-pollution programs.

Davis's tough talk was made at the 12th annual seminar on Canadian-American relations sponsored by the University of Windsor, Ont., and Columbia University here.

In other talks:

—Allistair Gillespie, parliamentary secretary to the president of the Canadian Treasury Board, said it is a "shocking fact of life" that 95 per cent of all text books used in Canada are or shortly will be published by firms controlled by non-Canadians.

—David Lewis, deputy leader of the New Democratic Party, said every aspect of Canadian life—economic, cultural and recreational—is invaded by foreign domination.

'WE NEED FACTS ON GOVERNMENT DECISIONS'

Stanfield Seeks Quebec Terrorism Probe

TORONTO (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield called Wednesday night for an independent commission of inquiry headed by a justice of the Supreme Court of Canada to investigate Quebec terrorism and federal promulgation of the War Measures Act.

Mr. Stanfield, speaking to the Lawyers' Club at Osgoode Hall, said the commission's report should be made public to make Canadians aware of the facts before any permanent legislation is introduced to deal with political terrorism by the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

"We owe it to ourselves as Canadians to get the facts on the extent of the terrorism and the effectiveness of the measures that have been taken against it," he said.

"We need facts on the reasons for the decisions made by the government and on the treatment of those who have been detained."

Mr. Stanfield said his party will vote for passage of the proposed Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970, to replace regulations now in effect under the War Measures Act.

Although he was "by no means happy" with the proposed legislation, he would support it because it is temporary and would avoid some of the harsher provisions of the War Measures Act with "its truly awesome powers."

But he urged calm deliberation before approving permanent legislation that would impinge on the rights of individuals.

"It is vital to know what the pattern is before we make up our minds as to the future between social order and traditional liberty that defies our political democracy."

The Opposition leader said the rule of law has been "temporarily and partially suspended."

"Before we decide definitely what we should do in the present and in the future, I think we have to be satisfied in our minds to what extent that suspension was justified because if we don't we are liable to make hasty and bad decisions today and tomorrow on what may be a questionable precedent."

Mr. Stanfield said he was worried about the apparent lack of knowledge and preparation by police even though the terrorists had been active for seven years.

He said the police in Quebec had apprehended a few hundred people and most of them subsequently had been released with no charges being laid.

"Either the police work was woefully inadequate, even under the huge powers the authorities had at their disposal under the Act, or the power and influence of the FLQ at the time had been considerably exaggerated.

"And so, the basic question remains: Was the imposition of the War Measures Act necessary?

"I admit at once that I do not have the answer. What worries me is that I am not sure that the government has one either."

The Goo of Fellini's Unconscious: It's Becoming a Bore

By PETER McNELLY

When Fellini's Satyricon ended, someone in the row behind us said, "If you ever talk me into going to another movie like this I'm going to kick you in the head."

Whether that statement typifies Victoria's response to genius is impossible to know. However, Satyricon clearly flopped here.

No wonder. It is a bizarre film, perhaps impenetrably personal. The flamboyant subterranean vision of an image-drunk director possessed by his dreams.

I didn't like the movie. But that's no reason to discard it like a scenic postcard from a travelling aunt.

Fellini has made several lovely, sad and subtle films. That Satyricon is so different from these is no reason to say the Italian master has disappeared in the goo of his unconscious.

Satyricon is a series of sketches on imaginatively reconstructed pagan Rome. Because Fellini uses the same characters in different roles, and because it is at first difficult to tell where one episode begins and another ends, the movie is confusing.

Satyricon is also confusing because Fellini never gives his audience time to become adjusted to the grotesque faces and behavior of his characters.

They jump into action without explanation, and we are left alone to start sorting out the meanings of each scene.

Satyricon is confusing for still other reasons. Nothing adds up. The ending is as arbitrary as the beginning, casually inconsequential.

The setting is unfamiliar, not because we cannot reconstruct a vision of ancient Rome — Charlton Heston fixed that for us — but because Fellini's vision is unique.

And the film is confusing because it seems, superficially at least, to assault conventional morality with impunity.

I think Fellini deliberately made a confusing film. I think he wanted to shock his audiences out of the Twentieth Century and into total submission to his imagery.

Only then, he has suggested in the quote which accompanied Satyricon's advertising, will we see what he offers with innocent eyes. Of course, it is too much to ask that everyone drop his ordinary moral code and ordinary expectations.

●

So Fellini simplified matters by shocking these into the background. To show us what? His attempt to escape a peculiar kind of terror.

Fellini's last two films, 8½ and Juliet of the Spirits, studied psychological and spiritual aridity against a background of sex and pleasure.

Fellini is haunted by a powerfully sensual soul, which, godless, seems to veer blindly toward extravagant gratification of any kind. He hates the Roman Catholic Church for its arrogance, cruelty and power over the body.

But having rejected the church, he cannot jettison the residues of fear it inspired. Fear of damnation, eternal suffering.

With Satyricon, he seems to have dropped his recent preoccupation with God, despair and sensuality and plunged deep into his unconscious desires.

How else to explain Satyricon's amorality, its total acceptance of anything that happens, its wild lust, its freakish beauty?

But Satyricon is not an allegory of contemporary decadence.

Fellini is challenging our conscious values and ideas of human dignity by refusing to judge the behavior of his characters.

On his own terms, Satyrcon suggests a life of absolute tolerance and absolute death. Though much of the film is mocking, the laughter is directed more at life's foolishness than at fools.

The main character, Encolpius, is a wanderer who gets nowhere and discovers nothing. Life in Satyricon is short, meaningless and sensual. Only a Christian, it seems, could find it disgusting.

But disgusting it is. If he only intended a simple portrait of paganism, Fellini would not have distorted so much. He asks us to see with innocent eyes, then mocks our naivete with ugliness.

Unable to accept paganism's licence, Fellini ruins its face. He cannot escape the claws of God.

The result is a nihilistic statement demeaning man. Perhaps Italian audiences will find Fellini's conspicous Godlessness more sympathetic to their own experiences with the church.

I am beginning to find it boring.

Spirit Not So Blithe

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Noel Coward's play, Blithe Spirit, is one of those long-term fail-safe comedies that bloom periodically. They're usually a flash-in-the-pan like Charley's Aunt or Harvey, or cream of a big crop like Neil Simons' The Odd Couple.

Certainly Coward never wrote wittier lines, dreamed up a more laughable situation nor delineated a more memorable character than his medium, Madam Arcati.

The Bastion Theatre production currently at McPherson Playhouse proves the indestructibility of some of these things, for the audiences are laughing as heartily as ever at lines and situation created 25 years ago.

And this despite the fact that Director Edwin Stephenson's production is not well conceived.

In general terms, as seen Wednesday night, it lacks the light, buoyant touch, the air of elegance, the crispness of a sparkling tempo.

As a matter of fact, I feel that the set is to blame for a lot of the problems.

I cannot escape the conviction that at least some of the cast and direction might have been far more effective against a different set.

What we had was garish color in a solid middle class 1930s stuffiness. Try being a blithe spirit in that environment and diesover what it means to be earth-bound.

There also appeared to be a total lack of co-ordination between costume department and set design. How otherwise could Pat Barlow have been put into a long-blindingly-blue velvet skirt that focused one's vision and hampered her performance throughout the first act.

Pat Barlow, and to a slightly lesser extent, Ann Purdon, are capable actresses who could easily have been excellent. Miss Barlow has vitality, the power of conviction and of getting well inside the skin of her character.

But the director allowed her to use too much of the top range of her voice and apparently had failed to notice that when the two actresses were on stage together they shared exactly the same tonal level and rhythm.

What I really find it hard to forgive however, is the burlesque made of that wonderful character, Madam Arcati.

The medium is kooky — quaint — bizarre. But not ridiculous.

Hilary Young's Arcati is a parody. The costuming initiates it and her unrelated gesticulation, her obviously phoney walk, poses, blurted articulation are good for laughs but not for a well developed from-within-out characterization — and not for Coward.

6,000 FLQ Leads Checked by Police

MONTREAL (CP) — Maurice St. Pierre, director of Quebec Provincial Police, said Wednesday that some 6,000 leads have had to be checked out so far in the search for the abductors of James (Jasper) Cross and the abductors and murderers of Pierre Laporte.

Mr. Cross, a 49-year-old British trade commissioner, was abducted from his home Oct. 5 by the Front de Liberation du Quebec terrorists. Mr. Laporte, former Quebec labor minister was kidnapped five days later by the FLQ and his body was discovered in the trunk of a car Oct. 18.

Mr. St. Pierre denied that information was being withheld from the RCMP, outlining how the workload in the kidnapping investigation is being handled.

"When the work to be done is within Montreal, Montreal handles it. When it's not in Montreal, we take it over.

"This is the understanding . . . it's very plain."

Asked the RCMP's role, Mr. St. Pierre said:

"They are working with us on both cases. If we need their help, they come in. It all depends on what it is."

He said he did not know of any communications gap among the Montreal, Quebec and RCMP forces.

Meanwhile, the Gazette says Mr. Cross may have been held for a while in the apartment where accused terrorist Bernard Lortie was arrested Nov. 6 and where three other kidnap suspects hid in a false wall to successfully avoid capture.

An unnamed police officer is quoted as saying the hidden compartment in an apartment closet was "big enough to hold more than three persons."

History Society Backs Save-the-Birds Effort

The Victoria Natural History Society Wednesday supported efforts by the Fish and Game Wildlife Branch to preserve habitats for wild birds.

In a brief presented to the Capital Regional District's planning committee, the society added that it does not condone hunting on the Saanich Peninsula.

This possibility has been raised by studies now under way. Present municipal regulations on the peninsula prohibit discharge of firearms.

"The society said the number of birds quoted in a recent report are incorrect. An estimate of 1 million ducks is "altogether impossible," it said.

"In spite of these strictures, we support and welcome the basic endeavor of the branch to secure habitat preservation," the society said.

"We believe, however, that in such a densely-populated area as the Saanich Peninsula this might be achieved more satisfactorily if areas were set aside for breeding and wintering waterfowl rather than their shooting.

"If hunting is nevertheless to be permitted, our society, while not condoning hunting, would urge that it be permitted in certain restricted and well-marked areas only."

It said that one of the "most severe difficulties" is that with notable exceptions "many hunters have a very poor knowledge of bird identification and there could easily be irreparable damage done to the populations of some of the uncommon species."

Condominium Plan Eyed

A group of Victoria's senior citizens plans to build and buy apartments in an 11-unit condominium on Jackson Street if city council approves necessary zoning changes.

Architect Kaj Pederson designed the project, to be considered by the Victoria advisory planning commission today.

Saanich Silver Threads member Winnifred Nielsen said planning has been under way since March.

"It's the answer for older people in the moderate income bracket who cannot or do not wish to remain in the family home," she said.

Plans call for eight two-bedroom suites and three one-bedroom suites. Each will have its own fireplace, laundry facilities and sun deck.

Apartments will be soundproofed. They will be located next door to a park in the middle of a single-family dwelling area.

Those involved in the project will either buy their apartments outright, or finance them at monthly payments of $104.
